Handbook men are said to visit the Chicago jail to take bets on the races from the prisoners. This ought to be stopped. The lawyers need the money.

Russia's announcement that she means to get out of Manchuria is as good in its way as England's familiar pleasantry about evacuating Egypt.

A clothing clerk defeated a man with the title of "major" in the race for mayor of Hartford, Conn. Has Hartford, too, become tired of the heroes?

A Kentuckian shot at a man and crippled a blooded colt the other day. This will be sure to start another lasting feud if the owner of the colt is a Kentuckian.

Mr. Wanamaker may have been rather effusive with the kaiser, but the story that he worked off a pack of his business cards on him is probably a canard.

San Francisco has one saloon for every twenty-two adult members of its population. They must have to work overtime to keep some of the saloons going there.

Russia has backed down from a number of its claims as to Manchuria, but it was careful to make so many that it could concede over half and still save all it wanted.

On advance statistics from all parts of the country the esteemed New York Sun bases the prediction that there will be a great revival in bicycling this season. Well! Well! Well!

King Leopold butted through the socialist mob by letting his automobile go ahead at full speed. No crowned head should venture forth without his automobile after this.

Bishop Fowler says there is no life so conducive to laziness as the ministry. Still, most of the ministers seem to overcome the tired feeling sufficiently to write books between times.

Twenty miles an hour is the limit of speed for automobiles on country roads in New York. The Astors and Vanderbilts cmplain tnat this is getting back to the days of the stage coach.

When William Tillman and McLaurin meet they glare fiercely at each other and pass on. In this matter they assert their personal courage without sacrificing their senatorial dignity.

The announcement that Mr. Steel King Schwab has "gone into copper" is somewhat puzzling. The reading world had previously supposed that being swathed in purple and gold he would be content with what he wore.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

PALACES BUILT FOR IOWANS.

Members of Family of Artemus Lamb Erect Them on Bluffs.

Clinton, April 18.—Three of the members of the family of the late Artemus Lamb of this city, Dwight L. Lamb, a son, and Martin Gates and R. B. McCoy, sons-in-law, have purchased fifty acres of land on the bluffs just west of the city, which are being made into the most beautiful private grounds stantly at work on the grounds and will be employed until the snow flies. Hills are being cut down, low places along the Mississippi river and on which will be erected three palatial residences. Since the first of March a force of fifty men have been confilled up, macadamized roads are being built and other improvements made. The foundations of two of the houses have been completed and work on the third will be commenced at once. The Gates residence will be of Spanish architecture, while the McCoy building will be old English design, and the third of Colonial style. The site is a commanding one, 135 feet above the Mississippi river and overlooking the river for miles in each direction. It will be a year before the buildings are ready for occupancy..

SEMI-ANNUAL VISITATION.

Des Moines, April 17.—The state board of control, accompanied by State Architect Liebbe has left the city for the semi-annual visitation of institutions in southeastern Iowa. The institutions at Davenport, Fort Madison, Mt. Pleasant, Clarinda, Glenwood and Council Bluffs will be visited. One of the most important features of the inspection will be the decision of the board with regard to the building improvements at these institutions which are considered indespensable.

It is the intention of the board to use only $14,000 of the appropriation as for the institutions available, during the present period for building improvements. This will cut out many of the needed buildings at the various institutions, and the decision of the board as to what are the indispensable improvements will be of interest. The members of the board will not return from their trip until next week.

The board of control has let a contract, amounting to $8,600 worth of furniture, including tables, dressers, chairs and other articles needed at Cherokee hospital.

STRIKE IS SERIOUS.

Shops of Entire Illinois Central System May Participate.

Waterloo, April 19.—The strike situation in the Illinois Central shops here is daily assuming a more serious phase. Business Agent Roderick, of the International Machinists union, has arrived and is endeavoring to adjust matters. He states the situation is more serious than he expected and unless the company settles the strike here the shops of the entire system may be called out. He is holding a conference with all organizations. The company has imported men to make light repairs and seems determined to fight it out. The unions have forced the local stores to quit furnishing goods to the company and they are shipping them in. A large force of special agents is guarding the Central property, although thus far the men have been quiet.

FORGER ARRESTED AT MARION.

Taken in Custody by Sheriff in First National Bank.

Cedar Rapids, April 17.—A stranger giving the name of L. A. Bryant applied at the First National bank of Marion for a loan of $1,000. He offered to give as security P. E. Hall, president of the street railway company of this city. P. T. Alexander of the bank filled out the note, but telephoned Hall, who replied that he did not know Bryant.

Later Bryant presented the note at the bank with what was purported to be the signature of Hall attached as endorser. Alexander excused himself for a moment and returned with Sheriff Evans, who placed the stranger under arrest.

A woman know as Ina Hubbard was also arrested later for complicity in the crime with Bryant.

REESE IS OUT FOR CONGRES.

President of Mine Workers, District No 13, Would Succeed Lacey.

Ottumwa, April 21.—John P. Reese, of Albia, president of district No. 13, United Mine Workers of America, is a receptive candidate for nomination to congress from the Sixth congressional district, to succeed Hon. John F. Lacey. Mr. Reese is being pushed for the place by politicians who foresee that they must nominate a man who can swing a large element outside of the party. Mr. Reese in an interview said that if it was agreeable to the United Mine Workers and to the officers of that organization, he would make the race, otherwise he would not consider it. There have been rumors of Reese's candidacy, but this is the first time that he has admitted that there is anything in it. Reese is widely known in labor circles.

Stabbing Affray at Corydon.

Corydon, April 17.—During a quarrel Joe Fitzgerald, a negro, stabbed ex-Marshall William Blagg. It is reported this morning that Blagg is in a serious condition. The knife penetrated the left side, making an ugly gash about two inches below point of heart, the left arm also being badly cut. Fitzgerald is out under $2,000 bond.

SIX HANGINGS IN PROSPECT.

Transcript of Evidence Now Before the Governor.

Des Moines, April 18.—Transcripts of the evidence in cases in which death penalties are imposed have been filed with the governor in the case of Richard Williams and Harry Hortman. There are six prisoners in Iowa now awaiting death by hanging, and transcripts must be filed with the governor in all cases. Of those filed, the hangings will be on succeeding days unless the governor interposes and this is regarded as extremely improbable, inasmuch as there have been so many aggravated crimes in Iowa in the past two years that an example is needed.

The Hortman case comes from Cherokee, where the prisoner killed his sweetheart, Florence Porter, November 30, 1901. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to be hanged March 12, 1903. The conviction of Richard Williams is for the murder of William Sharper in Mahaska county, December 8, 1901. The date for the execution is fixed at March 13, 1903. The first mentioned is at Anamosa and the other at Ft. Madison.

Appeals will likely be taken in all the cases of death penalties, though the papers in the case have not been perfected. The remaining four are Chester Taylor for the murder of Dr. Tailor at Newton; Lewis Brooks and Albert G. Phillips, the bank robbers who had two victims in Buena Visa county, and Lewis Busse, who has been sentenced in Butler county for the murder of his wife. The date fixed for the execution of the bank robbers comes first, December 18,1902.

TERMS OF ELKINS' RELEASE.

Governor Cummins Fixes Nature of Parole.

Des Moines, April 18.—The release of Wesley Elkins, who murdered his father and stepmother in Clayton county at the age of 11 years, will be made tomorrow. He will be let out of Anamosa prison Saturday and will be turned over to the care of Professor Harlan of Cornell college. Governor Cummins sent the parole away yesterday, mailing it to Professor Harlan personally. The latter had requested the privilege of delivering the parole to young Elkins with his own hands and in view of the large interest he has taken in the case, this was gratified.

Professor Harlan will take the young man to Mount Vernon, Linn county, at once, install him in his own home and send him to college. Elkins has been at Anamosa since January 14, 1890. He entered at the age of 11 and is now 23. Warden Hunter has notified the governor that he is ready to release Elkins and others recommended for parole at a moment's notice, and in transmitting the parole to Professor Harlan Governor Cummins named Saturday next as the date for the release.

The condition imposed by the assembly was that if at the end of ten years Elkins had lived up to the conditions of his parole in all respects he should be given a full pardon.

COST OF RENOVATING INDIANS.

Dr. Linn's Report Shows That It Required Over $6,200.

Des Moines, April 18.—Dr. A M. Linn of the state board of health has filed with Governor Cummins his financial report in reference to the recent renovation of the Tama Indian reservation. The report shows that upwards of $6,200 was required for the work. This includes the cost of new blankets, tepees and other property for the noble red man that had to be furnished to replace that destroyed to check the incursions of smallpox germs. It also includes the cost of the disinfectants used, such as formaldehyde gas and corrosive sublimate fluid with which the Indians and dogs were bathed. The appropriation for the purpose was $7,000. Dr. Linn accompanied his report with vouchers for all expenditures and steps will be taken by the governor at once to collect back the money expended from the federal government.

Dr. Linn is much pleased with the success of his efforts in renovating the reservation. He says the Tama Indian tribe is cleaner now than it ever was in its history.

BOOTY IN GRAIN SACKS.

Police of Davenport Secure Peoria Plunder.

Davenport, April 19.—The police secured all the booty of the robbers who went through three fine residences in Peoria Wednesday night. Articles had been placed in sacks and scattered through a car of shelled corn consigned from Peoria to the glucose works at Davenport. In the lot were four gold watches, five diamond rings, a diamond brooch, diamond pin and three unset diamonds, the whole valued at several thousand dollars. Two men taken from the same car at Rock Island by Officers Barney and McCabe overpowered the latter and escaped but one was recaptured later

Thrashing Worth $500.

Marshalltown, April 18.—A Marshall county jury has just fixed the price of a sound thrashing at $500. That was the verdict in the case of Frank Gambling vs. Hugh W. Hogue. The case grew out of an alleged assault made on Gambling at Mr. Hugue's home, following a disagreement over some money matters in a suit in a justice court. Hogue alleges that Gambling called him a liar and Hogue resented the imputation so vigorously that Gambling was badly used up. Hogue made no defense and the jury followed the judge's instructions in arriving at a verdict.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, April 19, 1902.

Several local grading and construction firms have been asked to bid on grading for a railroad from Des Moines westward, to parallel in large part, the Rock Island. No one seems to know whether it is the new Des Moines and Western, the Great Western, the Des Moines and Southern or some other company that proposes to build. But it appears that a majority feel that the Great Western is the real thing in this movement, though the Hubbells and others organized the Des Moines and Western company ostensibly to build west to Council Bluffs.

By a decision of the supreme court, Mrs. Louise Faivre of Sioux City, is given judgment against John Manderschied and John Arendorf, two saloonkeepers of the Woodbury county metropolis. Mrs. Faivre's husband was a habitual drunkard and she had served notice on the saloons not to sell him liquor. On a winter night, after spending the evening at the saloons of the two men named, Faivre started home and was later picked up, partially frozen. He was crippled permanently. Mrs. Faivre, a washerwoman, then brought suit against the two saloon men jointly for damages sustained by losing the support of her husband. After two trials in Sioux City a change of venue was taken to Monona county, where the trial was conducted before Judge Gaynor. A verdict and judgment for $6,000 was given in favor of the plaintiff and the supreme court affirmed the lower court's findings.

John Work, who was the socialist candidate for mayor, and who has brought suit to restrain the city from transferring the $50,000 from the water works fund to the water company for the purpose of constructing a water main, states that he may not consent to have the case come up for trial until next fall. The case will not come up regularly until September.

The state auditor's office has sent out bills to the various counties for the support fund due the state for the care of insane patients at Independence and Clarinda hospitals for the quarter ending March 31. The entire amounts foot up to about $27,000 for each of these institutions. Clinton county is charged with the largest bill for support at Independence, the amount being $3,003.20. Webster comes next with a bill of $2,131.20. The largest bill for support at the latter hospital is outstanding against Woodbury county, $2,100.40. The state is liable for the care of a number of patients at both hospitals, persons not claimed by the counties. At Independence the state's bill is $4,742.80 and at Clarinda $2,421.40.

A little sensation was stirred up in sporting circles when it was learned that in some unexplained way the bill appropriating $15,000 annually for the support of the fish and game department had been lost by the wayside in the closing hours of the general assembly. The result is that the game warden has a salary of $100 a month fixed by statute but no funds with which to carry out the laws the legislature made for him to enforce. The executive council may come to the assistance of the warden.

Under rather unusual circumstances, Adjutant General Byers of the Iowa National Guard, has mustered out of service at Oelwein, Company L, Forty-ninth regiment. The company was organized a little less than two years ago under promising circumstnaces, but it soon became apparent that the expected support from the people of the town was not forthcoming. There is no disguising the fact that the conditions were occasioned by the large number of railroad men, which class makes up the greater part of the population. Military organizations are not popular where such situations exist. General Byers, who has just returned from that city, stated that the citizens of Oelwein feared boycott from the railroad men if they allowed their boys to take part in the military organization or in any way recognized the company. This was particularly true of the merchants The general stated that he had tried to make it plain that the military companies were no foes of labor, but it was impossible, and that it finally became necessary to muster out the company on account of non-attendance at drills. Decorah and West Union are both anxious to have companies in the Forty-ninth and have made application for the place made vacant by the Oelwein company.

The state department of agriculture has just sent out advance copies of the premium list of the Iowa state fair for this year. Only a few hundred copies of the edition of 25,000 which has been ordered have been delivered by the printer, and these are being sent to the newspapers of the state. As fast as the remaining copies are delivered they will be sent out to others interested in the coming fair. Among those who will receive copies are the 600 county officers in the state, the secretaries of the local and district fair associations, all the exhibitors at the fair during the last two years, 1,200 bankers and several thousand farmers, many of whom are included under the head of exhibitors. It is also the intention to send a number of copies to the barbers of the state, it being the theory of Secretary Simpson of the board of agriculture that a barber shop is a good place from which to spread broadcast any advertising matter.

The baggage smasher now begins to get in his fine work.

HOUSE MEMBERS REVOLT

OVERRULED THE DECISION OF THE CHAIR.

Washington, April 19.—The democrats and the republican insurgents rode rough shod over the house leaders yesterday when the voting began on the Cuban reciprocity bill. They overthrew the ruling of the chair in committee of the whole on the question of the germaneness of an amendment to remove the differential from refined sugar during the existence of the reciprocity agreement provided for in the bill. The vote to overrule the decision of the chair, made by Mr. Sherman, of New York, was 171 to 130, republicans to the number of thirty-seven joining with a solid democratic vote to accomplish this result. Having won this preliminary victory, the amendment was adopted in committee, 164 to 111, and later in the house by a still larger majority, 199 to 105. On this occasion sixty-four republicans voted with the democrats for the amendment. The bill then was passed by an overwhelming majority, 247 to 52. An analysis of the vote shows that 124 republicans and 123 democrats voted for the amended bill and 42 republicans and 10 democrats against it. Mr. Grosvenor, of Ohio, was one of those who voted against the bill.

The voting on the bill was the culmination of a long struggle which began almost with the opening of this session of congress, and after two weeks of continuous debate, during which much bitterness was aroused. Today's debate was of an exceedingly lively character, the feature being echoes of Thursday night's democratic caucus. To that caucus the defeat of the republican leaders who sought to pass the bill without amendment is attributable. Previous to the holding of the caucus, the democrats were very divided, and the opposition of the republican beet sugar men showed signs of disintegrating. Today, when it became apparent that the democrats would act together, the beet sugar men decided at a meeting attended by thirty-two of them to take the bit in their teeth and overrule the chair. As soon as this combination was effected, the republican leaders realized that they would be defeated so far as the removal of the differential was concerned, and Mr. Payne, the republican leader, contented himself with warning his beet sugar colleagues that in removing the differential they were taking off a bit of protection placed in the Dingley bill especially for the benefit of the beet sugar producers.

The democrats attempted to follow up their advantage when the differential amendment was adopted by offering the Babcock bill and other amendments to reduce the Dingley schedules, but democrats did not press them vigorously. One of the surprises of the session was the attempt of Mr. Roberts, of Massachusetts, republican, to take the duty off hides. He offered two amendments and appealed once from the decision of the chair, but was voted down each time.

The bill as passed authorizes the president, as soon as may be after the establishment of an independent government in Cuba and enactment of said government of immigration, exclusion and contract labor laws as restrictive as those of the United States, to negotiate a reciprocity trade agreement with Cuba by which, in turn for equivalent concessions, the United States will grant a reduction of 20 per cent from the Dingley rates on goods coming into the United States from Cuba, such agreement to continue until December 1, 1903. During the existence of such agreement the duty on refined sugars and all sugars above number 16 Dutch standard is to be 1.825 cents per pound. The members of the Iowa delegation who voted for the Morris amendment, removing the sugar differential, were Conner, Cousins, Haugen, Hepburn, Hull, Lacey, Smith and Thomas. Hepburn voted against it.

REBELS WIN A VICTORY.

Government Forces at Bocas Del Toro Surrender.

Colon, Colombia, April 21.—The expedition under General Gomez, the military governor of Colon, which left here Friday on the government gunboat General Pinzon for Bocas Del Tora, was due at Bocas Del Toro at about 8 o'clock Saturday morning. The expedition comprised seven hundred men with four guns, one of them a long-range three-pounder.

A German steamer from Bocas which has just arrived brings news that the liberals effected a landing in open boats and barges near Bocas at 6 o'clock Thursday evening when fighting began. The liberal troops outnumbered the government force, which was forced to surrender the town at 11 o'clock yesterday morning. One hundred and fifty men on both sides were killed, but the government loss was insignificant as compared with that of the liberals.

It is believed here that the Pinzon is bombarding the town and will quickly dislodge the insurgents who are under command of General Buendia. Further news is anxiously awaited here and little surprise will be expressed if the recapture of Bocas is announced soon.

Damage Suit Is Settled.

Ottumwa, April 16.—The damage suit for three thousand dollars against T. J. Phillips, late democratic candidate for governor, vs. Editor Moore, for kicking the latter, was settled today on payment of costs.

STORYETTES

An extraordinary series of puns and verbal ambiguities is reported by a French teacher of languages to an Italian journal: M. Lamerre a espouse Mlle. Lepere: de ce mariage est ne un fils qui est devenu le maire de sa commune. Mcnsieur c'est le pere, madame c'est la mere, et les deux font la paire; le fils est le maire Lamerre: le pere, quoique pere, est reste Lamerre, mais la mere avant d'erre Lamerre, etait bein Lepere. Le pere est donc le pere sans etre Lepere, et la mere est Lamerre etant nee Lepere n'a jamais pu etra maire.

President Roosevelt is beginning to chafe under the burdens put upon him by the persistence of office seekers. A friend said to him recently: "You don't get much time for hunting now?" "No," said the president; "the fact is, I am a sort of gamekeeper now, watching the government preserves while nordes of poachers are trying to break in and bag the offices. Or maybe I am only a buffer," he added, a trifle wearily; "every day senators and congressmen send men to me whom they can't land in office, and whom they know I can't appoint, and I am expected to save the politicians the trouble of turning them down."

The wife of a well known liberal member of parliament recently advertised in the London Times for the return of a volume of a work on Napoleon, which had disappeared; borrower unknown. Whereupon a parodist imagined other notables pursuing this plan. For example, the military secretary advertises in view of the remount scandal: "Mr. Broderick would esteem it a favor if his copy of 'Points of the Horse,' which he cannot find, were at once returned to him, as he has urgent need for it." And the colonial secretary follows with: "Mr. Chamberlain would be much obliged by the return of his copy of the Bible, if Mr. Kruger has quite finished with it."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. # An American Nabob.

By ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

CHAPTER XVI (Continued.)

And then—he always stopped at this point, as though what further vengeance the gods of retaliation would inflict depended on circumstances, only that it was his full design she should feel the bitterness of death and desertion that had wrung his heart and turned it to stone.

Fedora was under some species of spell.

She even knew not herself what it meant.

This remarkable man interested her—he seemed to arouse some half slumbering memory that came as might a vague dream—a memory that must have been pleasant, for it had an intoxicating effect.

The strangeness of the sensation aroused her curiosity; she could not tell why she was drawn so irresistibly toward this black-bearded American nabob, who had set the gossips of London agog, whose name was on every lip, and of whom she had even heard the captain proudly mention more than once at the table as "my friend the Marquis." Nor did she make any strong effort at resistance—just as one is caught by a swift current and drawn on so rapidly that the senses grow confused.

What more natural than that she should ask him to call, either during her usual hour for receiving, or later when the captain might be at home to enjoy a cigar with him as they compared notes on adventurous travels in the jungles and forests of Africa and America.

The Marquis promised to take advantage of the first opportunity; then others came up and their tete-a-tete was broken.

CHAPTER XVII.

Spinning the Web.

Some weeks had passed.

All along the line the Marquis found himself in a condition to report progress.

Mazette had removed to cozy lodgings in a respectable neighborhood, and encouraged by the appreciation of this unknown but wealthy patron, she had set to work most diligently upon the task given her.

With nourishing food, and hope filling her heart, the future appeared rosy-hued, and she soon began to appear like the cheery Mazette of old.

More work followed—M. Duval sounded her praises aloud, and there were those who already thought it the thing to follow in the footsteps of the latest lion, so that Mazette's future seemed assured.

Then one day there was a knock at the door of her studio, for success had enabled her to have a workroom such as she had longed to possess, lo, these many years.

Upon opening the door the little miniature painter saw a tall, heavily-bearded gentleman, whose air was somewhat foreign.

She straightway began to tremble, under the conviction that this must be her illustrious patron to whom she owed so much; for, be it known, M. Duval had been artfully prevailed upon to give as elaborate a description of the noble Marquis as lay in his power.

When her visitor spoke his voice was deep and reassuring; and there seemed to be some rare quality about it that almost startled little Mazette, arousing ill-defined and hazy memories of the past which she could not whip into any concrete form, try as she might.

When the Marquis offered his hand at leaving she was a little confused by the warmth of his clasp and the eagerness with which he promised to drop in again and see how the work progressed.

"God bless the brave little woman—it does a man good to even bask in her presence. Here, at least, is no deception such as stalks abroad in society's circles—she had only good words for her fellow creatures. At least let me be grateful for the privilege of being able to secure her future. This holy desire for her good may in a measure offset the still fierce passion for revenge. At least it gives me joy, an experience I had never hoped to feel again."

His other plans were maturing.

Evidently the Marquis was in no hurry—neither is the satiated cat when she has caught a mouse that she cannot devour.

Livermore's losses at the gaming tables were not all—indeed, it seemed as though circumstances had taken a fiendish delight in combining to smite this son of fortune at a time when he could not find a means of resistance.

The several companies controlling South African mines in which Livermore had investments, and which had been paying good dividends, were bought up by some new combine, backed by unlimited capital, and there was a grave suspicion that the small shareholders were being frozen out in a way that was legitimate yet shockingly unfair.

And there were other losses. Really, the dougl[illegible] passing through a[illegible] promised to make [illegible] if long continued [illegible]

Twice the M[illegible] Fedora, and o[illegible] himself to fas[illegible] before done in[illegible] Affairs were i[illegible] Marquis could see the [illegible] outcome of his systematic [illegible] along the line, unless his [illegible] or something occurred [illegible] stern resolution by [illegible] bound himself.

A few more visits [illegible] complete the fascin[illegible] harassed by accum[illegible] made boorish by his [illegible] be readily assume[illegible] would be anything [illegible] companion these day[illegible] never having had a [illegible] each other, would drif[illegible] apart.

This would be his o[illegible] tunity—the glitter of his unlimited wealth, together with the strange hold he had upon Fedora, by reason of her old-time love, though she herself might not know the real cause—these two combined should tempt her to leave the falling fortunes of the captain and seek happiness with the man who controlled her will.

It was a fiendish revenge, and many times the marquis cursed himself for entertaining it; yet the memory of his dreadful sufferings drove him back again with renewed zeal to pick up the threads of fate where he had dropped them and go on with feverish eagerness.

It was only when he thought of Mazette that he winced and grew confused—not for worlds would he ever have her know what wicked thoughts struggled with his better nature, and usually gained the mastery.

One day the marquis, still pursuing the one object of his presence in London at this unfashionable season of the year, dropped in at the establishment of Captain Livermore, resolved to play his cards to advantage, since a crisis was near.

His quick eye noted signs of confusion, and he knew disaster had at last fallen upon the captain, who must seek a cheaper home—yes, evidently a move was contemplated—his sturdy blows were beginning to tell, and he should feel a glow of satisfaction in the region of his heart.

The occasion would be propitious for his master stroke—surely he should be able to win her consent—what had she to consider but a ruined home and a husband whom she had wedded while loving another?

He offered her unlimited wealth, beyond the dream of the human mind, love, and all the attractions the world can bestow.

Yes, she would yield—he knew how weak her nature was—had she not shown it when throwing him over for fortune's smiles?—she had no anchor such as the safeguard of a husband's love would throw around her—he felt assured of this as he did of anything in his whole life.

When the marquis entered the house it was with the confident air of one who has abundant faith to believe in the positive success awaiting him—not over-confidence such as loses battles, but the quiet assurance that springs from a thorough knowledge of the powers he controls.

It chanced, however, that there was one thing he had not counted on, a matter that might seem of small consequence, and yet which must burst upon him with appalling force.

As he sat and waited sounds of a commotion were heard, such as caused the marquis to start, turn deadly pale and tremble as he had never done when bodily danger menaced him—then through the open door came dashing two little tots, one a golden-haired angel of three, the other a sturdy, black-eyed English lad of four—across the floor they scampered, straight to where the American nabob sat gripping the sides of his chair, and with the assurance some children possess, forthwith climbed directly upon his knees and took possession.

At that moment the fort was nearer being carried by assault than since the day its steel buttressed walls had been first barricaded against the forces of sentiment and the holier passions that come from above; for up to this hour this stern man, bent upon righting his wrongs of the past, had never once suspected that Fedora was a mother, and the knowledge came upon him like a thunderbolt from a clear sky.

It would be almost impossible to adequately measure the surprise and consternation that overwhelmed the marquis as he sat there and felt the chubby arms of Fedora's little darlings about his neck.

It was wonderful what an influence this new and astounding element had upon him—he was quite disarmed—those chubby hands upon his face, the little cooing voice, as trusting eyes looked up [illegible] his own, exclaiming: "Dodo m[illegible] oo"—a man must have colder star[illegible] in his veins than the marquis to Me[illegible] e this and at the same moment [illegible] destruction to the little maiden's [illegible]nts.

[illegible] that short time he saw a great of J[illegible] such as had never dawned on whic[illegible] efore.

for fo[illegible] it might die out again, over-Salve [illegible]by the darkness of passion's boils. burn[illegible]e influence of his associa-scalds. skin[illegible]se innocents would have at J. L. Harr[illegible]ng upon his future.

Slight[illegible]ound them when she Warren[illegible]eatly she marveled at fancy her little darlings had taken for the mysterious marquis.

Of course, their nurse was summoned and they were banished from the scene; but the retreat was conducted with much reluctance, especially on the part of Miss Dorothy, who seemed to have conceived a great fancy for the marquis.

Thus, the visit that he had intended should be so dramatic, and lead to a crisis, was of an altogether different nature. And he came away without, by act or word, having advanced the desperate scheme which had so filled his mind on crossing that home portal.

It was not remorse—the time had not come for that; but while the kisses of that innocent little prattler were yet warm upon his cheek he could not strike the terrible blow that would possibly blight her mother's future happiness.

Not being in the humor to enjoy social intercourse with his fellows, he avoided those who would have sought his company, and spent the evening strolling along Oxford street and High Holborn, watching the crowds, smoking innumerable cigars and wrestling with his thoughts.

As the hour grew later he found himself quite a distance from his hotel, beyond St. Paul's, and even on the border of the Whitechapel district of unenviable fame as one of the most notorious slum districts of the modern Babylon.

It was a weary distance to his hotel, and the marquis naturally looked around for a cab.

Luck seemed to favor him, for the voice of an eager Jehu hailed from behind.

The four-wheeler was one of the night-hawk variety, much the worse for wear, but to a shipwrecked sailor any port in a storm is good enough; so the marquis, with a laugh, bundled himself inside and sang out his orders.

He might not have been so easy in his mind had he known that a couple of fellows swung themselves, one up with the driver on his seat, and the other behind the growler.

Hunting for the Colonel.

An army surgeon recently returned from service in the Philippines tells a new story, which is one of the best that has come from our new possessions. He says a soldier was serving in a regiment whose colonel was very much averse to leaving the comforts of a city and who had pull enough to get himself assigned to special duty in Manila, which had caused his absence from his regiment for several months. In the meantime a portion of that particular command got into a mix-up with some stray insurgents, and incidentally the soldier referred to had an eye shot out. He put in some time in the hospital, and when convalescent was turned loose for a walk. As he strolled down the street he met a friend, who, seeing the bandage which hid the cavity, asked him, "What happened to your eye?" The soldier's other eye twinkled, and with true "dougtboy" wit he replied: "I wore that eye out up-country looking for that blooming colonel of mine on the firing line."

Novel Eskimo Wrestling.

Next to gambling the Eskimo men like to wrestle. The usual way of doing this is a test of strength rather than skill. The wrestlers sit down on the floor, or in any convenient place, side by side, and face in opposite directions, say with right elbows touching. Then they lock arms and each strives to straighten out the other's arms.

The worst getting is that which hinders giving.

IMPURE BAKING POWDER SEIZED

The New York Board of Health Find It Contains Alum and Rock, Declare It Dangerous to Health and Dump It Into the River.

The New York papers report that the Health Department of that city has seized as dangerous to health nearly two tons of cheap mixtures sold for baking powder and dumped them into the offal scow to be destroyed. More of the powder was found in a Sixth ave. department store. The report of the analysis of the Health Department stated that it was "an alum baking powder" containing alum and pulverized rock.

The different Health Authorities seem to have different ways of repressing the sale of bad baking powders. In England they have prosecuted the grocers under the general law and broken up the traffic. In Missouri the sale of alum baking powder is actually prohibited by law. In New York they seize the unwholesome stuff and cast it into the river without any discussion. The latter way is certainly effective.

The alum baking powders are usually offered at a low price, ten to twenty cents a pound, or with some prize, as a temptation to the housewife.

Consumers can protect themselves by buying only high-grade baking powder of established name and reputation. Do not be tempted by the grocer to take something else as "just as good" or "our own brand," for the trials show that the grocer himself is often deceived by unscrupulous makers, and is selling an alum powder without knowing it.

There are several good powders on the market; let the housekeeper insist on having what she knows is right, and not be induced to risk the life of the family for an imaginary saving of a few cents.

"Is your husband a good provider?" asked a sympathetic visitor. "Indeed, he is, mum. He got me three new places to wash last week."

To the housewife who has not yet become acquainted with the new things of everyday use in the market and who is reasonably satisfied with the old, we would suggest that a trial of Defiance Cold Water Starch be made at once. Not alone because it is guaranteed by the manufacturers to be superior to any other brand, but because each 10c package contains 16 ozs., while all the other kinds contain but 12 ozs. It is safe to say that the lady who once uses Defiance Starch will use no other. Quality and quantity must win.

Man loves woman because she was made to love.

Customer—"This steak is the toughest thing I ever had here, waiter." Waiter (confidentially)—"Then you you ain't tried our roast chicken, sir."

"No man with any sense at all would approve of your actions," said the angry husband. "But, my dear," calmly inquired his better half, "how do you know what a man with any sense would do?"

George Washington was the great-grandson of the son of a Northampton-shire squire, who settled in Virginia in the seventeenth century. He was the eldest of several brothers by his father's second wife.

H. J. Jones, of Cincinnati, bought a violin a few years ago and gave it to his daughter. While it was being repaired recently he accidentally discovered it was an instrument he himself had made in 1848 as an experiment and sold it for $5.

A story is told of a man in Massachusetts who sold a scrubby farm for $12,000, although its value was not more than $1,000. "How did you do it?" a friend asked him. "Well," he replied, "I had $1,000 worth of farm and $11,000 worth of view."

A Postmaster's Discovery.

Lancaster, N. Y., April 21st.—Mr. John Remers, postmaster of this village, was taken with Diabetes four years ago. For two years he doctored with local physicians as well as several specialists from Buffalo, but got no better. Indeed he was gradually growing worse.

He stopped taking the doctors' medicine and commenced a treatment of Dodd's Kidney Pills. He used in all about ten boxes and is as strong and well to-day as ever he was.

He attributes his recovery to nothing but Dodd's Kidney Pills, and says:

"If I could only talk five minutes to every one who has Diabetes I am sure I could convince them that they needn't suffer a moment longer when Dodd's Kidney Pills are on sale in every drug store.

"I will cheerfully answer any letters from sick men or women, as I think every Diabetes sufferer should be told of Dodd's Kidney Pills, the remedy that saved my life."

When you have the devil under your heel don't be scared by his bellowing.

Superior quality and extra quantity must win. This is why Defiance Starch is taking the place of all others.

Shot In His Left Leg

For all kinds of sores, burns, bruises or other wounds DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is a sure cure. Skin diseases yield to it at once. Never fails in cases of piles. Cooling and healing. None genuine but DeWitt's. Beware of counterfeits. "I suffered for many years from a sore caused by a gun shot wound in my left leg," says A. S. Fuller, English, Ind. "It would not heal and gave me much trouble. I used all kinds of remedies to no purpose until I tried DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. A few boxes completely cured me." J. L. Harr.

Neglect Means Danger

Don't neglect biliousness and constipation. Your health will suffer permanently if you do. DeWitt's Little Early Risers cure such cases. M. B. Smith, Butternut, Mich., says: DeWitt's Little Early Risers are the most satisfactory pills I ever took. Never gripe or cause nausea." J L Harr

We are told that a pretty girl entered a drug store, not a thousand miles from Klemme, the other day to purchase a bath sponge. When the goodlooking clerk stepped up suddenly and inquired her wants, she got rattled and asked for a sponge bath. The clerk immediately fainted but has recovered.

TO THE FARMER AND HIS WIFE.

The TIMES has arranged with the Journal of Agriculture, St. Louis, Mo., so that subscribers may receive that valuable paper a whole year for 50 cents, which is just half of the regular price. It is generall conceded that the Journal of Agriculture is one of the finest and most influential farm and household papers in the United States, and that it holds a secure position among the leading lights of the agricultural world. It was established in 1866 (36 years ago) is published weekly and contains 16 large pages. Numbered among its contributors are men whose articles on agricultural matters are accepted as authority. Every issue contains valuable pointers on agriculture horticulture, poultry, live stock, dairy, bees, etc., besides fiction, poetry, humor and miscellaneous matter. Once a month a beautiful 16-page Magazine, with cover of special design, is issued by the Journal, which appeals especially to the ladies owing to the stories, fashion notes and other fine reading matter contained therein.

The special price of 50 cents hardly pays postage and is only made to introduce the Journal into the homes of our readers. All those who wish to take advantage of this offer will please send 50 cents (in stamps if desired) to the editor of the KLEMME TIMES, Klemme, Iowa, who will arrange at once for a year's subscription in their favor to the Journal of Agriculture. Mention this offer and write name and full address plainly.

Republican County Primaries

The Republican county primary election for the purpose of nominating a county auditor, county recorder, clerk of district court, county attorney and supervisor in dist. No. 2 and supervisor in dist. No. 3, will be held in the different townships and precincts in Hancock county, Iowa, on Saturday, May 31, 1902.

The names of all the candidates for the offices named, who have paid their assessments, will be placed on the ticket at a meeting to be held in Garner on May 17, 1902, at 11 o'clock a. m. under the direction of the chairman and secretary of the central committee.

The rules governing the primaries will be substantially the same as those previously adopted.

W. H. RAMSAY, JNO. A. SENNEFF,
Secretary. Chairman.

Reduced Rates to Twin Cities.

May 18, 19 and 20. Tickets will be good for return to May 29th. For all particulars enquire of Minneapolis & St. Louis R. R. agents.

A NEW BANK FOR KLEMME

Brick Building Will Be Erected on Corner Lot Now Occupied by H. E. Peitzke's Blacksmith Shop.

Klemme is to have another bank in the near future, the promoters being men of good sound financial standing. The lots on the corner where the blacksmith shop now stands have been purchased from H. E. Peitzke who will move his shop onto the lot just south of the town hall. The work will soon be commenced on the new building, which will be of brick. The exact size and specifications have not been decided, but we will give a full report as soon as we are able to get the information.

EVADING THE FACTS.

As will be remembered, a few weeks ago the Goodell Gimlet came out with a column article headed in black type "Smallpox in Klemme," in which the people of Klemme and vicinity were maliciously defamed and grossly misrepresented. Events have transpired since the publication of those lies, which establish beyond the shadow of a doubt that the Gimlet's article was printed, not merely as a matter of news, but with a view of injuring the interests of our town as much as it could in its weak way.

The TIMES in its issue of April 10, contained the following:

All the smallpox patients in Klemme have been released and no new cases have developed. * * Will the Garner Signal and Goodell Gimlet please note?

The Signal copied the item, but what does the Goodell man do? He pays no attention to it except to tax his limited vocabulary to the utmost in calling this writer naughty names and speculating on our personal appearance.

The Goodell wit has proven himself to be an adept at quibbling. Instead of publishing the fact of our getting rid of smallpox, as he published the fact of our having it, he is mum on the subject, and resorts to roasting (?) the editor of this paper just to be saying something. We do not expect to go into any further discussion of this subject. The Gimlet's refusal to acknowledge our request as above stated, proves conclusively that it's course in this matter has been one of spite work against Klemme.

Klemme is doing a good business every day of every week, and we are always glad to welcome our Goodell friends when they come to visit a good, live, hustling town.

Too Late For This Week

We have at hand a program for the Hancock County Teachers' Meeting to be held at Garner, May 3, 1902, which arrived too late for insertion this week. Watch for it next week.

CONGRESS.

Washington, April 15.—Senate.—The debate on the Chinese exclusion bill was practically concluded today, and voting on the bill and amendments will begin at 1 o'clock tomorrow. By general consent a vote was taken today on two important amendments offered by Fairbanks, of Indiana, striking out the definition as to Chinese students and teachers, and they were agreed to without division. These changes were made with a view to reconciling some of the opposition to the measure, which has been directed against the rigid restrictions on students and teachers, and the unnecessary inconvenience this would impose on the educated Chinese classes coming to this country. The debate was participated in by Senators Heitfeld, of Idano, Penrose, of Pennsylvania, and Turner, of Washington, in favor of the bill, and Senator Pritchard, of North Carolina, and Senator Spooner, of Wisconsin, in opposition.

House.—With the close of the Cuban reciprocity debate in the house today the leaders announced that all danger of the bill being weighted down with undesirable amendments was over and that they felt assured the bill would pass in the shape in which it came from the committee. As the bill in its present form is sure to command three-fourths of the vote of each side of the house, its passage was certain if it successfully passed the stage when amendments could be offered. The only cause of anxiety heretofore has been the possibility that enough republicans would join the democrats to overrule the chair and tack onto the bill an amendment to abolish the differential on refined sugar. All the energies of the leaders have been directed, therefore, to bringing pressure to bear on the recalcitrant republicans to induce them to refrain from aiding this plan, and this evening at the close of the session of the house it was announced that the entire republican delegations from Michigan and California, who constitute the head and front of the opposition, had agreed not to vote to override the ruling of the chair. The debate today was without particular interest.

Washington, April 16.—Senate.—The drastic Chinese exclusion bill originally framed by the senators and representatives from the Pacific states met defeat in the senate today, and in its place was substituted a measure offered by Platt, of Connecticut, extending the provisions of the present exclusion law and also applying that exclusion to all insular territory under the jurisdiction of the United States. The vote by which the substitute took the place of the original bill was, yeas 48, nays 33. Once the substitution had been made, all senators joined in its support, with the single exception of Hoar, the substitute being passed 76 to 1. The friends of the substitute showed their strength throughout the voting on amendments that preceded final action and succeeded in preventing any material change in its features. Some minor changes were made, admitting Chinese persons connected with national expositions and providing for certificates of identification of Chinese in our insular possession. Otherwise, however the substitute was adopted substantially in the form that Platt presented it. The senate, after disposing of the Chinese exclusion bill, made the Philippine civil government bill the unfinished business. The senate failed to substitute the enacting clause of the house bill for the senate measure, so that the bill now will go to the house as an original measure and, from a parliamentary standpoint, will have to be acted on and treated the same as though the house had not passed a Chinese exclusion bill already.

House.—The friends of the Cuban reciprocity bill won a substantial victory in the house today by carrying a motion to close general debate on Friday at 3 o'clock. The vote was 153 to 123. Thirty-three republicans voted against the motion, but this defection was offset by thirty-two democrats, who voted with the great body of the republicans for it. The strength of the republican opposition to the bill, judged by this vote, has decreased since the vote was taken on the motion to go into committee of the whole to consider the bill, when the vote stood 167 to 80. The debate today was featureless. The speakers were Roberts, of Massachusetts; Patterson, of Tennessee, and Cochran, of Missouri, for the bill, and Bartlett, of Georgia; Corliss, of Michigan; Broussard, of Louisiana; Bell, of Colorado, and H. C. Smith, of Michigan, against it.

Washington, April 17.—Senate.—For more than four hours today Morgan, of Alabama, chairman of the isthmian canal committee, addressed the senate on the subject of the Nicaraguan canal. He devoted the greater part of his speech to a consideration of the desirability and practicability of the two principal routes, Nicaragua and Panama. He strenuously favored the former, maintaining that in every possible respect it had many advantages over the Panama route. A parliamentary change in the situation of the Chinese exclusion bill was made just before adjournment, the measure passed by the senate yesterday being substituted for the house bill. This was done to expedite the bill in the house. The resolutions offered by Culberson, of Texas, directing the secretary of war to send to the senate a statement of moneys paid to the United States owing to the Philippine commission, and a statement of the amount of money expended for sending troops to the Philippines and for their maintenance, were agreed to.

House.—The opponents of the Cuban reciprocity bill occupied much of the time of the debate today, the feature being a vigorous speech by Cushman (rep., Wash.,) against the measure. Mr. Cushman arraigned the committee on rules and the house leaders in a breezy and at times sensational fashion. A portion of his criticism was in a semi-humorous vein, but some of it was decidedly caustic. DeArmond, one of the leading democrats of the house, delivered a forcible speech in favor of the tariff reduction on trust articles. The other speakers were Pierce of Tennessee, Douglass of New York, and Lacey of Iowa, for the bill, and Jenkins of Wisconsin, Gainer of West Virginia, Warner of Illinois, Gardiner of Michigan, Jones of Washington and Loud of California, against it. Loud declared that directly and indirectly Cuba already had cost the United States one thousand million dollars.

Washington, April 18.—Senate.—At today's session of the senate consideration was begun of the bill temporarily to provide a form of government for the Philippine islands. The measure was read and the committee amendments were agreed to tentatively, but no action on the bill was taken. Fifty-five private pension bills and a few other measures were passed.

Washington, April 19.—Senate.—Little business of national importance was transacted by the senate today. Numerous measures of minor character and nearly sixty private pension bills were passed. At 3 o'clock eulogies were pronounced upon the life and character of James H. Kyle, late a senator from South Dakota. Messrs. Gamble, Cockrell, Cullom, Morgan, Foraker, Nelson and Kittredge paid fitting tribute to his memory, after which, as a further mark of respect, the senate adjourned.

House—After the turbulent scene of yesterday, marking the passage of the revised Cuban reciprocity bill, the house settled down to routine business today. An opportunity was found, however, for the two elements in the recent struggle to give expression to their feelings. This occurred while the fortification appropriation bill was under discusssion. Grosvenor, of Ohio, one of the ways and means leaders, said that the amendment which opponents of the ways and means committee had engrafted upon the Payne bill not only wiped out the differential on sugar, but also did away with the countervailing duty of the Dingley law. Weeks, of Michigan, made a spirited rejoinder in behalf of those who opposed the ways and means committee. He frankly conceded that the motive of the opposition had been to kill the reciprocity bill. The fortification appropriation bill was passed and the conference report on the legislative appropriation bill was agreed to. Lacey's bill for the protection of game birds was passed.

COMBINE OF OCEAN LINES

TRANSATLANTIC TRANSPORTATION DEAL PUT THROUGH.

Company to Take Over the Leading Lines Will Be Capitalized at Upwards of $150,000,0000.

New York, April 21.—J. P. Morgan, who is now abroad, has prictically consummated a plan to combine all the leading transatlantic steamship lines. London dispatches to the Associated Press announcing the combination have been confirmed at the Morgan banking house.

The companies to be consolidated will, it is understood, include the American and Red Star line, Dominion line, Atlantic Transport line and the Leyland line. The two last named lines have been under Morgan control for some time. Probable additions to this list are the Cunard, Wilson and Holland-American companies, and it is understood that a "working agreement" will be reached with the other leading transatlantic companies, including the North German Lloyd, Hamburg-American, General Transatlantic (French), Allen and Anchor lines.

Mr. Morgan has given the matter much of his time since his arrival on the other side. In this country the more important details have been in the hands of Clement A. Griscom of the American line, while Charles Steele, Mr. Morgan's partner in this city, has had charge of the local preliminaries.

George W. Perkins of J. P. Morgan & Co., is authority for the statement that American interests will dominate the proposed amalgamation and declares that the result will prove not only a great triumph for Mr. Morgan, but will make the United States the real ruler of the merchant marine of the world. Mr. Perkins also says that the plan will be of greatest benefit to importers and exporters as well as to the great railway interests of this country. Its effect will be felt by shippers from Maine to California, Mr. Perkins says, and also will result in a better understanding between the commercial interests of this country and Germany.

"It is true," he added, "that Mr. Morgan will act as syndicate manager in this combination, just as he brought together and welded the various interests in the United States Steel corporation. The financial details have been completed to the extent that all the cash necessary for the deal has been subscribed. It is too soon to speak about the directorate, but it may be borne in mind that control of the company will be held here."

Boer Delegates Off to Confer.

IOWA WAR CLAIM.

May Be Reduced From $456,000 Down to $50,000.

Des Moines, April 21.—Concern is felt at the state house because the report of the Iowa civil war claim is delayed. It was expected that information would be received as to the amount which the government would refund to the state without a law suit in the court of claims before the legislature adjourned. The appropriation committees were disappointed in this respect. Now comes the information that possibly the claim will not amount to so large a sum as expected and that the claim of $456,000 may melt down into a $40,000 or $50,000 award.

A difficulty has arisen as to one of the items. It has been ascertained that the books of the treasurer of state show that the government has paid to the state of Iowa the sum of $1,062,453.62 on account of the civil war, the dates of payment ranging from July, 1861, to December, 1890. One of these items is for $384,274.28. It represents a direct war tax levied by the United States government and collected in Iowa and turned over to the state treasurer for disbursement on account of the government's expenses. If this shall be treated as a "refund" to the state the state cannot collect interest on it. This is the point in controversy. The total amount may be $200,000 on this point alone. It is said that there are others equally delicate of determination.

WESLEY ELKINS IS FREE.

Anamosa, April 21.—Wesley Elkins walked out of the penitentiary here a free man Saturday morning after an imprisonment of twelve years, three months and five days. He was met in Warden Hunter's office by Professor Harlan of Cornell college, Mt. Vernon, who drove him over to Mt. Vernon, going across country. Elkins will be kept by Professor and Mrs. Harlan at their home for several weeks until they become acquainted with him and he gets to know the world, of which he scarcely knows anything now. A conference of his friends will then be held to determine upon his future work and life, but he will not do anything toward working until late in the summer. This was the first time that Elkins has been outside the prison walls since he was first incarcerated twelve years ago at the age of 11. Only twice has he been beyond the inner guards. Once about five years ago when Warden Madden had him escorted by a guard across the inclosure to the warden's office. The second time was a few weeks ago, when he was taken under guard to the warden's reception room to meet the subcommittee from the legislature.

NOTHING NEW IS KNOWN.

All Murder Clues Prove Barren of Results.

Des Moines, April 21.—No new disclosures have been made in the investigation of the murder of Lena and Tommy Peterson, and it is becoming evident that the detectives have about abandoned hope of running the criminals to cover for some time, at least. Two or three men have been placed in positions to keep watch for any clues that may develop in certain localities during the next three or four days.

Otherwise the detectives who have been working continuously since Sunday night, seem disposed to rest on their oars, and beyond investigating several clues called to their intention, they are doing very little. Chief Brackett received a telegram from Walnut stating that a suspicious negro had been seen to pass through that town in the morning, but beyond the statement that the colored man "looked suspicious, there was nothing to connect him with the crime, and the chief wired back a reply stating that he did not consider the information sufficient upon which to base an order for his arrest.

STRIKE IS DECLARED OFF.

Representatives of Machinists Effected a Settlement.

Waterloo, April 21.—The big Illinois Central shop men's strike has been declared off. The settlement of the trouble was accomplished through the advice and aid of Business Agent Roderick, of Chicago, acting for the machinists and in that capacity representing all of the 500 men who were out.

The settlement was effected by the new schedule which the company presented to the men, and which granted them an average increase of 15 per cent over their old wages. This was a new concession on the part of the railway officials and is considered a big victory for the workmen. Their original demands were from 20 to 25 per cent. The proposition was adopted by a secret ballot of the strikers and later at a conference between the railway officials and representatives of the different orders, its terms were ratified. The shops have resumed work with a full force.

CONVICTED OF BURGLARLY.

Estherville, April 21.—Charles Peterson of this city was convicted of the crime of burglary. Peterson was one of a gang of whitecaps who undertook to run one C. H. Dowling out of town last winter. Three other men were indicted with Peterson, but their trials will not be had this term. The defense made was that of an alibi. Defendant and seven other men testified he was at some other place when the crime was charged to have been committed, but the state, relying on the evidence of one witness, made a strong case and the jury was unanimous in their verdict on the first ballot.

A PASTOR'S WIFE CURED OF PELVIC CATARRH

She Suffered for Years and Felt Her Case Was Hopeless—Cured by Peruna.

Mrs. Anna B. Fleharty.

MRS. ANNA B. FLEHARTY, recent Superintendent of the W. C. T. U. headquarters, at Galesburg, Ill., was for ten years one of the leading women there. Her husband, when living, was first President of the Nebraska Wesleyan University, at Lincoln, Neb.

In a letter written from 401 Sixty-seventh street, W., Chicago, Ill., Mrs. Fleharty says the following in regard to Peruna:

"Having lived a very active life as wife and working partner of a busy minister, my health failed me a few years ago. I lost my husband about the same time, and gradually I seemed to lose health and spirit. My daughter is a confirmed invalid, and we both felt great need of an invigorator.

"One of my neighbors advised me to try Peruna. A bottle was immediately secured and a great change took place in my daughter's as well as in my own health. Our appetites improved very greatly, the digestion seemed much helped, and restful sleep soon improved us, so that we seemed like new women.

"I would not be without Peruna for ten times its cost."—Mrs. Anna B. Fleharty.

What used to be called female diseases by the medical profession is now called pelvic catarrh. It has been found by experience that catarrhal diseases of the pelvic organs are the cause of most cases of female disease.

Dr. Hartman was among the first of America's great physicians to make this discovery. For forty years he has been treating diseases peculiar to women, and long ago he reached the conclusion that a woman entirely free from catarrhal affection of these organs would not be subject to female disease. He therefore began using Peruna for these cases and found it so admirably adapted to their permanent cure that Peruna has now become the most famous remedy for female diseases ever known. Everywhere the women are using it and praising it. Peruna is not a palliative simply; it cures by removing the cause of female disease.

Dr. Hartman has probably cured more women of female ailments than any other living physician. He makes these cures simply by using and recommending Peruna.

Mrs. E. L. Brown 329 Elliott street, Memphis, Tenn., writes:

"I suffered for several years with headache brought on by nervous prostration. I was also afflicted with insomnia. I would get up in the morning more weary than when I retired and I used to dread the approach of night. Peruna came into my home as a welcome guest, and within three short months I was like another woman. I have now enjoyed perfect health for over a year, and those who have suffered as I did will know how happy I am."—Mrs. E. L. Brown.

Mrs. Esther M. Milner, De Graff, Ohio, writes:

"I was a terrible sufferer from female weakness and had the headache continuously. I was not able to do my housework for myself and husband. I wrote you and described my condition as near as possible. You recommended Peruna. I took four bottles and was completely cured. I think Peruna a wonderful medicine."—Mrs. Esther M. Milner.

Congressman Thad. M. Mahon, of Chambersburg, Pa., writes:

"I take pleasure in commending your Peruna as a substantial tonic and a good catarrh remedy." T. M. Mahon.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Shedding the Coat.

The present time of year, when work horses are shedding their winter's coat of hair, is always a critical period and much of the ability of the animal to withstand work well in hot weather depends upon the manner in which this spring change of garment is effected. If the shedding process be retarded it indicates lack of health. It indicates, as a rule, lack of attention upon the part of the owner. He is apt to forget that food suitable during cold weather is unsuited to change of temperature. Corn, which furnished fat and heat during winter, now becomes a burden to the animal economy. The heavy coat of hair leads to profuse perspiration and this to debility. Nature now seeks to throw off the incubus—the long coat becomes a foreign body to be gotten rid of. The horse fails to part speedily with this winter's protection unless he is given a chance by his owner. If he is confined to a badly ventilated, dirty stable and given hard water to drink, the glands and sweat pores of the skin fail to work freely. Sluggish circulation of the blood accompanies these conditions of the skin, and that means imperfect working kidneys and liver. The horse must be healthy to perform a healthy act. Coat-shedding is natural and necessary; it is best done by horses in best condition. Such horses are those which have been properly exercised and fed during winter. To stimulate shedding at this season try to induce good health, if absent. Do this by flooding the stable with fresh air and sunlight. Change hard drinking water for soft water. Stop feeding corn and substitute bran mashes until the bowels are freely opened—until winter's costiveness gives way to that freedom of excretion which nature stimulates by green grass. Feed oats then to fill the blood with nitrogen; the carbonaceous matters of corn are no longer called for and nitrogenous matters will build up muscle and afford vim and vigor for hard labor. Lastly use the curry comb and brush thoroughly as mechanical stimulating factors. The skin will respond in kindly fashion, and where this is brought about the horse may be considered healthy and fit for work.

Some Good Advice on Swine.

J. W. Boles: The first few days after a sow farrows she should have but little food. Very rich food will scour the pigs. I save more pigs farrowed in the spring that I do those farrowed in the fall. A lot and house for each sow are necessary for best results. After pigs are old enough to eat slop, ccomposed of bran and ship stuff and a little oil meal, different litters may be turned together. For best growth and development feed mostly soft food with grass and clover and a little corn. Equal parts of bran and ship stuff with a very thin slop of oil meal is what I use. Plenty of wood ashes, slaked lime, salt and charcoal made from burning cobs or wood, should be in their lots and pastures all the time. Hogs will eat a great deal of sand. Wheat straw is best for bedding. Millet is good for grown hogs, will keep them out of the dust better than anything else. It is not best to have young pigs very fat. The development of bone and muscle is the primary object of the first six months of a pig's life. Overfeeding impairs the health and usefulness of the pig very greatly. We should keep it in a thriving condition.

Breeding Pens.

At this time of year many breeding pens are being made up. What are the fowls used in them? We believe they should be birds that have proven themselves excellent by more than one year of existence. Mature females and mature males selected as the result of known qualities should and will produce eggs that contain strong embryos. These will give vigorous chicks, which will develop rapidly under skillful feeding. The birds kept for breeders, even though there be but five of them in a yard, should have a considerable area devoted to them. The writer was pleased to notice while at the North Carolina Agricultural College last year, that the yards devoted to the breeders were so large that the birds had an abundance of green grass, with no prospect of rendering the ground bare. In addition to the grass, plats of oats were sown. It certainly is not advisable to confine a "breeding pen"—a cock and four hens—in a little yard not more than five by five feet, as we have seen them. Exercise induces fertility in eggs.

Forests of the Philippines.

Capt. Ahern of the forestry bureau says he saw large tracts of virgin forests in the Philippines with 10,000 to 20,000 cubic feet of magnificent lumber per acre, where the trees were more than 150 feet high, with trunks clear of branches for 80 feet. Fifty valuable hard woods are now offered to the world.

Impoverished Blood.

Whether due to inheritance or caused by a depleted condition of the system, is the cause of much agony.

Vogeler's Curative Compound, when taken for this trouble is a means of salvation. It creates new fresh tissues and pure red blood corpuscles and by giving strength and tone to the great vital energies of the body, it enables them to perform their natural functions. The reader should not lose sight of the fact that Vogeler's Curative Compound is made from the formula of one of the most eminent physicians.

MRS. MARY SHORTLEY, 26 Court, Gosport Street, Coventry, writes:—"Several years ago I met with an accident through a fall, hurting my hand so badly that I was unable to use the same for five weeks. I tried everything I knew of but did not receive any benefit. Finally, as a last resource, I applied St. Jacobs Oil and after using the first bottle I could move my fingers, after the second bottle I could open my hand and finally I regained the use of my hand and all pain left me. It was only by the use of St. Jacobs Oil that I am now able to follow my employment."

HUMOURS

Complete External and Internal Treatment

Cuticura

Consisting of CUTICURA SOAP (25c.) to cleanse the skin of crusts and scales, and soften the thickened cuticle; CUTICURA OINTMENT (50c.) to instantly allay itching, irritation, and inflammation, and soothe and heal; and CUTICURA RESOLVENT PILLS, to cool and cleanse the blood, and expel humour germs. A SINGLE SET is often sufficient to cure the most torturing, disfiguring skin, scalp, and blood humours, eczemas, rashes, itchings, and irritations, with loss of hair, when the best physicians, and all other remedies fail.

MILLIONS USE CUTICURA SOAP

Assisted by CUTICURA OINTMENT, for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, for stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing rough, red, and sore hands, for baby rashes, itchings, and chafings, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. CUTICURA SOAP in the form of baths for annoying inflammations, or irritations, for too free or offensive perspiration, for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative uses, will at once suggest themselves to women and mothers. No other medicated soap is to be compared with CUTICURA SOAP for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with CUTICURA SOAP for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in one PRICE, the BEST skin and complexion soap, and the purest and sweetest soap in the world.

A MOST LIBERAL OFFER

All our farmer readers should take advantage of the unprecedented club bing offer we this year make, which includes with this paper the Iowa Homestead, its special Farmers' Institute editions, and the Poultry Farmer. These three publications are the best of their class and should be in every farm home. To them we add, for local, county and general news, our own paper, and make the price of the four one year only $1.45. Never before was so much superior reading matter offered for so small an amount of money. The three papers named, which we club with our own, are well known throughout the West, and commend themselves to the reader's favorable attention upon mere mention. The Homestead is the great agricultural and live stock paper of the west; The Poultry Farmer is the most practical poultry paper for the farmer, while the Special Farmer Institute Editions are the most practical publications for the promotion of good farming ever published. Take advantage of this great offer, as it will hold good for a short time only Samples of these papers may be examined by calling at this office.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this keption getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

DOINGS IN AND NEAR ELL CENTER

Dished up to Suit all Classes by Our Special Correspondent.

May baskets will soon be in bloom.

August Ridder was a business caller here last Saturday.

Jos. Lawhorn added to his bank account by selling some of his surplus corn last week.

The Ell Center school will commence next Monday, May 5, with Miss Christie, of Goodell in the chair.

Will Yohn made a flying trip to Garner Monday forenoon to procure some medical service for a sick colt.

School commenced in the Pleasant Mound district Monday, but we did not learn the wielder of the birch.

In our items last week we forgot to state that Miss Carrie Hubbard had commenced her school in the Gilbert district.

The high wind of last week blew the windmill down on the Kluckhohn farm, also a corn crib for C. Gilbert on A. Kelly's farm.

Marshall Bros. have their tile factory running at full blast once more and a lively hum is heard around this hive of industry.

There will be no preaching at Pleasant Mound Sunday, on account of the Sunday school convention at the Stone school house.

The Ell Center school house has been treated to a thorough cleaning and also been nicely papered, preparatory to the spring term of school.

The nice rain last Friday night put an end to the dust storms for a while at least besides doing a lot of good to the crops as it was just what was needed.

Miss Maude Jones, who has been in Nebraska the past year, has accepted a position as teacher in the Page district and her many friends are glad to have her here once more.

There will be a Sunday school convention at the Stone school house next Sunday, May 4. A good paogram has been prepared and everyone is invited to attend. Services will begin at 10 o'clock a. m.

Important Happenings of the Week in the State of Iowa.

STORM IN TWO COUNTIES

Two Killed and One Fatally Injured in Jasper County—Vicksburg Commission Has Been Named—Important Decision by Polk County Judge.

Marshalltown, April 28.—A terrific storm, assuming the proportions of a tornado, did several thousand dollars worth of damage in Marshall and Jasper counties Friday night. Many barns and outbuildings northwest of the city were destroyed, and in Melbourne, in the southwestern part of the county, considerable damage is reported. The worst damage was done on the farm of Wallace Arney, where two big barns were blown down and completely wrecked. Mr. Arney is just finishing a fine new home, and this was torn and twisted out of shape so badly that rebuilding will be necessary. The family had not moved into the new house. To that fact is due perhaps that none of the members were hurt, as the old house was not materially damaged. Two new steel tower windmills were wrecked, corn cribs were blown down and fences scattered. Trees were uprooted. Cattle sheds were carried away and everything of a movable nature overturned. North of the Arney farm the storm struck the Will McLelland farm, which is occupied by Oscar Tranbarger. Here the wind blew down the farm house and barn and did considerable damage. The storm appears to have been of rather small area, so far as reports can be obtained. It seemed to move in a northeasterly direction. A number of other farm houses and barns were unroofed and badly twisted, but the force of the winds seemed to be greatest in the vicinity above mentioned.

North Jasper and the vicinity of Baxter report heavy damage to buildings and much stock killed. So far as known no lives were lost.

Two children named Brown, of Jasper county, were killed. Their mother was thrown several feet into a wire fence and fatally injured.

Sioux City, April 28.—Reports show that the storm damage in Sioux City will be over $25,000. Nearly every residence and business house suffered some damage from torn roofs or broken glass.

COMMISSIONERS NAMED.

Men Who Will Have Charge of Vicksburg Monument.

Des Moines, April 28.—The members of the Vicksburg commission have been named by Governor Cummins as follows:

Captain John F. Merry, Dubuque; Senator L. C. Blanchard, Oskaloosa; Senator J. A. Fitzpatrick, Nevada; Representative E. J. C. Bealer, Cedar Rapids; Davis A. Haggard, Algona; ex-Speaker W. O. Mitchell, Corning; W. H. C. Jaques, Ottumwa; Col. H. H. Rood, Mt. Vernon; Captain J. H. Dean, Des Moines.

In accordance with the law enacted by the Twenty-ninth general assembly each of these commissioners served in one of the Iowa regiments or batteries of the civil war. The law does not require that the commissioners must have served at Vicksburg, though an effort has been made to get veterans of that campaign. In the list of the governor's appointees are five that served on the original Vicksburg commission. They are Senator Fitchpatrick, ex-Speaker Mitchell, Representative Bealer, Captain Dean of this city and Senator Blanchard of Oskaloosa.

The law requires the commissioners shall recieve no compensation, but shall be paid their necessary expenses. In case vacancies are caused in the commission the governor is to fill them by appointment of a person or persons who served in an Iowa regiment or battery in the rebellion.

The appropriation for the Vicksburg monuments and the expenses incidental to their construction is $150,000. Not more than $5,000 is to be available in the biennial period ending June 30, 1903. The sum of $45,000 is to be available on and after July 1, 1905.

The commission is empowered to make contracts for the construction, delivery and erection upon the National Military park at Vicksburg of such monuments and tablets "as will, in the opinion of the members thereof, most appropriately and permanently mark the positions of Iowa brigades, regiments and batteries on the investment line during the siege of Vicksburg and suitably record and commemorate the valor and services of Iowa soldiers in the campaign and siege of Vicksburg."

Ira Hammond Goes Free.

Mt. Ayr, April 28.—Ira Hammond, the lover of Miss Maud Stone, who died in Dr. J. W. Crawford's sanitarium at Lamoni in January, 1901, who has been on trial for the past week on a charge of complicity in the murder of the girl, was acquitted.

It is announced by the state fair managers, that the exhibit of Iowa industrial products will be made a feature of the fair of 1902. It will be recalled that the fair people bought the Iowa Producers Association building. It is planned to repair the building, to construct attractive and convenient approaches to it, and to make the exhibit one which will prove of great value to the manufacturers and producers of the state. W. W. Morrow, who has charge of the implement department, will have charge of the exhibit.

The banks of Des Moines have decided to bring suit to test the constitutionality of the state law taxing bank stock, as interpreted by City Solicitor Bremner. Nearly every bank in the city has filed written protests with the board of review at the city hall. The board, however, to a man approved the stand taken by the solicitor, and all the banks can do is to take the matter into the courts. This they assert that they would do. The banks, however, do not as yet make plain the grounds on which they will contest the constitutionality of the law. Something over $17,000 in taxes are involved in the proposed suit. The point at issue is the question of offsetting the holdings of government bonds against the capital stock, thus decreasing the assessment. The national banks have never been allowed to do this. State and saving banks have. The national banks claim that they have been discriminated against. Solicitor Bremner advised that neither class of banks be allowed to offset their bonds, and the board has taken that position.

The socialists have filed amendments to their petition for an injunction to restrain the city from transferring $50,000 from the water works fund to the water company for the purpose of constructing a water main to the army post. The amendment was made necessary by the change in the city administration since the suit was first commenced. The socialists also add one or two sections to the petition, declaring that the transfer of the funds would be contrary to the constitutions of the state and of the United States. First it is declared that the act of the legislature authorizing the transfer is in conflict with section 1 of article 7 of the constitution, in that it authorizes the city to assume and become responsible for the debts of a private company, which power is forbidden to the state, and which cannot be delegated to the city. It is also alleged that the law is in conflict with section 6 of article 1 of the constitution of the state and with the fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States, in that it discriminates in favor of water companies in cities where there is a military reservation, such a classification being alleged to be arbitary. Notice has been served on all of the city officials.

State Superintendent Barrett has been holding conferences with the county superintendents of the state respecting school matters. He has discovered that there is a divergence of views between himself and the county superintendents as to the interpretation to be placed on some of the laws relating to schools. For instance, he has held, and the attorney general has sustained him, that it is illegal for county superintendents to issue certificates to teachers on examinations taken before other superintendents. This practice, he has discovered, has been quite common. Moreover, the county superintendents are inclined to persist in it. Other differences of opinion have arisen. Mr. Barrett has announced his intention of securing the opinion of the attorney general on all mooted points for inclusion in the forthcoming revised edition of the school laws of the state, with annotations.

City Assessor French says that the proceedings against owners of property in the Whitechapel district, because of sales of liquors in houses of ill repute, will not be dropped, also that the assessors will keep close watch fo eht sessors wil keep close watch of the districts into which the women are said to be moving, and that if they find the same kind of violation going on, they will surely assess the mulct tax against the properties.

Governor Cummins and State Superintendent Barrett have returned from Iowa City, where they attended the meeting of the regents. The most important thing disposed of was authorizing the building committee to secure an architect and have plans prepared for the medical building. This will cost $125,000, and will be built after the modern method, in three separate structures so as to separate the anatomical department and the chemistry department from the main building. The plans will be submitted to the regents in June. Another committee was authorized to secure options on land west of the university and between the university and the river.

The state officers are being flooded with inquiries about the Buchanan cocaine law. It went into effect by publication on March 25. It prohibits the sale of cocaine in any form, except to professional men and retail and wholesale dealers for use in their practice of business.

The report of the State Geological Survey for the year 1901 is now in the hands of the printer, and will be issued during the summer. It includes Webster, Henry, Jefferson, Wapello, Monroe, Cherokee and Buena Vista counties, and is exhaustive in character, dealing with the geology and economic products of the regions covered.

The board of control has returned from its semi-annual inspection of state institutions in the southern half of Iowa. While on the trip the board inspected the institutions at Davenport, Fort Madison, Mount Pleasant, Clarinda, Council Bluffs and Glenwood. In addition to deciding on the improvements that will be made at these institutions in the biennial period ending June 30, 1903, the board bought lands at Clarinda and Davenport. At Clarinda the board bought two tracts of land, one of 100 acres and the other of 206 acres. The smaller tract cost $75 per acre and the larger $96. The land is of excellent quality and is within a half mile of the institution. It was found the owners of the land adjoining the institution property wanted exhorbitant prices and hence it was determined to buy a little farther away. At Mt. Pleasant and Glenwood the board bought no land, for the reason exhorbitant prices were asked. The board will probably purchase none this year, but simply await developments. At Davenport the board contracted for eighty acres at $135 an acre. The board of control omnibus appropriation bill provides that $200,000 shall not be available until the next biennial period. The board before starting on the inspection trip had decide this should come out of the building fund, thus leaving $140,000 available for building this biennial period, ending June 30, 1903. The improvememnts, decided on were, therefore, only those for which the necessity is immediate.

Dr. P. O. Koto, of Forest City, the newly appointed state veterinarian, has been sworn into office. The assistants were named by the governor on his recommendation: Henry E. Talbot, Des Moines; John J. Repp, Ames; D. E. Baughman, Fort Doodge; J. W. Griffith, Cedar Rapids; J. D. Inger, Waverly; J. O. Parslow, Shenandoah; Peter Malcomb, New Hampton; L. U. Shipley, Sheldon; D. H. Miller, Harlan; G. E. Noble, Osage; S. K. Hazelet, Oelwein; C. E. Stewart, Chariton; S. H. Johnston, Carroll; J. R. Sanders, Corydon; W. L. Evers, Iowa Falls; E. G. Piper, Ida Grove; W. B. Niles, Sidney; S. H. Bauman, Birmingham; W. H. Tustin, Newton; J. H. McLeod, Charles City; H. C. Simpson, Denison; G. A. Johnston, Sioux City; Augustus Lames, Dysart; F. J. Neimman, Marshalltown; F. A. Dolton, Dubuque; Bernard Horman, Decorah.

A part of the money appropriated for the improvement of the capitol will doubtless be expended on the grounds. According to landscape artists they are not laid out as they should be and the grading is not properly done. It is not anticipated that any great outlay will be required to put the grounds in shape, but if the capitol is improved the grounds should be put in shape. The commission will doubtless find it a difficult task to divide the money appropriated, for, although $250,000 is a large fund, a great part of it will have to be spent on the interior of the building and in reguilding the dome. What is left will have to be divided up so as to do as much good as possible.

CORPORATIONS DEFEATED.

Taxation Decision by Supreme Court of Nebraska.

Lincoln, Neb., April 24.—The supreme court of Nebraska has overruled the findings of Referee Ryan in the case of the Real Estate Exchange of Omaha against the Omaha city council, in which the Real Estate Exchange sued for a writ of mandamus to compel the council to reconvene as a board of equalization and hear complaints against the alleged low assessment of the property of public service corporations of the city of Omaha.

The decision is perhaps the most important of the kind ever given and will be as far reaching in its effects as the famous school teachers' case of Chicago. The decision, in reversing the recommendation of the referee, finds for the Real Estate Exchange on every point of law, and decides that the writ shall issue.

The mandamus demands that the franchise corporations shall be assessed on the same basis as private property.

That section of the general revenue law, under which corporations have heretofore deducted the amount of their bonded indebtedness from the value of their property for taxation purposes, is declared unconstitutional. On the manner of assessing franchises and corporation property the decision is distinct and to the effect that corporations must pay taxes in proportion to the value of the entire property, the same as other property.

The opinion affects the entire state and is not appealable.

That part of the finding of Referee Ryan declaring the city council to be "capricious and arbitrary" in refusing to hear the complaints and assessing the costs against that body is sustained.

Killed by Electric Current.

Boone, April 28.—While washing a horse with a hose, Henry Zoell grapped a swinging electric light wire with his other hand. A current of 11,000 volts passed through his body, killing him instantly. During the storm the light wire had been crossed by a trolley wire. The victim lived in Wisconsin and was a Philippine veteran.

PHILIPPINE BILL UP IN SENATE

Senator Carmack of Tennessee Pays His Respects to General Funston—Oleomargarine Bill Sent to Conference—Senate to Investigate Sugar Situation.

Washington, April 22.—Senate.—Formal discussion of the bill temporarily to provide a government for the Philippine islands was begun in the senate today, Rawlins, of Utah, the leading minority member of the Philippine committee, opening the debate. He denounced the bill as an unwarranted imposition on the Filipinos, declaring that it would establish one of the foulest oligarchies in the history of the world. He maintained that the Philippine commission was given too great power by the bill, and asserted that under its provisions the islands would be exploited for private gain. While he was speaking two efforts were made to maintain a quorum, the second resulting in a lively tilt among several senators. Scott, of West Virginia, intimating that argument could not influence any senator. The senate proceeded to the consideration of a bill providing for a union railway station in this city. Patterson, of Colorado, attacked the measure. It was, he said, a gift of a great amount of money to railway corporations. He declared that the values of franchise and property accorded to the railways would amount in the end to $50,000,000. He charged that the bill created a monopoly for the Pennsylvania Railway company, as it excluded all other railway lines from Washington.

House.—The house today, by a vote of 75 to 72, rejected claims attached to the omnibus claims bill by the senate, aggregating $1,800,000, and on the heels of that action nonconcurred in the whole senate amendment (the various items having been ruled to constitute a single amendment) and sent the bill to conference. The military academy appropriation bill was passed after the limit of cost to the improvements at West Point had been reduced from $6,500,000 to $5,500,000 and the amount of the appropriation in the bill from $3,000,000 to $2,000,000.

Washington, April 23.—Rawlins, of Utah, today continued his speech in the senate on the Philippine temporary government bill. He devoted the greater part of his speech to a discussion of the testimony presented to the Philippine commission relating to the administration of the "water cure" to the natives and to other forms of torture inflicted on the Filipinos. He had not concluded his remarks when the senate adjourned. During the early part of the session the bill providing for a union railroad station in Washington was under consideration, but no action was taken. Teller spoke in opposition to the measure.

House.—The house today began consideration of the senate amendments to the oleomargarine bill. A special rule for this purpose was adopted by a vote of 152 to 79. By the ruling of the chair the question of further amendment of the senate propositions was confined within very narrow lines. The opponents of the measure, who sought to modify the senate amendment in various particulars, were outvoted on every proposition submitted.

Washington, April 24.—Senate.—Just before the senate adjourned today Mr. Rawlins of Utah concluded his speech in opposition to the Philippine government bill. As on previous days, he devoted much of his time today to a consideration of the testimony taken before the Philippine committee. He analyzed the testimony in connection with the orders issued by the war department and by general officers in the Philippines. He was particularly severe in his denunciation of General Chaffee for the orders he had issued in carrying out the policy of the government. The senate passed several unobjected to measures of minor importance and a large number of private pension bills.

House.—The house today sent the oleomargarine bill to conference after agreeing to the senate amendments, with some modifications suggested by the agricultural committee. The opponents of the measure offered a number of amendments, the principal one of which was designated to place renovated butter on the same footing with oleomargarine, but they were overwhelmingly voted down. The latter part of the day was devoted to the agricultural appropriation bill. Fox of Mississippi made an exhaustive speech in defense of the suffrage clause of the Mississippi constitution.

Washington, April 25.—Senate.—Two speeches occupied the entire attention of the senate today. McCumber, of North Dakota, discussed his bill to prevent the misbranding and misrepresentation of food products which enter into interstate commerce. Carmack, one of the minority members of the Philippine commission, spoke in opposition to the Philippine government bill, now pending. His address attracted to the chamber not only many senators, but a considerable number of his former colleagues in the house. He sharply criticised the president, not only for the policy he he is pursuing in the Philippines, but for utterances which, the senator declared, tended to fan the flames of insurrection. He also denounced General Funston, whom he characterized as the "jayhawker brigadier from the wind-swept plains—the mightiest Samson who ever wielded the jawbone of an ass as a weapon of war."

House.—The house today passed 145 private pension bills, including bills to pension the widow of the late General William Ludlow at $50 a month, and the widow of the late Parson Brownlaw, of Tennessee, at $30 per month. The remainder of the day was devoted to general debate on the agricultural appropriation bill. Lessler of New York, discussed the necessity of a new postoffice at New York; Cochran, of Missouri, the trust question, and H. C. Smith of Michigan, "Good Roads."

Washington, April 26.—When the senate convened today Jones, of Nevada, chairman of the committee on contingent expenses, reported favorably the resolution of the committee on relation with Cuba, providing for an investigation by that committee of the alleged control of the Cuban sugar crop and sugar lands in Cuba. Teller, of Colorado, who had introduced the resolution, said it was not what he wanted entirely, and was not what he thought ought to be passed. Teller said that he desired to deny that he had ever said that Colorado sugar producers were willing to have the duty taken off sugar. He made this statement in view of such a remark having been attributed to him by a witness before the ways and means committee. He would not object to a reduction of the duty on sugar, he said, if there aiso were proper reductions on other things. The resolution was adopted without further comment. Platt, of Connecticut, presented a conference report on the Chinese exclusion bill, asking that the senate disagree to the report and insist upon a further conference. He explained that the only point of difference between the conferees of the senate and the house was that the house conferees asked the senate conferees to eliminate from the substitute passed by the senate that portion which provides that the present Chinese exclusion law be extended through the life of the present treaty, and remain in force until another treaty shall have been negotiated. Platt's motion that the senate insist upon its amendment and agree to another conference was agreed to. Carmack resumed his speech in opposition to the Philippine bill.

House.—Some miner business was transacted at the opening session of the house today. May 10 was set aside for paying tribute to the memory of the late Senator Kyle, of South Dakota. The District of Columbia appropriation bill was reported and placed on the calendar. Grosvenor, of Ohio, asked unanimous consent for the consideration of a joint resolution to extend the thanks of congress to Hon. John Hay for his oration upon the occasion of the memorial McKinley services. De Armond, of Missouri, objected.

GOING AFTER BEEF TRUST

Attorney General Knox Finally Decides to Take Action.

DISTRICT ATTORNEYS TO ACT

Announced That Preliminary Investigation by District Attorneys Develops Evidence of a Combination in Restraint of Interstate Trade.

Washington, April 25.—Attorney General Knox yesterday made the following statement regarding the so-called beef trust:

"On April 4 this department directed W. A. Day, Esq., of Washington, in his capacity as special assistant to the attorney general to examine into as far as practicable, the public charges to the effect that a combination of the large meat dealers of the United States had been effected contrary to the provisions of the law of the United States. This preliminary examination resulted in instructions to Mr. Day and Mr. Bethea, United States attorney at Chicago, April 7, to prosecute simultaneously in Chicago and the east a more particular examination into the allegations and proofs alleged to exist in support thereof. From their reports I am satisfied that sufficient evidence is in hand upon which bills in equity for an injunction can be framed to restrain the combination from further proceeding under their agreements, which clearly appear to be in restraint of interstate trade. I have, therefore, acted in compliance with the law which provides:

"It shall be the duty of the several district attorneys of the United States in their respective districts under the direction of the attorney general to institute proceedings in equity to prevent and restrain violations of this act; directed the district attorney at Chicago to prepare a bill for an injunction against the corporations and persons who are parties to the combination mentioned to be filed in the United States circuit court for the northern district of Illinois."

The only monument on the grave of Salmon P. Chase in Cincinnati, Ohio, is a simple stone bearing an inscription of four lines and reciting that he was "Senator, governor, secretary of the treasury, chief justice of the United States."

CONDEMNED IN MISSOURI AND CONFISCATED IN NEW YORK.

Judge Clarke of St. Louis has convicted and fined heavily a number of grocers for selling baking powders containing alum.

The week before the Health Department of New York seized a quantity of stuff being sold for baking powder which they found was made from alum mixed with ground rock, and dumped it into the river.

The Health Authorities are thus taking effective means to prevent the introduction into our markets of injurious substitutes in place of wholesome baking powders.

As alum costs only two cents a pound, there is a great temptation for those manufacturers who make substitutes and imitation goods, to use it. Alum baking powders can be detected by the health authorities by chemical analysis, but the ordinary housekeeper, whose assistance in protecting the health of the people is important, cannot make a chemical examination. She may easily know the alum powders, however, from the fact that they are sold at from ten to twenty cents for a pound can, or that some prize—like a spoon or glass, or piece of crockery, or wooden ware—is given with the powder as an inducement.

As the people continue to realize the importance of this subject and consumers insist on having baking powder of established name and character, and as the health authorities continue their vigorous crusades, the alum danger will, it is hoped, finally be driven from our homes.

WHY VACCINATION PARTY FAILED

Office Boy "Swiped" Doctor's Points for Toothpicks.

It all happened through a fatal error of the health officer leaving unguarded for the brief period of three minutes a bundle of toothpicks, such as are used by practitioners in rubbing the vaccine virus in the arm after it has been applied, and as a consequence one of the largest of the numerous vaccination parties now being held in the business district had to be called off.

The employes of a large wholesale establishment had been summoned, and with arms bared and sacrificed expression on their faces awaited the ordeal, when the affable but unpopular member of Dr. Lederle's vaccine corps stepped into an inner office to speak with the proprietor, leaving his implements behind.

This was too great a chance for Tommy, the office boy, says the New York Mail and Express, who began to investigate, and who, possessed of a sense of the eternal fitness of things, thought his mouth for one and his pockets for the other a better resting place for the toothpicks than an atmosphere of virus and cuticle knives.

"Say," he explained confidentially to a bosom friend after the health officer in calling the party "off" had passed some rather personal remarks on the full duties of an office boy, "if dey use toothpicks fer vaccinating, do yer suppose dey'd use a coal shovel fer de measles?"

She'll Sing Hereafter.

A charming young lady, who glories in the possession of a wealth of bright auburn-colored hair, is the teacher of a Sunday school class. On a recent Sabbath the rector made the announcement of a hymn to be sung, and, rising, waved his hands, and the organ pealed forth.

"Now," said he, "ready—sing."

A small and precocious youth in the young woman's class said:

"Why don't you sing, Miss Frisbee?"

"Me? Oh, I never sing," replied the teacher, smiling her prettiest.

"But," exclaimed the boy, "the minister says you must. Didn't he just say, 'Now, Reddy, sing?'"

Smelling salts and numerous other restoratives had to be used to bring the teacher out of her faint.

Buy California Timber Lands.

Pennsylvania lumbermen have just purchased 60,000 acres of timber lands in northern California at a cost of $450,000 and will invest $2,000,000 in building mills and a fifty-mile railroad to reach the Southern Pacific.

Queen Christiania of Sweden.

Christiana of Sweden was of tall and commanding figure and walked so heavily that her step was often mistaken for that of a man. Her voice was harsh and her actions were often abrupt and rude.

Kansans Make Records for Bravery.

Kansas claims for her sons five out of the thirty-three special medals awarded by the government for special acts of heroism and bravery during the Spanish-American war.

Our Limits.

Canada is still claiming the ownership of the north pole with a reckless disregard of the fact that the United States is bounded on the north by the aurora borealis.

Foreigners in Paris.

Paris, according to the latest census returns, has a population of 2,650,000 persons, of whom over 1,200,000 are either foreigners or provincials.

An American Nabob.

By ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

He soon discovered that his driver had chosen a far from delectable route to the hotel—true, it might be shorter, but he could not remember ever having heard of a Jehu ready to cut down the length of his journey when he had a good paying fare inside.

The marquis experienced the first little sensation of alarm, or, rather uneasiness, just then. His curiosity having been aroused, the marquis found means to look out of the vehicle, and was not greatly surprised when he discovered that an unknown man sat beside the driver.

Before now he had known that some one was riding behind, having heard various thumps that gave the secret away, and once upon twisting his head around he had a fleeting glimpse of a human eye glued to the little glass in the back canopy of the vehicle.

A very pleasant outlook, really.

Being a philosophical man to a marked degree, the marquis at once set to work pooling his resources, so as to make as game a stand as the occasion would admit.

He remained perfectly cool and self-possessed—when a man had passed through such astonishing adventures as had fallen to his lot of late years he is hardly likely to show the white feather because forsooth a few London blackmailers and footpads conspire to entrap him.

He gathered his energies together and watching his chance, quietly opened the door to the left, intending to drop out without attracting the attention of the two cronies upon the seat.

A very clever little idea, and one that might have worked to a beautiful issue only for one thing—he had forgotten the fellow who was riding in the rear of the "growler."

The marquis, with an agility he had acquired from long years of athletic practice, had successfully made the drop, and was in hopes that his move had not been seen, when the third party leaped from behind the vehicle, and, throwing himself upon the half recumbent passenger, sounded the alarm.

CHAPTER XVIII.

In Due Time.

No doubt the Kilkenny cats had a very salubrious time of it when they indulged in their little engagement, but such an encounter could not bear comparison with the scramble in which the marquis engaged when these three London footpads set upon him.

The fellow on his back was interfering with his blows as much as he possibly could, and as a result the others were enabled to throw themselves upon him.

Matters were in this mixed-up state and the final result in doubt, when a new element was precipitated into the game.

An outsider hurled himself upon the struggling mass, and by an exercise of tremendous muscular strength tore the man loose from the gentleman's shoulders, though he clung with such pertinacity that he carried away the collar of the marquis' coat.

The newcomer gave him a toss that sent him down a nearby area, where a crash of glass and startled screams announced his prompt arrival.

Then this unexpected ally turned his attention to the others—the marquis, freed from his tormentor in the rear, had opened his batteries upon them afresh, and was dealing out his blows with reckles abandon, when he saw one of them snatched bodily from his feet and tossed through the open door of the four-wheeler as though he might have been a mere sack of oats.

Upon this the last of the trio, who proved to be no other than the driver, uttered a yell of fear and, scrambling in haste to his seat, laid the whip on his horse and clattered down the narrow street.

Thus the field was suddenly cleared of enemies in double-quick order, and the manner of their disposal seemed to greatly amuse the muscular, red-bearded giant who had come so opportunely to the assistance of the beleaguered marquis, for he roared with laughter.

"Gang awa' wi' ye baith, and dinna' forget the puir de'il who lies in a muckle yonder. Man, they were mair than ye could weel handle, but it did me good to be of assistance to ye, and that's no lee," he exclaimed, assisting to brush the gentleman off.

The marquis at sound of his voice was stunned, but he recovered in time to cry out:

"Donald McGregor, by my life it is!"

"Aweel, ye seem to know me, sir, though I confess the honor is all on your side. Still, there is something familiar in your voice I dinna ken—it's verra curious."

The marquis b[illegible]n. [illegible]d managed to get b[illegible]ANK GRUETZ[illegible] hand, and was sq[illegible] emotion.

"Ah! M[illegible] doing something[illegible] I saw of you, m[illegible] I offered m[illegible]ptain Liverm[illegible] to murde[illegible]

McGr[illegible]ers Tuesday. [illegible] in a few sentence[illegible] wife and started [illegible] increase the populati[illegible]ty's people with a[illegible] beginning, but bea[illegible] swooped down upon him, [illegible] having a hard pull at present, though nothing could crush his jolly spirits.

This pleased his companion more than words could tell, since it opened a way for him to assist his old friend.

"Worry no longer, McGregor, for there is a bright future ahead. I am in a way to put you in a position where money will flow into your pockets. God bless you for a true-hearted friend. There is my card—call on me at ten to-morrow, and you can have anything you ask. Meanwhile take this for a temporary loan—not a word against it—I won't hear a murmur. Go home to your wife and babies, and remember me in your prayers. Such luck to meet you after searching in vain—it must have been an especial act of Providence. When you come to the hotel to-morrow send up your name to the Marquis of Montezuma."

Whereupon the McGregor was actually compelled to lean against a house for support, so wonderful was the intelligence thus communicated.

"It beats a'," was all he could mutter.

When safely landed in his hotel he resolved never again to be caught napping in such a reckless way.

After all, it had been an eventful day, and brought both joy and regrets.

The marquis had a strange feeling as though that for which he had yearned all through those dreary years was about to be snatched away from him in his hour of victory.

The little germ was working, and in due time it might leaven the whole lump—a few more such rude shocks as he had received when those two little cherubims captured him in Fedora's house would certainly complete his discomfiture, and if he had hoped to continue cruel and relentless he must take no chances in that direction.

CHAPTER XIX.

Mazette Makes a Discovery.

Affairs could not continue much further without coming to a crisis.

There came the day when the marquis found he could no longer blind one pair of eyes, at least.

Mazette had remembered.

The marquis was taken by surprise when, upon entering the little studio, he found Mazette in tears.

"Come, what has gone wrong?" he exclaimed in dire dismay, for, like all men, he felt his utter impotence under such conditions.

She came toward him, smiling through her tears—there was upon her face reproach, delight and keen artistic disappointment.

"Why did you not tell me before?" she asked, as he took her hand in his.

"Tell you—indeed, if I only knew what you meant I would only be too glad—this is, I—then you have discovered all?" for it dawned upon him that she was no longer blind.

"Oh, Jack, how dreadfully cruel of you," as she dropped her head in order that he should not see the tears of mortification.

"To conceal my identity all this time—yes, in one sense it was, but I had an object in it all, I assure you," he declared sturdily.

She looked up troubled.

"What does it all mean—I hope, I pray you are doing what is right—that is—" and there she stopped confused.

Upon which he laughed almost boisterously and possessed himself of her other hand—they were such good friends, such old friends, there could be no harm in this natural and innocent action.

"Have no fears, little woman—my patent of nobility was issued in the regular way at Madrid, for the usual round sum—I am the genuine article, the Marquis of Montezuma. As to my wealth, you have heard that I possess amazing gold mines in the new world. I assure you my money has all been honestly acquired and also taken from mother earth, a present from the old Montezumas of Aztec time."

They talked of old times, and the many memories they had in common—since the flight of years how precious these recollections became—a halo seemed to surround each incident in those days of yore, making romantic what at that time had been exceedingly prosaic happenings.

Really the marquis enjoyed the half hour in Mazette's society more than he might have cared to confess while still hugging that determination for vengeance in his heart—while that grim spectre haunted his life he could never be wholly happy.

And when he said good-bye he must needs take both her hands in his and press them—as such an old familiar friend should have the privilege of doing, though it startled him a little to see the blush that flashed athwart Mazette's cheeks.

The Marquis of Montezuma whistled softly as he ran down the steps from the studio. It was the first time in many a long day he had felt so light-hearted and cheerful.

As the lower steps were a little gloomy he almost ran over a lady in the act of ascending. Of course an apology sprang to his lips, for his awkwardness seemed to have alarmed her. The next instant the Marquis uttered an exclamation of astonishment in which there was also a trace of alarm, for, as he turned to the lady he found himself looking into that beautiful but dangerous face of the Senorita Juanita.

Why the sight of a lovely face should cause the marquis to tremble might seem a mystery, but he knew the reason—it was not that he feared this Spanish girl so far as his own personal safety was concerned, but there were others:

Mazette!

That Dona Juanita had been dogging his footsteps of late he had no doubt, and her motive in doing so was no mystery, since she had vowed to discover who the authoress of his wrongs in the past might be in order to avenge them.

But what had that to do with Mazette, since she was not concerned in his misery of the past?

"Ah! the interest of this jealous woman had more to do with the present—the future.

And that was why he trembled, because suddenly overtaken with the overwhelming consciousness that Mazette's happiness was precious to him. The shock did more to tear away the cobwebs with which he had concealed the truth than anything else that could have happened.

Besides he could not forget the blush that had swept over her face as he said good-bye.

Dona Juanita was the first to speak—she had made a half-frantic struggle to lay hold of her veil, doubtless in the expectation of lowering the flimsy gauze in time to conceal her face, and when she found it was too late, her hand fell to one side, and she met the astonished gaze of the marquis with a defiant smile, saying:

"I have not had the pleasure of talking over old times such as you promised, Senor Jack. I sadly fear you find other attractions too great a tax upon your time."

"Ah! I am a very busy man, senorita; you can readily understand that. They shower attentions upon a successful man in London—once I might have starved to death upon the streets, and a few lines in the morning Times would have been my poor obituary. Now, it takes columns to chronicle my most simple doings, how I live, what I think and such stuff; Bah! I am disgusted with it all."

"Tell me, Senor Jack, have you given up your design for vengeance?" she asked, fixing her great black eyes upon him as though there might be much more in this question than appeared upon the surface.

"Not yet," he answered slowly.

"Ah! then there is still hope," she muttered, and he did not comprehend at the time just what this meant, though later on the full importance of it burst upon him.

Hope for what?—her designs were all selfish, since it never entered her head to think of others, and the future as connected with her own fortunes was all that concerned her.

The marquis was glad when at last he saw her into a cab, and raising his hat, pressed her hand in adieu, hoping that he might set eyes no more on the belle of San Jose.

CHAPTER XX.

How Fedora Heard.

The Livermores had vanished from the sphere which they had for some years adorned, but it was no mystery to the marquis, who had kept track of their movements through those who served him well.

"The way to keep the price of meat within reasonable limits is for the public to quit buying it," suggests Victor Smith. "Let us all try for two weeks. We consume in fourteen days over 500,000,000 pounds of meat, which we do not require as a physiological necessity. Peas, beans, potatoes, cabbage, onions, corn, whole wheat bread, corn bread, some fruits and plenty of water are all we need. No one likes meat more than I do, but last year I did without it for eight months, and after the first week or two did not yearn for it. Result—better general health."

It is related that the only man who ever got even with Cecil Rhodes in the matter of personalities was a little German clerk in the Government office at Johannesburg. Rhodes on this occasion had to stand in line, and he didn't like it. He had not been used to standing in line in South Africa or anywhere else. "Please attend to me at once," he said, "I can't wait." "When your turn comes, mister," mumbled the clerk. "Confound you, sir; don't you know who I am? I'm Rhodes." "Oh, yes, I knew that, but that doesn't worry me," was the unruffled reply. "If you were in Cape Town, I'd have you discharged in a minute," roared the premier. "Yes, I have heard that they discharge people in Cape Town for doing their duty," answered the clerk; "but we ain't in Cape Town. This is a republic."

An Honest Man's Opinion.

Vermont, Mo., April 28th.—If what Mr. J. S. Tillery of this place says is true—and none who know him doubt his honesty—the new remedy Dodd's Kidney Pills is a wonderful medicine indeed. Mr. Tillery says:

"I had Kidney and Liver Trouble for years. I had used many medicines but could get nothing to cure me.

"I heard of a new remedy called Dodd's Kidney Pills and began a treatment with the result that I was very soon on the mend.

"I kept on using the pills and am now entirely better. I honestly do believe that they are the greatest remedy the world has ever seen.

"I am always willing to help a good thing and I cannot say too much for one that helped me so much.

"If I didn't know that Dodd's Kidney Pills would do all that is claimed for them I wouldn't say a word of praise for them."

Several beauty doctors from New York are installed in fashionable quarters in London, and are doing a rushing business in preparing faded damsels who desire to look charming for the coronation festivities. Wrinkles are removed, sallow visages are given the tint of youth, and to dull eyes are imparted a lovely brilliancy. The beauty doctors promise to do all this, and are shrewd enough to get their pay in advance.

Smithson (the celebrated poet, novelist, playright, etc.)—"But, my dear young lady, I really don't understand you. I havn't been winning any ping-pong tournament. I don't play." Miss Brown—"Oh, but surely I heard our hostess say you were the Mr. Smithson!'"

Because you do not know that your own merchants can save you from 15 to 20 per cent on the price you pay agents.

We had occasion to trim paper for one of our customers. He paid 22c a roll. The agent asked 24c but to be kind gave 2c a roll off. We have paper in stock on which our price is 20c per double roll that is of a higher grade. Yours for business,

Reveals a Great Secret

It is often asked how such startling cures that puzzle the best physicians, are effected by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Here's the secret. It cuts out the phlegm and germ-infected mucus, and lets the life-giving oxygen enrich and vitalize the blood. It heals the inflamed, cough-worn throat and lungs. Hard colds and stubborn coughs soon yield to Dr. King's New Discovery, the most infallible remedy for all throat and lung diseases. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at J. L. Harr's.

TO THE FARMER AND HIS WIFE.

The TIMES has arranged with the Journal of Agriculture, St. Louis, Mo., so that subscribers may receive that valuable paper a whole year for 50 cents, which is just half of the regular price. It is generall conceded that the Journal of Agriculture is one of the finest and most influential farm and household papers in the United States, and that it holds a secure position among the leading lights of the agricultural world. It was established in 1866 (36 years ago) is published weekly and contains 16 large pages, Numbered among its contributors are men whose articles on agricultural matters are accepted as authority. Every issue contains valuable pointers on agriculture, horticulture, poultry, live stock, dairy, bees, etc., besides fiction, poetry, humor and miscellaneous matter. Once a month a beautiful 16-page Magazine, with cover of special design, is issued by the Journal, which appeals especially to the ladies owing to the stories, fashion notes and other fine reading matter contained therein.

The special price of 50 cents hardly pays postage and is only made to introduce the Journal into the homes of our readers. All those who wish to take advantage of this offer will please send 50 cents (in stamps if desired) to the editor of the KLEMME TIMES. Klemme, Iowa. who will arrange at once for a year's subscription in their favor to the Journal of Agriculture. Mention this offer and write name and full address plainly.

Holds Up a Congressman.

"At the end of the campaign" writes Champ Clark. Missouri's brilliant congressman, "from overwork, nervous tension, loss of sleep and constant speaking I had about utterly collapsed. It seemed that all the organs in my body were out of order, but three bottles of Electric Bitters made me all right. Its the best all-around medicine ever sold over a druggist's counter." Over-worked, run-down men, and weak, sickly women gain splendid health and vitality from Electric Bitters Try them. Only 50c. Guaranteed by J. L. Harr.

HOW MANY—

Men give to the alms seeker without regard to worthiness.

Women have no idea as to how men pass their leisure hours.

Women think it no harm to resort to trickery to appear to advantage.

Women fail to appreciate the struggle it is for a man to meet financial demands.

FUNSTON MUST STOP TALKING

President Says He Must Not Discuss Public Questions Hereafter.

NOT TO SPEAK AT A BANQUET

The General Had Been Talking Too Freely of Late, and Had Applied for Leave of Absence in Order to Address the Middlesex Club, of Boston.

Washington, April 24.—By order of the president, General Funston has been directed to cease further discussion of public questions. Acting Secretary of War Sanger has addressed the following letter to General Frederick Funston:

"War Department, Washington, April 22nd. Sir: I am directed by the president to instruct you that he wishes you to cease further public discussion of the situation in the Philippines and also to express his regret that you should make a senator of the United States the object of public criticism or discussion. Very respectfully, Wm. Carey Sanger,

"Acting Secretary ofWar."

The president has telegraphed General Funston not to speak at the Middlesex banquet in Boston.

At a banquet last Saturday night of the Colorado Sons of the Revolution, General Funston is reported to have said of Senator Hoar: "I have only sympathy for the senior senator from Massachusetts, who is suffering from an over-heated conscience."

Probably what caused the issue of this particular letter was an application from General Funston for leave of absence in order that he might attend the banquet to be given in Boston by the Middlesex club. It wasn't understood that he was to deliver another address there and as the president deprecates the discussion of public questions in this fashion by United States officers and officials, this letter was sent. The request for leave of absence was refused. A copy of Mr. Sanger's letter was forwarded to Senator Hoar.

SECRETARY SHAW HEARD.

Spoke at Pittsburg on Subject of "The Governmental Evolution."

Pittsburg, April 28.—At the Sixteenth annual dinner of the Americus Republican club, in commemoration of General Grant, Secretary Shaw, of the treasury department, spoke on "The Governmental Evolution."

Secreatry Shaw in a few eloquent sentences traced the development of the country from scattered colonies, each independent of the other, and not infrequently antagonistic, to its present commanding position as a unified sisterhood of states. In concluding he said:

"Gentlemen, we must have the largest merchant fleet ever kissed by ocean breezes and these carriers of international commerce must be built of American material, in American yards, by American labor. They are to be manned by American sailors, fired by American coal, or more probably oil, and they are to float the stars and stripes. Whether this will be accomplished through direct aid or by American patriotism and by American energy, I cannot say. Whether this sonsummation shall be contributed to by statesman or achieved by financiers is immaterial compared with the importance of the thing itself. American wealth, American energy plus Hawaii, which is ours, plus the Philippines which are ours, plus the Isthmian canal which we will surely construct, plus a merchant marine which we will surely build, transfers the sovereignty of the Pacfiic ocean from the union jack to the stars and stripes."

ALLISON ON CUBAN BILL.

Senate Will Not Accept the House Amendment.

Chicago, April 28.—"Reciprocity in some form will be granted to Cuba" was the statement made by Senator Allison, who stopped in Chicago a few hours and left the city for Washington. He was in doubt as to the exact form which legislaion for the island will assume.

Senator Allison said: "Some form of reciprocity will undoubtedly be granted the island people at this session of congress, but what that form will be no man knows at this juncture. I should not care to forecast."

"Do you think it will take the recent form of the house amendment?"

"No."

"Will the beet sugar interests of the west be looked after at all?"

"The amendment as passed by the house will not be repeated by the senate. That does not mean, however, that the beet sugar interests will not be cared for."

"Will the army reorganization bill be disposed of at this session of congress?"

"No. I can state positively that it will not be acted upon at this session."

"Is that because the session is to be cut short?"

"No. Congress will not adjourn until the last of June. I do not care to say why the bill will not be taken up."

"The difference between my husband's club and mine," said the pretty woman in the turquois colored toque, lookinng at her watch, "is that mine lasts from 2 until 6, and his lasts from 6 until 2."

ALABASTINE A Durable Wall Coating

NOT A KALSOMINE

"Faugh! Use your nasty decaying kalsomine? No, sir! ALABASTINE is what I asked for and what I want."

Forms a pure and permanent coating and does not require to be taken off to renew from time to time. Is a dry powder, ready for use by mixing with cold water.

FOR ALL WHO CAN COUNT THE DOTS.

THE PRIZES AND CONDITIONS OF THE CONTEST

This contest and the awarding of the prizes will be conducted under the following conditions and subject to the following directions: The prizes will be awarded in the order named below, to those registering the correct or nearest corrrect number of dots in the puzzle on this page:

| First Prize..$1,000.00 | Second Prize...$500.00 | Third Prize...$250.00 | Fourth Prize...$100.00 |

The Fifth to the 2,999th Prizes Will Aggregate Balance of the $5,078.00.

If two or more counts are tied for one or more prizes, an equal division of the contested prizes will be made. All counts must be sent in by mail, but no counts will be registered bearing postmark of any office within the corporate limits af Minneapolis or St. Paul.

DECISION OF CORRECT COUNT.

A positive guarantee is given that no person, directly or indirectly connected with The Tribune, not even the Dot Editor, knows the number of dots, nor will they know until after the official count is made. When the contest is closed the dots will be counted by J. R. Colburn, of New York City, the originator of the Dot puzzles; and he will furnish The Tribune an affidavit of the correct count. This affidavit, when certified by the judges of the contest, shall be conclusive on all parties as to the correct count. Mr. Colburn will not make the count of the dots until after the contest, and no one can possibly know the official count until then.

THE JUDGES.

The three judges named below will decide under the conditions of the contest who are the winners of the prizes offered, and they will render their decision in writing. This decision so made shall be final and binding upon all parties to the contest; and the prize money shall be paid out on the order of these judges to the winners as so determined by them. These judges will certify the official count to be made by Mr. Colburn. The Tribune has already deposited $5,078 in the First National Bank of Minneapolis, where it will remain until disposed of to the winners according to the conditions of the contest. A forfeit of $1,000.00 will be paid to any one who will disprove this statement. The judges will be:

Rear Admiral J. F. R. Foss, formerly President Nicollet National Bank, and Vice President First National Bank, Minneapolis.

Hon. Robert Pratt, ex-Mayor of Minneapolis.

THE DOTS.

The counting is prefectly free.

The more counts you register the surer you are of winning one of the big free cash prizes, of the $5,078.00 in gold.

Somebody is going to win the first prize, $1,000. Accuracy in registering your count is all you require to win $1,000, or the $500, or the $250, or the $100, or any of the other 2,999 free cash prizes.

If you can count, win the first prize, $1,000. Think of the mortgage you can raise with it, or the farm land it will buy for you. The other dot contests helped a number of farmers to pay off their mortgages. After all your labor, did you, or did your farm, clear $1,000 the past year? It will take only a little time and less toil to win this $1,000.

Start the children counting. A 16-year-old girl won the $100 in a former Tribune Dot Contest. Such contests sharpen the eye-sight and quicken the wits. No other employment will pay so generously as successfully counting the dots.

THE BEST WAY TO WIN.

Say ten friends, including yourself, club together, each sending in a count. One of you will possibly win the $1,000. The prize can then be divided among the members of your club—winning $100 for each of you. Each of you will have had ten chances of winning any one of the 2,999 prizes—or 29,990 opportunities of getting a portion of the $5,078.00. Your club may consist of any number. Or, do not form any club at all. Simply go after the prizes yourself, for yourself. You get all the advantages of a club of ten when you pay $5,00 for five years' subscription and ten registered counts, giving you, yourself, 29,990 chances of winning some of the $5,078.00.

The count is absolutely free. Every dollar is applied on your subscription. Each time you pay for a year's subscription you may register a count.

The Farmer's Twice-a-Week Tribune

Is the busy man's newspaper; all the latest news boiled down for ready reading, published Tuesdays and Fridays each week, 104 issues a year—less than a cent a copy. Each issue has a short story by one of the best writers and a part of a serial story, fashions and current illustrations, and, above all, the best Market Reports published.

IMPORTANT DIRECTIONS.

Read With Care Before Sending in Your Counts—These Conditions Must Be Complied With.

1. Write your count, name and address very plainly. If you are an old subscriber, write your name on your coupon just as it is on the red tab on your paper.
2. Say just what your count is without any "ifs" or "ands"—make it plain.
3. Be sure to state whether or not you are now taking The Farmers' Tribune.
4. Do not waste your time and ours by asking questions and writing letters. They only hinder us and delay recording your count.
5. Counts and money must come together by mail. Telegrams are useless.
6. Remit by postoffice order, express order, check or bank draft. We will not be responsible for cash sent by unregistered mail. Do not remit in stamps unless absolutely necessary. No count will be registered unless you send the remittance with it.
7. Do not send more counts than your remittance entitles you to. If you pay $1 for one year's subscription, you can register one count. If you pay $3.00 at one time for three yars' subscription, you can register four counts; if you pay $4.00 at one time for four years' subscription, you can register six counts; or better still, pay $5.00 at one time for five years' subscription and get ten registered counts.
8. Two or more contestants may have their remittances applied on the same subscription, but be sure to give the name and address of the person who is to get the paper.
9. Should you forget to send your remittance with your count, send the count again when you do send your remittance.
10. For extra counts, the total remittance must be sent at one time, together with the counts, in the same envelope. For instance, if you want ten registered counts, you must send $5.00 and the ten counts at one time.
11. No one connected in any way with The Tribune can be a contestant.
12. No one residing in Minneapolis will be permitted to enter this contest. The Farmers' Tribune will not be sent to any Minneapolis address, and for the purpose of this contest, no count mailed in Minneapolis or St. Paul will be recorded.
13. All subscriptions paid prior to this contest, or sent in separate envelope, or paid through any local agent, will not be entitled to a registered count.
14. Counts cannot be changed or money refunded after they have been mailed to The Tribune office. If you have made a mistake, send another remittance with your new count.
15. Not more than one of the first four prizes will be awarded to the same person or to members of one family.
16. Your paper and receipt will be sent you just as soon as possible. It may take a week or ten days, so do not get anxious about it. Every remittance is acknowledged in the order of its receipt.
17. This contest closes Thursday, May 31, at 11 p. m., and money received after that hour and date will be applied on subscriptions, but the counts will not be registered.
18. After you have filled out your coupon read all directions over again carefully so that you are absolutely certain the coupon is PROPERLY FILLLED OUT.

PE-RU-NA CURES CATARRH OF KIDNEYS EVERY TIME.

DANGEROUS KIDNEY DISEASES CURED

"For years I suffered with catarrh of the kidneys contracted in the army. Medicine did not help me any until a comrade who had been helped by Peruna advised me to try it. I bought some at once, and soon found blessed relief. I kept taking it four months, and am now well and strong and feel better than I have done for the past twenty years, thanks to Peruna."---T. H. Mars.

Mr. John Vance, of Hartford City, Ind., says: "My kidney trouble is much better. I have improved so much that everybody wants to know what medicine I am using. I recommend Peruna to everybody and some have commenced to use it. The folks all say that if Dr. Hartman's medicine cures me it must be great."—John Vance.

Mr. J. Brake, of Petrolea, Ontario, Canada writes: "Four years ago I had a severe attack of Bright's disease, which brought me so low the doctor said nothing more could be done for me. I began to take Peruna and Manalin, and in three months I was a well man and have continued so ever since."---J. Brake.

At the appearance of the first symptom of kidney trouble, Peruna should be taken. This remedy strikes at once the very root of the disease. It at once relieves the catarrhal kidneys of the stagnant blood, preventing the escape of serum from the blood. Peruna stimulates the kidneys to excrete from the blood the accumulating poison, and thus prevents the convulsions which are sure to follow if the poisons are allowed to remain. It gives great vigor to the heart's action and digestive system, both of which are apt to fail rapidly in this disease.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

TAXES ARE NOT AN OFFSET.

Cannot Be Used to Reduce Moneys and Credits.

Des Moines, April 28.—In the district court Judge McVey decided the appeal of Henry Hutsonpiller from the board of review against Hutsonpiller.

Appellant is a wealthy farmer residing in the east part of the city and when his assessment of moneys and credits was made a year ago, claimed an offset of the amount of taxes he owed the county January 1, as against them, claiming that under the law he is permitted to offset all debts and that his taxes due then amounted to $1,350.

Judge McVey in rendering his decision said:

"Whatever may be the status of the question as to whether or not taxes are such a debt as to be enforcible in an action at law, it is certainly true that our court has not determined the question which is at issue in this case, which question is, 'Can the amount of taxes assessed against the property holder and unpaid be deducted from the amount of his moneys and credits under the statutes of this state permitting deduction for ordinary debt?'

"This question must be determined in view of certain general principles necessarily involved in the construction of the statute in question: That the statute was intended to permit a citizen to deduct from his moneys and credits his ordinary debts is without question, that a tax due and unpaid is a debt is also conceded, but when we take into consideration the fact that taxes are levied for the sovereign power and authority for the purpose of carrying on the functions of that power and authority it was within the contemplation of the legislature to exempt from taxation, or deduct such tax for moneys and credits, it is an entirely different question.

"I am of the opinion that the legislature by the enactment of the statute in question intended that is should be applied to the ordinary debts of the taxpayers, but did not contemplate that the whole volume of taxes levied and assessed for one year amounting to many millions of dollars should be offset as a debt when the property of the citizen the following year be listed for taxation."

QUESTION OF BANK TAXES.

Merriam and Bremner Take the Same Position.

Des Moines, April 26.—State Auditor Merriam holds the same position as City Solicitor Bremner on the question as to whether bank stocks should be assessed at their cash value, and whether government bonds owned by the banks should be deducted from the cash value of the stocks. In a recent opinion the city solicitor held there should be no such deduction and that it was the duty of the assessor to assess the stocks of national, state and savings banks at their cash value. It is learned that before delivering his opinion the city solicitor ascertained what the holding of the auditor of state was in these matters and that his opinion was in harmony therewith.

The fact is the agitation of this question is by no means confined to Des Moines. It is state-wide, and many inquiries are coming in to the revenue department of the auditor's office on this very point. The queries come mainly from assessors, and in advising them that the stocks of banks should be assessed at their cash value the auditor of state is backed up by the advice of the attorney general's office. The ground taken is that under section 1322 of the code there is no question that banks are not entitled to have their investments in government bonds deducted from their stocks, the wording of the statute being clear and specific. Under a decision of the supreme court in 1892, the contention of the banks would be sustained, but that decision was made before the code of 1897 took effect. In that code section 1322 appears as it now stands and it makes the previous opinion of the supreme court of no effect.

The state auditor and attorney general are willing to abide by this ruling until the courts shall decide otherwise. They are fully convinced of the correctness of their position, and City Solicitor Bremner is well fortified in his opinion.

Fremont Nearly Wiped Out.

Oskaloosa, April 25.—The town of Fremont, fifteen miles southeast of this city, was visited by a conflagration at two o'clock a. m. The fire was not controlled until noon. Seven buildings and part of their contents were destroyed. It is supposed that the fire was was of incendiary origin. the loss is $35,000, insurance $15,000.

Killed by Electric Current.

Boone, April 28.—While washing a horse with a hose, Henry Zoell grapped a swinging electric light wire with his other hand. A current of 11,000 volts passed through his body, killing him instantly. During the storm the light wire had been crossed by a trolley wire. The victim lived in Wisconsin and was a Philippine veteran.

SAYS HE ORDERED TO KILL.

Concession in Court Martial of General Smith at Manila.

Manila, April 26.—Trial by court martial of General Jacob H. Smith, on the charge of conduct prejudicial to good order and discipline began yesterday. General Lloyd Wheaton presiding. Col. Charles A. Woodruff, counsel for the defense, said he desired to simplify the proceedings. He was willing to admit General Smith gave instructions to Major Waler to kill and burn and make Samar a howling wilderness, that he wanted everybody killed capable of bearing arms and that he did specify all over ten years of age, as the Samar boys of that age were equally as dangerous as their elders.

She Would Not be Without It Now.

Neither would thousands of others. We refer to Vogeler's Curative Compound; it does so much good and seems to reach every form of stomach trouble, that people have found that it is the one true specific. And what are stomach troubles? The easiest answer is that three-quarters of all the diseases and ailments which affect us proceed from one form or another of stomach trouble.

Indigestion is one of the worst and most prevalent forms, but Vogeler's Curative Compound cures indigestion. Here is one instance:

Mr. W. Bowell, of 34, Priory Street, Winchester, Col., writes: "I wish to state that my wife has been taking Vogeler's Curative Compound for a long time, and it is the only thing that has done her any real good for indigestion, in fact nothing would induce her to be without a bottle now."

When we stop to seriously consider the fact, that this great remedy is made from the formula of one of the most eminent living London physicians, it is no wonder that people who have happily experienced the benefit to be derived from its use, will not now be without it at any cost.

A MOST LIBERAL OFFER

All our farmer readers should take advantage of the unprecedented clubbing offer we this year make, which includes with this paper the Iowa Homestead, its special Farmers' Institute editions, and the Poultry Farmer. These three publications are the best of their class and should be in every farm home. To them we add, for local, county and general news, our own paper, and make the price of the four one year only $1.45. Never before was so much superior reading matter offered for so small an amount of money. The three papers named, which we club with our own, are well known throughout the West, and commend themselves to the reader's favorable attention upon mere mention. The Homestead is the great agricultural and live stock paper of the west; The Poultry Farmer is the most practical poultry paper for the farmer, while the Special Farmer Institute Editions are the most practical publications for the promotion of good farming ever published. Take advantage of this great offer, as it will hold good for a short time only Samples of these papers may be examined by calling at this office.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

PEITZKE SELLS BLACKSMITH SHOP

Deal Closed Last Friday.---George Nissen is the New Proprietor.

Last week a deal was consummated whereby George Nissen becomes owner of the former Peitzke blacksmith shop. It was quite a surprise to everyone. Mr. Peitzke has run the shop here a number of years, and was just moving the building onto his lot south of the town hall when the deal was made, and the building was again moved, this time to the lot just across the street east.

We are not informed as to what Mr. Peitzke intends to do, but hope he and his estimable family will remain residents of Klemme.

George Nissen, the new owner, is a Klemme boy, and has been working for Mr. Peitzke the past three years. He is a first class workman and no doubt will enjoy a large trade. We wish him unbounded success.

DOINGS IN AND NEAR ELL CENTER

M. E. Peck, of Garner, had his men put down a well for Harry Rice last week.

Ed. Post has presented himself with a new top buggy.

Wyman Smith, of near Meservey, visited his nephew, Fred Ufford, last Friday. Mr. Smith's face wore a broad smile on account of a little grand daughter having come to live with his son Gilbert, who was formerly a resident of this place.

Like a Drowning Man.

"Five years ago a disease the doctors called dyspepsia took such a hold of me that I could scarcely go," writes Geo. S. Marsh, well known attorney of Nocona, Tex. "I took quantities of pepsin and other medicines but nothing helped me. As a drowning man grabs at a straw I grabbed at Kodol. I felt an improvement at once and after a few bottles am sound and well." Kodol is the only preparation which exactly reproduces the natural digestive juices and consequently is the only one which digests any good food and cures any form of stomach trouble. J. L. Harr.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, May 5, 1902.

Governor Cummins has appointed delegates to the American Congress of Tuberculosis to be held in New York city, May 14, 15 and 16. The list is as follows: Dr. H. H. Clark, McGregor; Dr. J. I. Gibson, Denison; Dr. C. F. Kellogg, Clinton; Dr. C. H. Preston, Davenport; Dr. W. E. Harriman, Ames; Dr. F. W. Porterfield, Atlantic; Dr. L. W. Lattig, Iowa City; Dr. J. R. Guthrie, Dubuque; Dr. E. E. Dorr, Des Moines; Dr. W. S. H. Matthews, Des Moines; Dr. D. McCrae, Council Bluffs; Dr. George P. Neil, Fort Madison; Dr. C. B. Adams, Estherville; Dr. W. S. Lessenger, Mt. Pleasant; Dr. R. P. Berry, Clermont; Dr. R. E. Coniff, Sioux City; Dr. A. J. Hobson, Hampton; Dr. E. Porterfield, Indianola; Dr J. W. Lauder, Afton; Dr. F. H. Little, Muscatine; Dr. W. J. Eyloff, Mason City; Dr. A. Poore, Cedar Rapids; Dr J. M. Emmert, Atlantic.

Governor Cummins has substituted the name of William C. Whiting, of Whiting, Monona county, for that of Park Holbrook, of Onawa, as the Eleventh district member of the St. Louis exposition commission. This was found necessary because Mr. Holbrook ceased to be a democrat in 1896, as publicly announced by himself.

Constant inquiries received in the office of the secrtary of the executive council show there is much misapprehension among the county auditors at to the laws that were enacted by the last general assembly. In some cases the auditors seem to be absolutely at sea on this question. In order to stop inquiries and afford information to auditors, Mr. Davison has prepared a circular which will soon be distributed. It contains a copy of the measure extending to July the time of making the railroad assessment, and also the measure to make the road tax laws conform to this extension. Facts are given as to the Anderson road law, which many auditors wrongly think has already gone into effect. The circular suggests the propriety of the auditors making the township officers acquainted with the changed conditions. The measure making the road tax law conform to the extension of the time of making the railroad assessment provides that at the April meeting the township trustees shall determine the rate to be levied for road purposes. Formerly the law required the amount to be levied to be fixed. The law required that three-fourths of the road taxes shall be collected by July 15. This is changed in the new law so as to require that three-fourths of the taxes locally assessed shall be collected by that time.

Secretary Wesley Green of the State Horticultural society has obtained estimates on the fruit crop of the state from the appearance of the plants on May 1. These estimates have come in from experiment station keepers and from numerous other sources. According to these estimates, as averaged, the prospects for fruit in general is not so good as it was early in April, though Secretary Green says the recent rains have been of great benefit. The outlook for small berries is poor, and grapes will not be plentiful. The peach crop of the state will be an entire failure as not more than 5 per cent of the buds are alive. The estimates on other fruits May 1, are given below, and also those of April 4, for comparison:

The Ames Commercial club held a meeting, at which Adjutant General Byers was present, for the purpose of considering the location of the encampment of the Fifty-first. General Byers looked over the proposed ground on the college farm. The committee of the club that was named to look up available grounds assured General J. R. Lincoln, colonel of the Fifty-first, that he would be given full control of the site, so that he might prevent teams in camp and the erection of refreshment stands.

The nine-moths-oid child of Mrs. Jos. Pearson of Clarinda was drowned by falling into a tub of water which its mother had drawn for the washing next day.

The remains of an unknown man were found in the woods near Dyersville. The body was that a man over 60, well dressed and wearing a Masonic pin. No evidence of foul play was apparent.

Charles McArthur, aged 25 years, of Cassville, Wis., who has been in Dubuque for several months, has suddenly disappeared. His family is prominent in Wisconsin. His wife received letters from him every day until April 11, but since that time nothing has been heard from him. The children were in Dubuque and Mrs. McArthur went to that city and at once began a search for her husband. Fear is now entertained that he was foully dealt with or drowned in the Mississippi.

THE NEWS IN IOWA.

Sam Hise, a young man employed at the John Ross farm, three miles south of Colfax, while taking care of a mule team was kicked in the forehead, breaking in the skull. His injuries are fatal.

Cole Schwers, a Burlingon brakeman, was killed three miles west of Cromwell by being struck by a pile driver used in building a bridge. He was rear brakeman on a freight train and evidently was on the side of the cars when passing the construction work and was caught and pulled from the train and so badly mangled that death resulted from his injuries in a short time. He was a man of family and lived in Creston.

The widow of Switchman Volker, who was killed in the Milwaukee yards at Dubuque while coupling cars, has been awarded a verdict for $9,000 in the federal court. The jury was out only twenty minutes. The verdict shows that where it is proven that a railroad company does not provide its cars with patent couplers and loss of life results from said negligence, the company is liable. These facts were clearly shown during the trial.

The first step in the fight between the independent stucco companies in Fort Dodge and those who have entered the combine known as the United States Gypsum company, has developed in the cutting of rates. Stucco has gone down to $2 a ton, and plaster out of Fort Dodge now sells at $2.50 a ton. The companies which have entered the combine are the Carbon Plaster company, the Iowa Plaster association and the Duncombe Stucco company. The Mineral City Plaster company and the Cardiff Gypsum company still remain outside.

Two months ago, in far away New York state, Spencer Woodworth, an old resident of Fort Dodge, renewed the romance of his youth, and, at the age of three score years and ten, married the sweetheart whom he had loved as the boy. A few days ago his lifeless body was brought back to Fort Dodge for interment. Death had abruptly ended his romance. Mr. Woodworth died suddenly from a stroke of paralysis. He had made Fort Dodge his home for years before leaving for New York state, where he had lived since his marriage. He leaves considerable property.

An early morning raid was made on the fishermen along the banks of the Big Sioux river a few days ago by posses of officers from Woodbury county, Iowa, and Union county, South Dakota, resulting in the capture of about twenty-five fish seins and the arrest of the fishermen. If no one calls to claim the property it will be destroyed under order of the court. Only a half dozen of the nets captured, were found set in the river. The remainder of the twenty-five were found on the bank. Few were on the Dakota side because there has been a rigid fish law in that state for some time. Most of the wholesale fishing in the Sioux has been done on the Iowa side of the river. The members of the Sioux City Rod and Reel club expect to raise a fund to be used in prosecuting violators of the fish laws, who have ruined the Sioux river for sportsmen.

At the closing session of the Red Cross convention held at Vinton, resolutions were adopted condemning in the most severe language possible State Auditor Frank Merriam, Albert M. Potter, formerly head of the Red Cross society of Waverly, and Dr. E. C. Spinney, of the Bankers' Union of Omaha. So drastic were the resolutions that counsel for the order advised their suppression and non-publication for fear actions for slander or libel might be brought. Acting on this advice the convention refused to give out the text of the resolutions. The committee on resolutions which drafted the document was composed of Bartle of Van Horn, Books of Sigourney and Kirk of Mason City. The resolutions are said to be the most vituperous and poignant ever adopted by any set of men anywhere assembled in the world. The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Henry and Herman Myers, who were arrested at Newton on suspicion that they had murdered and burned their step-father, Frank Lavelleur, have been released by the coroner's jury. After a full day's session of the coroner's jury the three men who composed the same were still unable to ascertain how Levelleur came to his death. A score of witnesses were examined and a large part of the time taken up in the examination of Henry Myers, one of Levelleur's sons-in-law, who was arrested and placed in a different cell from that of Herman, his brother, who was also suspected of the murder. One development almost proves the suspicion that the man was murdered, which is that a quantity of blood was found where the man's head was resting, which would not have been there had death been caused by suffocation from the smoke. It seems to be the general opinion that Levelleur was first murdered by being struck in the head, probably with an ax, and his body placed in the shed-like barn, after which timbers were thrown around the body and the barn set on fire. This theory is founded on the fact of the hole in the back of the man's head and the large amount of coals where the body was found. How the legs and arms were severed from the body cannot be accounted for unless it was that they were cut off after the man was killed.

Howard Padgett, aged 25, hanged himself with a halter at Ottumwa. He was crazed by the use of cocaine.

Dr. Vance, a prominent dentist of Ottumwa has been convicted of the crime of rape. The prosecuting witness was a little girl 12 years old.

Judge Vermillion in the district court at Ottumwa sentenced Edward Davison of Pekay to eight years in the penitentiary for an assault on Katie Gallagher of Eddyville. The complaining witness is 12 years old. The case aroused much feeling, and Davison narrowly escaped lynching at the time the crime was committed. His counsel, O. C. G. Phillips, of Oskaloosa, made a lengthy plea for a new trial, but the motion therefor was overruled.

Waterman's electric line from Winterset to Creston is beginning to show signs of being a reality. About two miles of grade has been made north from Creston. An excavation machine has been unloaded and will be started at once. The officers of the road say they will ask for a tax from the townships along the route, and petitions are already being circulated, asking the question of aid to be submitted to the voters in the different townships. The construction of the road will apparently not be delayed for this season.

A mad dog traversed three counties in southeastern Iowa and bit two people, both of whom are fearful that the bites will be fatal. The dog was first heard of at Brazil, in Appanoose county, where he bit a boy; next at Bunch, twenty miles to the east, in Davis county, and lastly at Salina, in Jefferson county, nearly fifty miles from Bunch, where Postmaster Long was bitten. It is not known that the same dog was in the three places, but the descriptions given correspond remarkably well. The long distance traveled makes the story almost too large to be believed. There is much aprehension through the counties named for fear that the dog will communicate the rabies to other animals and that there may, in this manner, be a large number of victims.

The efficacy of bloodhounds in criminal cases was demonstrated at Knoxville when the Huffnier hounds, the same as were used at Des Moines on the Peterson case, meted out speedy justice to a burglar capturing him almost red handed and finding such unmistakable evidence against him that it is now said he will plead guilty to the offense immediately and enter upon his sentence as soon as possible. Graham's store at Tracy, a few miles east of there, was burglarized. The hounds were sent to the scene of the crime the next day. They quickly caught the trail and ran directly to the residence of Ira Site. They rushed into the bed room occupied by Site and, after the man had been arrested, took up the trail and led the officers to an old barrel in which the stolen plunder was stored.

George Colomoskos, a Greek who has been in Perry for nearly a year, in partnership with James Gorgoris in a fruit stand, was found dead a few days ago on the river bank west of town, with a great hole in the back of his head. His partner says he got up early to go hunting. Not returning, his partner made a short search for him the following afternoon. On the next day a dog belonging to Frank Dodson came into town nearly starved. It was known that the man had taken this dog with him, and after being fed a party took the dog toward the river, and after being turned loose in the timber went directly to the spot where some boys had found the body a short time before. The dead man lay on his face, and at his feet a spot showed plainly where the faithful dog had lain for two days and nights. The man's gun, a single barrel breech loader, was found some fifty feet away, the stock broken and the barrel bent. A tree near by showed where the gun had been broken over it. There is no question but what the man was murdered, but why and by whom is a mystery.

Cleve Wilson, 22 years of age, had a most frightful experience near Lake Mills and will be a cripple for life. While at the Minneapolis & St. Louis depot at Albert Lea shortly after midnight he decided that he would take the fast train pulling out for the south for Fort Dodge. He jumped on the steps of the coach, but, the train being a vestibuled one, he could not get inside. On the steps and hanging to the handles on the side of the coach he rode for twenty-eight miles, and in a few minutes would have been in Forest City, where the train makes its first stop from Albert Lea. He endeavored to change his position, and in doing so his feet slipped off from the steps and his left foot went under the wheel. He was forced to loosen his hold and was hurled a distance of forty feet ahead and down the embankment five feet high into a soft and muddy spot, which evidently kept him from receiving worse injuries. On recovering his consciousness he tried to stand on his feet, but fell down each time, and then noticed for the first time that his left foot had been crushed just below the ankle. He then crawled up the embankment and, seeing an elevator in the distance, dragged himself on hands and knees to the town of Leland, where the elevator was, about three-quarters of a mile distant.

CYCLONE STRIKES IOWA

GREAT DAMAGE WROUGHT BY WIND STORMS.

Twister Started Near Lohrville and Visited Bayard, Van Wert and Hiteman.

Lohrville, May 3.—A cyclone struck the residence of J. W. Munirni, a farmer residing four mile southeast of Lohrville in the northwest section of the state at 8 o'clock Thursday evening, injuring six persons, the father, mother and four children. The mother is in a serious condition from concussion of the brain and will likely die. The house and outbuildings were completely demolished. A school house was also torn to pieces and several barns wrecked. A terrific hail storm followed, breaking the glass in a number of houses at Lohrville.

The farm presents a horrible sight, every growing thing and every building having been razed to the ground. That any member of the family survived was remarkable, as they were caught up by the wind at the same time the house was whirled into a million pieces, and borne several hundred yards before striking the ground.

Bayard, May 3.—One of the worst storms that has visited this section for years, struck this point Thursday night blowing the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul depot down, wrecking the elevators and fifteen dwelling houses. One man, David Harden, was badly hurt and may not survive. The worst of the storm came about 7:45 and was cyclonic in its character. Small outbuildings were blown from their foundations. It was a genuine twister and moved with terrific force. It left a trail of devastation over a hundred yards wide. The funnel-shaped cloud was plainly distinguishable as it approached and passed away. It moved from west to east and lasted about a minute. David Harden was unable to escape from its path and seized a tree to which he clung while the wind whirled him around and around so rapidly that his form could hardly be distinguished by the horrified spectators who were out of the storm's path. After the wind had passed, Harden was picked up in an unconscious condition and he did not regain consciousness until the next morning. His condition is precarious.

Van Wert, May 3.—A cyclone of unusual fierceness visited this section of the state Thursday night striking in the immediate locality of Van Wert at about 9 o'clock. The entire northern part of the county was storm-struck, dwelling houses and barns being blown from their foundations. Telephone and telegraph wires were also badly damaged.

At Weldon, northeast of this place, a farm house was destroyed and three children injured.

The cyclone started six miles south of Van Wert and moved in a northeasterly direction, passing one mile east of the town. A dozen farm houses in its path one hundred yards wide, were wrecked and three members of one family residing east of Van Wert, sustained broken limbs. The storm blew with terrific force and had it struck a more thickly neighborhood, would have wrought great havoc.

Those injured follow:

Mrs. Mary O'Hare, aged 72 years, arm broken and badly bruised.

Mrs. J. W. O'Hare, stomach lacerated and back wrenched.

Mrs. O'Hare's four-year-old child, arm broken and numerous flesh wounds.

Mrs. Monroe Williams, serious bruises and possible internal injuries.

The Tabler farm was the next in the path of the storm. Several hundred chickens were killed and many others were literally stripped of their feathers, but otherwise uninjured.

The farm of John Mitchell was next struck and all outbuildings demolished. The residence was fortunately out of the path of the storm.

Ottumwa, May 3.—A cyclone tore a path two hundred feet wide a half mile west of Hiteman at 9 o,clock Thursday night. Two farm houses were demolished and a herd of cattle were killed. Hundreds of Hiteman people saw the two funnel shaped clouds come together and watched the destruction it wrought.

COUNTRY FACES DANGERS.

Cummins Says Monopolies Are a Menace to Present Prosperity.

Minneapolis, Minn., May 1.—Governor A. B. Cummins of Iowa was the guest of honor at a banquet given by the Fourth Ward Republican club of this city last night. In a strong address Governor Cummins took advanced ground on the question of trusts and monopolies and declared that in them lurked a menace to the safety of the country. He was given an enthusiastic reception and his address brought forth the liveliest applause and commendation.

Governor Cummins cited the United States Steel corporation by name as one of those combinations dangerous to the welfare of the nation. He also, by inference, struck at the Northern Securities merger in no uncertain terms and thus struck a responsive chord in the hearts of many of his listeners. In the closing part of his address Governor Cummins suggested some remedies for present evils, among them the cutting down of the tariff where it is used to shield monopolies.

Eggs to the value of $15,000,000 are annually sent to England from Russia.

IOWA GETS HER WAR CLAIM.

Treasury Department Would Give Her $456,417.89.

Des Moines, May 5.—Governor Cummins has been notified by the auditor of the United States treasury for the war department that the comptroller of the treasury has decided that Iowa is entitled to $456,417.89 on account of expenditures incurred during the civil war in equipping troops for the government. The auditor writes that the treasury has recommended the allowance of the Iowa claim on this basis. It is now up to congress. If the claim of the state were put upon the same basis as those of other states which have gained refunds through the court of claims, she would still be entitled to $229,699.62.

The letter from the auditor at Washington as received by Governor Cummins is as follows:

"I certify that I have examined and settled the claim of the state of Iowa in conformity with the principles announced by the comptroller of the treasury in his decision rendered in the 'Indiana case,' dated April 14, 1902, and find that there is due from the United States the sum of $456,417.89 for refundment of moneys paid as interest from July 1, 1861, to July 1, 1881, and for the discounts suffered and other expenses incurred in procuring funds to suppress the rebellion during 1861 to 1865; said allowance being based upon the decision of the comptroller of the treasury, dated April 14, 1902.

"Appropriation: 'Refunding to the states, expenses incurred in raising volunteers.' To be reported to congress under section 2 of the deficiency appropriation act of July 7, 1884.

"Payable to the governor of the state of Iowa, Des Moines, Iowa, when an appropriation shall have been made.

"I further certify that if this claim had been settled in accordance with the principles announced by the court of claims and followed by this office in the settlement of the claims of the states of Maine, Pennsylvania, New Hampshire and Rhode Island, already allowed and paid under the findings of that court, there would be due the state of Iowa from the United States on the above claim the sum of $229,699.62."

It is up to congress. If that body follows the decision of the treasury department, Iowa will get nearly a half million dollars. If it follows the decision in the Maine and other state cases we will get but a quarter of a million. Considerable speculation is being indulged as to whether the court of claims or the treasury recommendation will "go" with congress.

MRS. LEVELLEUR IS ACCUSED.

Mrs. Langree Testifies She Saw Blow Struck Which Killed Levelluer.

Newton, May 5.—The coroner's jury investigating the Levelluer case brought in a divided verdict at five o'clock. The jury had been in session for a week. L. A. Wells and and Jesse Miller signed a verdict declaring their belief that Levelleur was murdered by some person or persons unknown. Thomas Kilduss refused to sign the verdict, and brought in a minority document declaring his belief that Mrs. Levelleur was the murderer.

Mrs. Susan Langreen, a neighbor, testified that she was visiting at the Levelleurs on the day of the murder. She said that Mr. and Mrs. Lavelleur quarrelled at the dinner table and that soon after Levelleur ran out to the barn, which was seen to be on fire. Mrs. Langreen testified further that she saw Mrs. Levelleur follow her husband into the barn and, picking up an ax, twice strike her husband on the skull.

Mrs. Langreen said that Levelluer cried out, "For God's sake, Susan, help me!"

Therafter witness said Mrs. Levelleur covered the body with straw, poured kerosene over it and set it on fire. Witness did not go to the barn because she was too frightened.

Mrs. Levelleur was called to the stand and strenuously denied all of Mrs. Langreen's statements.

Herman Levelleur, aged 14, testified that when he saw the barn on fire he entered it to rescue a pet dog. His father and stepmother followed. Shortly afterwards he heard groans in the part of the barn where he supposed the couple were.

Mrs. Levelleur is under detention.

YOUNG FILES HIS ANSWER.

Answers Attorney General's Petition In Court.

Des Moines, May 2.—Lafe Young, former state binder, yesterday filed in the District Court his answer to the suit brought by Attorney General Mullan, in the name of the state, claiming $4,637.73 due as alleged overcharge for state bindery work.

Mr. Young in his answer denies all the allegations of the plaintiff's petition which are to the effect that he charged or received more than is allowed under the rates fixed by law; and alleges that every bit of the work done was examined by the proper state official, the secretary of state, and by him approved or disapproved as the occasion demanded, and that after the examinations the secretary of state, Hon. G. L. Dobson, audited the bills, checked them up and approved and allowed them, under the authority granted him under the law.

The ex-state binder's answer claims exemption on the ground that all the matters appearing as allegations in the court petition were known at the time of the work to Secretary of State Dobson and despite this the bills were examined and audited and found to be correct and the work authorized by law and paid for at the rates authorized in the same way.

By ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

CHAPTER XX.—(Continued.)

It seemed that the captain owned a house far off in the neighborhood of West Brompton, and into this he had moved the wreck of his fortunes, including his family.

The marquis waited a certain length of time.

To himself he declared many times that he intended this visit as a positive means of increasing his hold upon the captain's wife, over whom he seemed to be exerting some peculiarly hypnotic power, with the eventual aim in view of inducing her to leave home and seek some asylum on the continent.

For years he had looked forward to this same moment with the keenest anticipation; for years he had in his mind gone over every little detail, had seen her surprise and alarm, with his own great triumph, as he sent his shafts home with the arm of ample revenge; yet, strange to say, he did not approach the subject with the eagerness he had expected, the feverish thrill was only conspicuous by its absence, and he even started guiltily when from some distant part of the rambling old structure a peal of childish laughter was borne to his ears; there was something so condemnatory in the merry sound.

By degrees he brought the subject around to where he wanted it, and the manner in which he accomplished this declared that his strategic powers had not waned a particle.

"Have you had any American friends?" he asked.

"Yes, one," came the rather confused reply, and the listener knew he had caused her mind to revert to that unhappy past about which she even usually avoided thinking.

"Pardon me; but I once knew a poor fellow, an artist, out in Mexico, who said he had been well acquainted with Captain Livermore's wife," he went on deliberately.

"An artist," she echoed, looking pained, and yet showing an eagerness in her voice.

"Yes; by name Jack. I chanced to do him several favors, and he even confided his history to me. Poor fellow, he had suffered bitterly."

"Confided to you—then you know—" in alarm.

"That you and he were once betrothed—yes. That while he labored unceasingly in the hope of gaining fame and fortune, your love for him began to grow cold. He had been the means of reconciling you to your proud old English grandfather. In the whirl of society you met Captain Livermore, then the lion of the hour. You forgot to write to the man who believed in you as he did in Heaven. He came to London, unable to breathe outside your presence. Then you crushed him by declaring that while you still loved him, you loved position still more, and that you had agreed to marry the captain."

Fedora's head had fallen on her wildly heaving bosom, but she neither looked up nor uttered a word as yet, being too stunned as the tremendous revelation was forcing itself upon her mind.

He went on pitilessly!

"Jack sought a quarrel with the man who had robbed him of all he had on earth—perhaps you never knew of it, but they met at dawn in the deadly duello, each determined to kill the other. The captain, as they advanced toward each other, fired first and only inflicted a wound. He was then at Jack's complete mercy, since he was allowed the privilege of walking up as close as he pleased and sending a ball through the heart of his adversary."

Fedora groaned, but never moved.

"The captain was no coward; believing his hour had come, he deliberately opened his coat and awaited the fatal shot, his eyes looking into those of the man he had wronged without knowing it. Twice Jack took aim, but each time he failed to pull the trigger. Finally he raised his pistol, fired in the air and fled from the scene."

For the first time she raised her head and looked at him, her troubled face marked by conflicting emotions.

"Then came the wedding, which poor Jack saw from the organ loft, enduring the tortures of the damned while the woman whom heaven had given to him was united by law to man she did not love.

"Then he fled from London as from a place accursed and sought fortune's smiles upon a new field, hating women because one had been false to her vows, and always hugging to his heart the resolution to some day return and take full satisfaction for that treachery.

"That was Jack's story—doubtless other men have suffered in the same way from a woman's hand, but none more cruelly. And yet it seemed that fortune took a strange delight in compensating him his loss by throwing into his hands the most wonderful treasure ever k[illegible] surpassing all tales from the[illegible]ces on barb and Solomon downer Bros. I know all you would say, and be sure, I have steeled my heart against all arguments. What I seek is only justice—a fair equivalent. I have suffered, God only knows how much. It is your turn."

He looked like a man of stone, upon whom pleading and tears would be wasted.

Fedora attempted neither at first—she seemed to act and speak as if in a dream, for his influence, whatever it sprang from, dominated her personality to a remarkable extent.

Had it been so in those days of yore Fedora would never have willingly given him up.

"You speak of heaven in the same breath with vengeance—surely you cannot believe, Jack, that God approves of such things. I did wrong you, oh, most grievously; but I have bitterly repented it ever since, and hoped the day might come when I could tell you so. Often I have wept to remember your despair. It has been the one black spot upon my life, and kept me from being truly happy. But, Jack, won't you forgive if you can never forget—see, I plead with you; hold this wretched remembrance no longer against me. Be my friend, my brother. You already respect my husband; why be the means of his ruin?"

"While I cannot forget, I must not forgive. You have not yet begun to know what suffering means. When the world seems dark and your soul prays for death——"

"But, Jack, stop; consider; you cannot have revenge upon me without injuring my children," she said, suddenly remembering his weakness of old, and how a child had never appealed in vain so long as he had a sou left.

This was a harder task than the other, and the indomitable marquis was compelled to grit his teeth in the endeavor to stem the signs of retreat that threatened to overwhelm him.

"I regret exceedingly that they must suffer, for I am not that cruel to desire through their hold on your heart to inflict pain on you; but as I, an innocent party, once paid the penalty of your sin, so they, too, must inherit the legacy."

"Is there no way in which you may be satisfied without the burden falling on them?"

"I know of none. They must suffer when you do, all being members of one family. It is fate."

"Jack, have mercy!—see, on my knees I beg you to forgive. It is true I wronged you most fearfully. God knows, I am wretchedly sorry. But out of that wrong has come your bright fortune, and, perhaps, Jack, some more worthy woman may fill the place in your heart I once occupied. Forget the past and live for the future. Grasp them before they have flown. Rise above this spirit of revenge upon a weak, wretched woman, who in her thoughtlessness did you harm and lived to repent. Already you have as you say brought ruin upon us, and cast us out from society. For that I care little; but for God's sake, leave me the love of my husband, my children."

It was enough to melt a heart of ice, and reason combined with emotion in the argument. Had not the marquis threshed this same straw himself almost daily—had it been thrust suddenly upon him, he must have been fairly overwhelmed.

It was not his design that Fedora should see any sign of weakness in his manner, and he maintained the same passionless exterior he had shown through the whole interview.

"I promise nothing. Only this I say, that your children have doubtless saved you from a fate that might have come upon you. I do not relent, I simply change my tactics, and for their sakes spare you that humiliation, that shame. What further means of punishment I may decide to invoke you will know in good time. As you sowed so must you reap. That is the law of recompense, of stern justice. Therefore, weep over your wretched lot, and bitterly regret that false step in which you were tempted by pride. I do not dare remain here longer in your presence. At least thank heaven that I have decided to abandon the plan upon which I was working as unworthy of an honorable man.

"You are going, Jack?"

"Yes."

"Without seeing the children?" pressing a button while he was not looking.

"They remind me too bitterly of what you, their unhappy mother, seemed to me in the long ago—all innocence and trusting love. No, I don't wish to see them now."

"Oh, Jack, be reconciled—I shall pray daily that you cease to hate me, for the sake of those little ones. Did you know the boy's name is Jack?"

"What!" he gasped, weakening. "Do you mean to say your husband allowed you to do that—and I the man you loved? Incredible!"

"I told him all, and it was he who first proposed it. You don't know his generous nature. I can see now what it was so disturbed him—you took his fire and freely gave him his forfeited life. Oh! wretched woman that I am to have been loved by two such noble men, and to have brought sorrow to both. Who will deliver me from the bondage of my sin?"

As if in answer to her forlorn cry the patter of little feet sounded somewhere—the marquis, alarmed at his own weakness, turned to fly, but made a miscalculation, for in the hall he was waylaid by the enemy, who rushed upon him with exultant cries.

He made a swoop for the little girl and swept her up in his arms, until her golden curls nestled against his shoulder when he kissed her pouting lips again and again.

Then came the boy, to whom he had paid so little attention before. Now he held him off at arm's length, where he could look into his resolute face and bold black eyes—yes, he was surely the image of what Livermore must have been as a lad, and yet, and yet, strange to say, the marquis actually believed he could see some traces of his own characteristics in the boy—learned philosophical and psychological scholars and doctors have long argued this point, and agreed that it is not only possible, but actual—the image of her first love still remained strong in Fedora's heart at the time the child was born.

Kissing the youngster, the marquis hastily quitted the house, followed by the anxious gaze of the wretched Fedora, until the children, astonished at the strange actions of their friend, loudly bewailed his flight, and demanded her attention.

Weep no more tears of repentance and fear, wife and mother, since the seed has been sown and the harvest must come in due season—that name of Jack, together with the captain's generosity, proved the last straw that broke the camel's back.

CHAPTER XXI.

"Love has redeemed me!"

The game was drawing near its close.

With each struggle that iron will of the marquis, which had been the marvel and admiration of his friends, came out much weaker.

Perhaps the thing that had the most decided influence upon him was the startling conviction that there had been awakened within his heart a glow of love for the little miniature painter.

With the flower of love blossoming again in his heart he could hardly have continued in his former policy.

Should he be magnanimous and freely forgive or should he turn aside the bright vision that tempted him, shut himself up in a narrow compass and carry out the miserable plan of the past?

Thus he debated, pro and con. But it chanced that the marquis was not given an opportunity to fight his battle to a finish in the usually accepted term—there was a surprise in store for him, a flank movement, as it were, on the part of one who meant to be an ally, yet proved his worst enemy.

That person was the Spanish-American belle of San Jose.

It was on the evening following that when the marquis received such a shock at the hands of Fedora.

It was probably 11 o'clock when one of the hotel lackeys came with a card on a silver salver and presented it to the marquis.

This was a frequent occurrence, but on this special occasion those who were near by saw the usually cool nabob give a plain start.

Banks were deemed unsafe by Farmer Conrad, of Vestal, N. Y. His savings, amounting to $600, he carefully sewed in an old coat. Some days later his wife, a very economical lady, sold the coat to a junk dealer for five cents. With other rags, the coat was forwarded to a dealer in worn out raiment, and by this time coat and money have probably "gone where the woodbine twineth."

In this issue appears the announcement of S. B. Durant as a candidate for county auditor. Mr. Durant is a Madison township man, and the north end of the county has never been represented to any extent at the county capital. He has been assessor of Madison township three terms, and is very highly recommended by some of Hancock county's best citizens. The Corwith Hustler has the following to say concerning his candidacy:

Mr. Durant is a Hancock county boy, born and reared in Madison township. He has been a prominent and successful teacher in the county for years. He is a model young man, has no bad habits and is highly respected by his neighbors and all his acquaintances. And moreover he is thoroughly qualified for the position he seeks.

Honor to Whom Honor is Due.

The congressional convention for the 10th District will meet in Fort Dodge on the 13th inst., and Hon. J. P. Connor will be nominated to succeed himself in the position that he has filled with such signal satisfaction to the entire district and state.

Mr. Connor is one of those unobtrusive but energetic men, of recognized force and influence in congress, and during the short time he has been there has won for himself an enviable reputation as one of the ablest and most painstaking members of the lower house. An intensely earnest student of the great problems now confronting the nation, his judicial mind, firmly moulded along practical lines by his extended experience on the bench, fits him peculiarly for weighing carefully and dispassionately the grave questions that are up for discussion and decision, and few there are among the members of that turbulent body who devote more research and exhibit more penetration into the merits of proposed enactments than he. And, standing with that as his personality before his colleagues, and fortified by his well known probity of character, he is easily recognized as one of the coming factors in national affairs, and the district and state will be fortunate in continuing him in a position where his abilities are of such worth and necessity.

It must not be forgotten that Mr. Connor assumed a most difficult task when he succeeded Johnathan P. Dolliver to his seat in congress. Few more trying ordeals could be imposed upon a man than to ask him to take the seat vacated by such a giant. For many years Senator Dolliver has stood as one of the most notable intellectual Titans within the walls of that mighty, forensic arena. During all those years J. P. Dolliver had been known and recognized as one of the ablest leaders in advanced thought and action. For many years our peerless state had pointed with intensest pride to Jno. P. Dolliver as our grand exponent and advocate on that floor, possessing our profoundest esteem and confidence, and during all those many years, when the voice of Iowa's 10th district member was raised in debate it never failed to command the most respectful attention, and his influence was always to be reckoned with by his fellow members in the settlement of all great, national questions.

Mr. Connor was called upon to fill the seat made vacant by the promotion to the senate of such a man as that. In taking such a trust upon himself Mr. Connor assumed a task that would have overwhelmed many men of high pretensions, but it is not in evidence that he has failed in any instance to discharge his duties with eminent credit to himself, his district and his state. In so doing he has stamped himself as a worthy and reliable successor of the brilliant, versatile and aggressive Dolliver, whom All Iowa so delighted to see promoted to the seat in the senate so honorably and conscientiously filled by the lamented Jno. H. Gear.

These are a few of the many cogent reasons why Mr. Connor will be nominated to be his own successor. His renomination will only be emphasizing Iowa's long established custom, firmly popularized by the exalted position occupied by her bright galaxy of statesmen now so prominently at the front of afiairs in Washington, as a result of such policy, which has been to first. select the best men procurable as members of her national delegation—and then to keep them there until ripened, matured, experienced, tested and not found wanting by the nation at large, they have been successively called higher by the exigencies of their times into the most responsible places of power in the councils of our country. Although yet young in congressional service, Mr. Connor is already recognized as a strong potentiality, and the electors of the 10th district will only be doing honor to themselves and a credit to the state if they award to him his preferment by acclamation.

Dangerous if Neglected.

Burns, cuts and other wounds often fail to heal properly if neglected and beeome troublesome sores. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve prevents such consequences. Even where delay has aggravated the injury DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve effects a cure. "I had a running sore on my leg thirty years," says H. C. Hartly, Yankeetown, Ind., "After using many remedies, I tried DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. A few boxes healed the sore." Cures all skin diseases. Piles yield to it at once. Beware of counterfeits. J. ### Death of Mrs. Ida Neef.

This community was shocked and grieved last Saturday to hear of the death of Mrs. Ida Neff, which occurred that morning. Deceased was the daughter of Frederick and Ida Schwichtenberg, the latter of whom is a resident of Klemme. The immediate cause of her decease was peritonitis. She was born at Elkport, Iowa, on the eighth day of July, 1866, residing there until after her marriage to Dr. C. Neef in 1886.

Since then she lived in various cities until she with her three children, Olga, Hugo and Camilla, located in Klemme five years ago. She leaves the children, Mother Schwichtenberg, one brother John, of Germantown, and three sisters and many friends to mourn her loss.

Our whole community sympathize with the afflicted ones.

Herman Brockmeier, of Colesburg, and Mr. and Mrs. W. Berg from wilton Junction, were here to attend the funeral services, which were held Tuesday, conducted by Rev. Dultz.

PHILIPPINE DEBATE GOES ON

Republicans Change Their Tactics and Come to the Defense of the Administration and the Operations in the Philippines.

Washington, April 29.—Senate.—A spirited discussion of the Philippine situation occurred in the senate today. It revolved around the order alleged to have been issued by General Jacob H. Smith to make the island of Samar a howling wilderness and to kill all male inhabitants over the age of 10 years. The debate took a wide range, however, and many other points were discussed. When the Philippine bill was laid before the senate, no one was prepared to deliver a set speech upon it. Lodge, of Massachusetts, in charge of the measure, said he felt compelled to press it for consideration.. His remarks drew the fire of Teller, of Colorado, who criticized the republicans for not participating in the discussion. This precipitated the debate and for more than two hours it continued. Teller declared that General Smith, if he had issued such an order as had been attributed to him, ought to be dismissed from the service, as it was a disgrace to the American army and to the American people. Lodge said that while he knew little of the circumstances surrounding the alleged order, he did not approve of the cruel methods in warfare, and every right-minded person must regret Gereral Smith's order. To him it was revolting. He defended the administration, however, saying as soon as knowledge of the order had come to Washington, the president had directd that General Smith be court martialed.

House.—Under a special order which allowed three hours' debate, but which cut off all opportunity of amendment, the house today passed an omnibus public building bill which will distribute $17,405,450 among 174 cities. As the bill covers into the treasury $1,585,000, the total amount carried by the bill is reduced to that extent. The bill provides for 77 new buildings and sites, six buildings on sites already purchased, seventeen on donated sites, and fifty-eight increases in appropriations for buildings already authorized. It also provides for the purchase of sixteen sites. The majority for the bill was so overwhelming that only nine members backed a demand for the ayes and noes on the passage of the bill. There was some criticism of the method by which it was proposed to pass the bill without opportunity for amendment, which Mercer, chairman of the committee, answered by stating that if the bill had been subject to amendment, the appropriation carried by it would have been increased to $60,000,000. The consideration of the agricultural appropriation bill was resumed, but only seven pages were disposed of.

Washington, April 30.—Senate.—A resolution offered in the senate today by Patterson, of Colorado, directing the secretary of war to order by cable Major Gardener, now in the Philippines to come immediately to Washington, to appear as a witenss before the Philippine committee, precipitated a warm discussion. The debate continued for about two hours, considerable feeling being manifested on both sides of the chamber. The charge was made by the minority that the majority of the committee was endeavoring to suppress facts and information. This was denied by the chairman of the committee, Lodge, who said that any such action would be inconceivably stupid. All parties, he insisted, were anxious for the fullest information, but he and others contended that it would not be advisable to cable to the Philippines for Major Gardener, as he was about to come home and would be here in time to appear before the committee. Patterson and Carmack, of Tennessee, urged that Gardener's testimony was particularly important, and that it ought to be had before action was taken on the pending bill. The resolution finally went over until tomorrow. The bill for the purchase of the Rosebud reservation in South Dakota and the sundry civil appropriation bill were considered, but no action was taken on tnem.

House.—The house today passed the agricultural appropriation bill and began consideration of the District of Columbia appropriation bill, the last but two of the regular supply measures. By the terms of a special rule adopted before the district bill was taken up, it will be in order to attach a rider to it to make operative the existing personal tax law of the district, which has been a dead letter for twenty years. Chairman Cannon estimated that there was $100,000,000 of untaxed personal property in Washington. The Goldfogle resolution, calling on the secretary of state for information as to whether American citizens of Jewish faith were excluded from Russia, was adopted.

Washington, May 1.—Senate.—Aguinaldo was the special subject of discussion in the senate today. As soon as the Philippine government bill was taken up, Carmack, of Tennessee, resumed his criticism of the Philippine committee because of its refusal to call Aguinaldo and other Filipinos as witnesses. He maintained that as reflections by witnesses had been cast on the character of Aguinaldo, he ought to be permitted, "in all decency," to defend himself. Carmack's contention was sharply combated by Foraker, of Ohio, McComas, of Maryland, and Burton, of Kansas. Culberston, of Texas, in support of a statement by Carmack that the war department had suppressed information and falsified the Philippine situation, presented a letter from the secretary of war which he thought was proof of the Tennessee senator's assertion. The secretary stated in the letter that it was not practicable to supply the information requested because no special account as kept of Philippine war expenses, and it would require the service of a large force of clerks to work out the information desired.

House.—The house gave most of the day to the District of Columbia appropriation bill, which was not completed. Shattuc, of Ohio, spoke on industrial conditions, and Gaines, of Tennessee, in criticism of conditions in the Philippines. The Burleson resolution, calling upon the war department for copies of all orders to the commanding officers in the Philippines, bearing on the operations in Samar under General Jacob H. Smith, was adopted.

Washington, May 2.—Senate.—A lively debate was precipitated in the senate today by Pritchard, of North Carolina, by some remarks he made on political methods in North Carolina, in the course of a discussion on the Philippine bill. He suggested that some of the methods employed by the opponents of the bill in this country ought to be reformed, and told of what is called the "sand cure" in North Carolina, the victim having his face crushed into the sand to stifle his cries while he was being beaten to intimidate him politically. Simmons, of North Carolina, declared that he never heard of such a practice, and the debate concerning North Carolina politics was fully launched. Pritchard charged that the "red shirts" rode over the state to terrorize republican voters. Simmons denied that statement and insisted that the "red shirts" never had committed any unlawful act, and as a matter of fact intended only to organize the voters of the state. The debate waxed warm, Pritchard declaring that he has been approached by an emissary of the democratic party with a proposition to drop the impeachment proceedings against republican judges in North Carolina if he would nolle prosequi the cases pending in the courts against certain democrats for election frauds. Simmons unqualifiedly denied that such a proposition had been made by authority of the democratic party.

House.—The house passed the anti-conspiracy bill reported from the judiciary committee without a word of debate. It came up rather unexpectedly and Littlefield, of Maine, who had filed a minority report on the bill and had intended to offer some amendments, came in just as it was put upon its passage and the vote was taken before he understood what was going on.

Washington, May 5.—Senate.—Discussion of the Philippine question became heated in the senate today. Thus far the minority has had a clear field in the debate, the policy of the majority being to permit the criticism of the democratic members of the body to proceed without interruption.

Today it was different. Spooner of Wisconsin, Lodge of Massachusetts and Foraker of Ohio became aroused. They made a defense of the administration, of the army, of Governor Taft, and then spoke hotly, almost unrestrainedly. The result was one of the most spirited debates that nas yet occurred on the Philippine question. While the debate took wide range, it revolved around the resolution calling for Major Cornelius Gardener, in the Philippines, to appear as soon as possible before the Philippine commission as a witness. A cablegram from Chaffee was read by Lodge saying that it was impracticable for Gardener to leave the islands at present, as he was a special ngure in a court of inquiry which was investigating the conditions in the province of which he was provisional governor. Both Morgan and Pettus indicated that they could see no good to come from a pursuit of the discussion, and the latter urged the withdrawal of the resolution. No action had been taken on the resolution when the senate adjourned on account of the death of Representative Amos J. Cummings of New York.

House.—The death of Representative Amos J. Cummings of New York in Baltimore last night caused general regret and sorrow in the house today. The blind chaplain, Rev. Dr. Couden, in his invocation, made a touching reference to Mr. Cummings' death, his great service to his country as a journalist and statesman and he prayed for those who had been near and dear to him by the ties of kinship. Resolutions expressing the sorrow with which the house heard of the death were adopted and it was decided to hold appropriate services in the hall of the house tomorrow. The public funeral ceremony in the house of representatives is an unusual tribute to the deceased member and it has been given in recent years only in the cases of Representatives Dingley of Maine and Kelly of Pennsylvania, both veterans of congregational service.

Government Grants Rehearing.

Madison, May 5.—A rehearing has been granted by the interior department on the claim of theWisconsin Oneida Indians for about $2,000,000 from the government for Kansas lands ceded to them in 1838, but which they never occupied. Assistant General Buell, who returned today from Washington where he was looking after the matter, is confident of securing a reversal of the ruling and the allowance of the claim.

MILLIONS USE CUTICURA SOAP

Assisted by CUTICURA OINTMENT, for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, for baby rashes, itchings, and chafings, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Millions of Women use CUTICURA SOAP in the form of baths for annoying irritations, inflammations, and excoriations, for too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women and mothers. CUTICURA SOAP combines delicate emollient properties derived from CUTICURA, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients, and the most refreshing of flower odours. No other medicated soap is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines, in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, the BEST skin and complexion soap, and the BEST toilet and baby soap in the world.

Cuticura The Set $1 Consisting of CUTICURA SOAP (25c.), to cleanse the skin of crusts and scales, and soften the thickened cuticle; CUTICURA OINTMENT (50c.), to instantly allay itching, inflammation, and irritation, and soothe and heal; and CUTICURA RESOLVENT PILLS (25c.), to cool and cleanse the blood. A SINGLE SET is often sufficient to cure the most torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, and scaly skin, scalp, and blood humours, rashes, itchings, and irritations, with loss of hair, when all else fails. Sold throughout the world. British Depot: 27-28, Charterhouse Sq., London. French Depot: 5 Rue de la Paix, Paris. POTTER DRUG AND CHEM. CORP., Sole Props., Boston.

CUTICURA RESOLVENT PILLS (Chocolate Coated) are a new, tasteless, odourless, economical substitute for the celebrated liquid CUTICURA RESOLVENT, as well as for all other blood purifiers and humour cures. Put up in screw-cap pocket vials, containing 60 doses, price, 25c. CUTICURA PILLS are alterative, antiseptic, tonic, and digestive, and beyond question the purest, sweetest, most successful and economical blood and skin purifiers, humour cures, and tonic-digestives yet compounded.

HOW CHEAP BAKING POWDER IS MADE.

The Health Department of New York has seized a quantity of so-called cheap baking powder, which it found in that city. Attention was attracted to it by the low price at which it was being sold in the department stores. Samples were taken and the chemist of the Health Department reported the stuff to be "an alum powder," which analysis showed to be composed chiefly of alum and pulverized rock.

The powder was declared to be dangerous to health, and several thousand pounds were carted to the offal dock and destroyed. It is unsafe to experiment with these so-called "cheap" articles of food. They are sure to be made from alum, rock, or other injurious matter. In baking powders, the high class, cream of tartar brands are the most economical, because they go farther in use and are healthful beyond question.

Mount Sangay is the most active volcano in the world. It is situated in Ecuador, is 17,120 feet in height, and has been in constant activity since 1728. The sounds of its eruptions are sometimes heard in Quito, 150 miles distant, and once 267 reports were counted in one hour.

Two years ago, in Inez, Ky., James Moore of Warfield, shot Thomas Runyan in the left kneepan. The victim became paralyzed, and died in ten days. A short time ago Wallace Brewer shot James Moore just as he had shot Runyan, in the left kneepan; paralysis resulted, and he died on the tenth day after receiving the wound.

In the line of millinery, Sir Jung Bahadur, the prime minister of the king of Nepaul, in India, wears a hat that outshines anything ever fabricated. It is ornamented with diamonds and other gems valued at $2,500,000. He is as proud of it is a young woman with a stylish new Easter bonnet, and never passes a mirror without glancing in to see if his hat is on straight.

PRESIDENT TALKS TO GRADUATES

Makes Strong Talk to Naval Cadets at Annapolis, Md.

AMERICA MUST BE SUPREME

In Case of War There Must Be No Defeat—Unless All Men on Warships Are Trained to Their Sense of Duty the Navy Must Suffer.

Annapolis, Md., May 3.—The special train conveying President Roosevelt and his party to Annapolis to attend the graduating exercises at the naval academy arrived here at 9:45 o'clock yesterday over the Pennsylvania railroad.

"In receiving these diplomas you become men who above almost any others of the entire union are to carry henceforth the ever-present sense of responsibility which must come with the knowledge that on some tremendous day it may depend upon your courage, your preparedness, your keen intelligence and knowledge of your profession whether or not the nation is again to write her name on the world's roll of honor or to know the black-shame of defeat.

"We, all of us, earnestly hope that the occasion for war may never come, but if it has to come then this nation must win; and the prime factor in securing victory over any foreign foe must of necessity be the United States navy.

"It cannot be too often repeated that in modern warfare and especially in modern naval war, the chief factor in achieving triumph is what has been done in the way of thorough and preparation and training before the beginning of the war.

"It is what has been done before the outbreak of the war that is all-important.

"A battleship cannot be improvised. It takes years to build, and the skill of the officers and crew in handling it aright can likewise never be improvised, but must spring from use and actual sea service and from the most careful, zealous and systematic training.

"You enter a glorious service, proud of its memories of renown.

"You must keep ever in your minds the thought of the supreme hour which may come when what you will do will forever add to or detract from this renown.

"Some of you will have to do your part in helping construct the ships and the guns which you use. You need to bend every energy toward making these ships and guns in all their details the most perfect of their kind throughout the world.

"The ship must be fight worthy, the armament fitted for the best protection to guns and men, the guns, in all their mechanism fit to be of the greatest possible execution in the shortest possible time.

"From now on throughout your lives there can be no slackness on your part.

"Your duty must be present with you, waking and sleeping.

"If the day for battle comes you will need all that you possess of boldness, skill, determination, ability to bear punishment, and instant readiness in an emergency.

"Officers and men alike must realize that in battle the only shots that count are the shots that hit and that normally the victory will lie with the side whose shots hit oftenest."

At the conclusion of his address and distribution of diplomas, the president requested he be taken to the hospital where Cadet Emory S. Long, of Wyoming, a member of the graduating class, was lying ill. Sitting up in bed the sick boy received his diploma from the president, who made a few appropriate remarks, in which he expressed the hope that he would soon be out. The president was then given an opportunity of witnessing the customary prank of the plebes throwing the graduating class out of quarters, which afforded a great deal of amusement.

EVANS GETS APPOINTMENT.

President Nominates Him for U. S. Consul General.

Washington, May 5.—The president has sent to the senate the nomination of H. Clay Evans as United States consul general at London to succeed the late General Osborn.

At the national republican convention in 1896, Mr. Evans stood second in the balloting for the nomination of vice-presidency. Mr. Evans was made commissioner of pensions in 1897 and has held the office ever since.

Missouri Strawberry Crop.

Springfield, May 5.—Dr. E. Beal, one of the leading strawberry growers of Greene county, said that the strawberry crop would be two-thirds as large as it was last year. The drouth of last year killed some of the plants, but improved the quality of those which survived, and the berries will be finer than they were last year. The strawberry crop at Republic, in Greene county, has already been sold at a good price, and will be shipped to Denver, Colo. The harvest will begin about May 15.

From early youth Ambrose S. Ottey, of Cecil county, Md., has been an attentive reader of the Bible. He has read it from beginning to end 117 times, and informs us that it contains 1,189 chapters, 31,198 verses, 773,697 words and 3,566,480 letters.

It didn't seem right to spoil a day's sport, so the jailor at Fort Scott, Kan., temporarily liberated a couple of prisoners to make up the full quota of a local football team. The team was short handed, and was scheduled for a game. After the game the prisoners returned to the jail.

A lively old boy was Pierre Laverdure, who recently died at Lewistown, Mont., at the age of 111 years. He was born in the territory which is now North Dakota, in 1791. His father was a French Canadian trapper, who lived to be 112 years old, and his mother was a squaw, who died at the age of 120.

It is customary, at the continuous performance theaters, for the managers to send on the stage, toward the close of the afternoon, some of the most wretched actors. These are called "chasers," and they are instructed to do their best—which is their worst—to weary the patrons, and chase them out of the house, to make room for the night audience.

A Soldier's Narrow Escape.

Watts Flats, N. Y., May 5th.—George Manhart of this place, a hale and hearty old soldier of 80 years of age, tells a thrilling story of a narrow escape from death.

"Four years ago," he says, "the doctors who were attending me during a serious illness called my wife aside and told her that I could not live two weeks as I had Bright's Disease, which meant certain death.

"As a last resort we thought we would try Dodd's Kidney Pills, and accordingly sent to Mr. Clark's drug store and got a box.

"This remedy worked wonders in my case. I noticed the improvement at once and discharged the doctor.

"I kept on improving until every symptom of illness had gone and I was strong and well.

"I feel like a boy and to-day I am chopping wood as well at eighty as at twenty. Dodd's Kidney Pills did it."

Home Women.

There are women who devote their whole lives to home duties many of whom know what it is to drag along day after day suffering intensely. The symptoms are spinal weakness, dizziness, excitability, bearing down, all-gone feeling, and sudden faintness. The only safe and permanent cure for this is Vogeler's Curative Compound, which acts directly on the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys, and vital organs of the body. It removes all impurities from the blood. It imparts strength, vitality, and vigour in all cases from which "home women" suffer.

WORTH A KING'S RANSOM.

Saved From The Maelstrom of Catarrh

How Peruna Saves Lives

MRS. COL. E. J. GRESHAM, Treasurer Daughters of the Confederacy, and President Herndon Village Improvement Society, writes the following letter from Herndon, Fairfax county, Virginia:

Herndon, Va.

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

Gentlemen—"I cannot speak too highly of the value of Peruna. I believe that I owe my life to its wonderful merits. I suffered with catarrh of the head and lungs in its worst form, until the doctors fairly gave me up, and I despaired of ever getting well again.

"I noticed your advertisement and the splendid testimonials given by people who had been cured by Peruna, and determined to try a bottle. I felt but little better, but used a second and a third bottle and kept on improving slowly.

"It took six bottles to cure me, but they were worth a king's ransom to me. I talk Peruna to all my friends and am a true believer in its worth."
—Mrs. Col. E. J. Gresham.

Thousands of women owe their lives to Peruna. Tens of thousands owe their health to Peruna. Hundreds of thousands are praising Peruna in every state in the Union. We have on file a great multitude of letters, with written permission for use in public print, which can never be used for want of space.

Address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O., for a book written especially for women, instructively illustrated, entitled "Health and Beauty." Sent free to women.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,
F. A. WERMAN, 730 S. Broadway, Baltimore, Md.

WON OUT IN THE NINTH

Garner Indians Play in Great Luck and Snatch Victory From Seeming Defeat.--Notes.

A hotly contested ball game took place on the local diamond last Thursday afternoon between Garner and Klemme, Garner winning the game, score 8 to 5. At the end of the eighth inning the score stood 5 to 4 in Klemme's favor. Then came a sad happening. The ninth inning proved a hoodoo for our boys, and through costly errors in which everyone participated Garner was allowed to pile up a total of 4 runs. Klemme failed to score in their half which left the final score 8 to 5.

NOTES ON THE GAME.

It was a good day for rag-chewing and kicking.

The battery work of both teams was good.

A most amusing feature of the game was an event not advertised. A cow staked near the grounds, not liking the looks of right fielder Zeiger, proceded at once to make for him with the intention of wiping him from the face of the earth. Bossie came to the limit of her freedom however, and Zeiger breathed again. The crowd roared and the cow resumed her grazing as the game went on.

Geo. Schoper did some nice work in centnr field for Klemme.

The Garner boys came out in their new uniforms.

If it hadn't been for the fatal ninth, what a different story we would have had to tell.

Thursday was the first time our boys had played or even practiced together this season, and taking this fact into consideration, they did remarkably well.

J. H. Mulkins, of Goodell, and Frank Cassill. of Garner, were the umpires.

Like a Drowning Man.

"Five years ago a disease the doctors called dyspepsia took such a hold of me that I could scarcely go," writes Geo. S. Marsh, well known attorney of Nocona, Tex. "I took quantities of pepsin and other medicines but nothing helped me. As a drowning man grabs at a straw I grabbed at Kodol. I felt an improvement at once and after a few bottles am sound and well." Kodol is the only preparation which exactly reproduces the natural digestive juices and consequently is the only one which digests any good food and cures any form of stomach trouble. J. L. Harr.

A COMBINATION IS SAID TO EXIST

Bill Prepared by Attorney General Knox Against Beef Trust Is Filed.

WHAT THE TRUST WILL DO

If Demurrer, Claiming That Shipments Between Employer and Agent Are Not Interstate Commerce Is Overruled, the Charges Will Be Denied.

Chicago, May 12.—With the full approval of Attorney General P. C. Knox, representing the national government, District Attorney S. C. Bethea filed with the clerk of the federal court here a bill for an injunction, sweeping in character, designed to destroy the alleged giant conspiracy to illegally control the meat trade of the United States. The original of the bill was recorded the moment filed and was at once placed in the official files of the court clerk's office. At the same time District Attorney Bethea served notice that at 2 p. m., May 20, he will appear before Federal Judge Grosscup and ask for a temporary injunction against the packers and their representatives, under the Sherman national anti-trust law. When the case shall come up for hearing May 20, District Attorney Bethea will be present in person to present the his argument in support of a temporary injunction. He will be assisted by Attorneys C. B. Morrison and Oliver Pagin, from his office, and probably by Special Counsel W. A. Day.

What the defendants will do, now that the government has begun the long-talked-of proceedings, was forecasted by one of their reprresentatives. They will not make a fight on May 20, according to this authority. They will submit to an entry of an order enjoining them from the acts complained of in the bill and will promise to refrain from further alleged violation of the law until the time of the next hearing. That will possibly be about June 20. Before the later date they will have filed a demurrer, in which the insufficiency of the government's petition will be alleged. This demurrer, it is said, will raise an important point under the interstate commerce regulations, probably to the extent that the shipping of meats to one's own agent in another state under a certain agreement is not interstate commerce. In the event that the demurrerr shall be overruled, the packers will still have the privilege of filing an answer which will necessitate a further hearing on the merits of the government's charges. If, on the other hand, the demurrer shall be sustained, the federal attorney can file an amended bill.

The petition charges conspiracy, unlawful combinations, blacklisting, illegal cartage charges, an illegal credit agreement, creating false market prices, illegally depressing the market and accepting railway rebates.

All of the principal packing companies organized under the laws of New Jersey, Michigan, New York, and Illinois are made parties to the defense and all are residents of Illinois save Mr. Sulzberger and Mr. Noyes of New York and Mr. E. C. Swift of Boston.

The government recites that their plants and yards are at Chicago, Omaha, Sioux City, St. Joseph, Kansas City, East St. Louis, Cudahy, Wis., and Hammond, Ind.

FORMER REPORT CONFIRMED.

Capture of San Domingo by the Forces Under Vasquez.

Monte Christi, Santo Domingo, May 8.—Further confirmation was received here of the surrender of San Domingo, capital of Santo Domingo, Friday last, to the revolutionary forces commanded by Vice President Vasquez. The provisional government established there will retain power until new elections have been held.

Peace is completely re-established in the southern part of Santo Domingo. Advices from Puerto Plata, on the north coast, announce that the crew of the Dominican war vessel at that port has sided with the insurgents, and yesterday conveyed to the governor, General Deschamps, an order to surrender. An agreement providing for a suspension of hostilities at Puerto Plata was signed later in the day, so as to permit the drawing up of conditions on which the port will capitulate to the revolutionists. When San Domingo city surrendered to Vice President Vasquez, President Jiminez sought refuge in the French consulate there.

Preacher Is Exonerated.

Oskaloosa, May 8.—Rev. O. A. Johnson, pastor of the A. M. E. church, who was thrice wounded in a duel with a cripple recently, the cause of said shooting being alleged by the cripple as due to cheating in a land deal on the part of the preacher, was today exonerated upon a church conference trial presided over by Elder J. Will Jackson. Prior to the duel, Rev. Mr. Johnson was shot in his pulpit one evening by a young girl who charged him with having seduced her.

THE NEWS IN IOWA.

Dr. J. R. Stanley unloaded at Blockton three cars (about 1,000 head) of goats, brought from Texas, and took them to his farm near Plattsvills. The doctor has been dealing in goats for several years, and has made it a success.

At Onawa the jury in the damage case of Lizzie Hillman vs. William P. Mensinger returned a verdict of $400 for the plaintiff. Miss Hillman asked $3,000 from Mensinger for an assault alleged to have been committed by Mensinger upon Lizzie Hillman at his home in Monona county, April 10, 1900, the girl, then 14 years of age, being employed as a domestic in the Mensinger home.

Rev. O. A. Johnson, pastor of the A. M. E. church at Oskaloosa, who was thrice wounded in a duel with a cripple recently, the cause of said shooting being alleged by the cripple as due to cheating in a land deal on the part of the preacher, has been exonerated upon a church conference trial presided over by Elder J. Will Jackson. Prior to the duel, Rev. Mr. Johnson was shot at in his puipit one evening by a young girl who charged him with having seduced her.

James Gregoris, the Greek fruit stand man, and partner of Colomoskas, who was found on the banks of the river near Perry murdered, was arrested by Constable Willis on a warrant issued from Justice Thornburg's court. Gregoris took his arrest with the utmost indifference. He retained Edmund Nichols to defend him, and asked that the preliminary examination be postponed, which was done, and he was immediately taken to the county jail at Adel.

No arrests have as yet been made in the Lavelleur murder case at Newton, notwithstanding the fact that Mrs. Langreen swore positively that the wife killed and burned her husband. It is asserted that Mrs. Langreen is non compos mentis and that her evidence cannot be given credence. No further proceedings will be had until more evidence against Mrs. Lavelleur can be obtained. The entire Meyers family and Mrs. Lavelluer have been released from custody.

Five men made a bold attempt to enter the express car on the fast Rock Island train at Muscatine a few nights ago. The men were discovered just as they forced the door open, and three were captured and are now in the jail at that place. The attempt was made as the train was standing still at the passenger depot, and was unique in its boldness. The men claim they were trying to steal a ride. No charges have as yet been preferred against them by the Rock Island officials. The three men in jail give their names as William Lowery, Thomas Murphy and James Bohen, and stated that their homes are near Moline, Ills.

One of the biggest fires Dubuque has known for years occurred a few evenings since in the Iowa Iron Works plant. The fire caught in the foundry, which was practically destroyed, together with the pattern depository. The main buildings were saved. The saddest feature was the death of three firemen, who were killed by falling walls while in the discharge of their duties. Their names are: Frank Ganahl, foreman of the Central chemical engine; John Fitzpatrick and C. Wise. Dan McPolland, employed at the works, was seriously and perhaps fatally injured. He was taken to Finley hospital. The loss is roughly estimated at $25,000, which is amply covered by insurance. The company will rebuild as rapidly as possible, as a large amount of work is under construction.

Two $10,000 damage suits have been filed in the district court against J. M. Brenton, mayor of the city of Des Moines; Fred A. Brackett, chief of police; W. T. Maitland, chief of detectives; Wm. Crewse, night captain of police, and Charles Davis, a Walnut township farmer, as a result of Dr. J. B. Fulton's two famous bloodhounds tracking two prominent and respectable citizens of Valley Junction after the chicken stealing at Davis' recently. The suits are brought by Harvey McClurg, who is sexton of the Methodist church in Valley Junction, and Harvey Hellen, his son-in-law, both of whom stand high in the community and both of whom object to having bloodhounds rout them out of their happy home late at night on the suspicion or charge of their stealing chickens.

Al Beard, alias Arthur Inman, Arthur Conley and other names, an alleged safe blower, bank robber and suspected murderer, for whom rewards are offered amounting in the aggregate to $1,500, was arrested recently at Kansas City. Beard has been identified by photographs, tattoo marks on his left arm in which words are used, and by two detectives who have known him in the past. The detectives found Beard's hiding place and discovered a full set of safe lockpicks, caps and fuses, giant powder, and the diagram of the inside of a safe door. The arrest of Beard is counted the most important of any on record at the police headquarters for several years. One night last fall the bank of Turin, Iowa, was broken into, the safe blown open and $1,600 taken. The Turin robbery was unfortunate for Beard, because not only did he set the officers of the association on his trail but he had after that enough money to go to St. Paul, Minn., to spend the winter.

An unidentified "floater" was picked up under a Musser mill raft in Muscatine. He apparently came down under the raft, as he was between two logs and came to the top when they were removed. He is about 28 or 30, and from his dress and general appearance was intelligent and well to do. Nothing about him would identify him, but in his pocket was an account book with the names of L. L. Booche and L. P. Ritter and the name of Davenport in connection with them. He had apparently been in the water since early in March, as that was the last date appearing in his book.

Mayor J. H. Funk of Iowa Falls intends that the pathway of the city's prisoners shall not be one of roses and they are given a touch of real "strenuous" life for infractions of the municipal law. The new mayor is firm in his resolution and gives the prisoners arraigned before him the choice of paying their fines in cash, working out the fine on the streets under the direction of the street commissioner or staying in jail on the frugal diet of bread and water. At present one stubborn prisoner is testing the virtues of a simple diet and is in for nine days' experience of this novelty.

For fifty-six hours twelve men and one woman gazed at each other across the intervening space between the court house in Ottumwa and the county jail. The men held the woman's fate in their hands and she in turn wondered what the verdict would be. The men were jurors and were endeavoring to arrive at a verdict. The woman was Eva Bliss, charged with murdering her sweetheart. The woman's vigil had its effects on a portion of the jury and the twelve men returned into court with no verdict. The case will be tried again.

One of the most daring robberies ever committed in Waterloo happened a few nights ago when the residence of Mrs. M. Ricker was entered and $150 worth of jewelry stolen. Mrs. Ricker and daughter, Nina, left the house about 7 o'clock in the evening and went to West Waterloo to spend the evening. Upon returning, about 9 o'clock, they discovered the house had been entered. A thorough investigation shows that jewelry to the amount of $150 was taken. The articles that have been missed thus far are seven gold rings set with diamonds and pearls, a brooch stick pin, and a sum of money. The house was entered by prying a window open in the front part of the house.

The case of the state of Iowa, appellant, vs. W. M. McFarland, et. al. will be submitted to the supreme court in the May term. May 29 and 30 are the dates set for the submission of Polk county cases. The case in question is an action to recover from McFarland money it is alleged he retained from employes of the census department when he was secretary of state. The district court rendered a verdict for McFarland upon the original trial. The case has been hanging fire in the supreme court since April 7, 1900, when the appeal papers were filed with that tribunal. The docket of the court just issued, shows over two years have elapsed since the abstracts were filed.

The contract for the live stock pavilion to be erected at the state fair grounds has been let by the directors of the state department of agriculture to Charles Weitz & Sons of Des Moines, for $26,518.98, and the contract for the iron work was given the Des Moines Bridge and Iron company at $14,850. The total cost of the building will be $41,368.98. The appropriation made by the legislature for the building was $37,500, but the few thousand extra needed to pay the contract price will be met out of the state fair treasury. The building is to be finished August 15. The material will be Des Moines vitrified paving brick set in black mortar. The stone used is Marshall county lime. The dimensions of the structure are 225x175 feet, 60 feet high. It will seat 4,000 people, and have a judging ring, 170x120 feet.

Drake won the triangular meet at Ames with ease. None of her competitors were near enough in the matter of points to make it interesting. When the last man had elongated himself in the hop-step-and-jump the final score gave Drake 71 points. Ames took second place with 38 points, and Grinnell was forced to rank in the rear with 27. At the commencement of the meet the auspices were not propitious for the visitors from Des Moines. Ames took a temporary lead, which they soon abandoned. The pace was too swift. Her men ran with little judgment or did not have the power to withstand the terrible finishes to which they were subjected. At no time after Jaggard and Thompson turned up hot cinders for Evans to tred upon was there any doubt as to the final outcome of the meet. Points came in landslides. Drake refused to let an event pass without a score. Ames and Grinnell fought it out hard for second. Ames took the honors. Three state records were broken. Pell established a new one in the hammer throw by throwing it out 128 feet and 5 inches. Cave of Ames put the discus out over 106 feet and 9 inches. And Ames turned off the half-mile relay in the remarkable time of 1 minute 35 4-5 seconds. Jaggard and Thompson came close to the state record in the half mile when they ran it in 2:04 1-5 on the track as it was today.

CITY WHOLLY DESTROYED BY RED VOLCANO

Awful Fate of the City of St. Pierre, Island of Martinique.

OVER THIRTY THOUSAND DEAD

Castries, St. Lucia, B. W. I., May 12.—Mount Pelec, a volcanic mountain some ten miles north of St. Pierre, the commercial capital of Martinique, is the mountain which made a faint show of eruption fifty years ago. On May 3d last it began to throw out dense clouds of smoke. At midnight the same day flames, accompanied by rumbling noises, lighted the sky over an immense area, causing widespread terror. May 4, heavy ashes covered the whole city quarter of St. Pierre an inch thick and made Mt. Pelec invisible. At noon May 5 a stream of burning lava rushed 4,400 feet down the mountain side, following the dry bed of a torrent and reaching the sea, five miles distant, in three minutes. In its rush the firey flood swept from its path plantations, buildings, factories, cattle, and human beings over a breadth of about half a mile.

At the rear of the mouth of the Riviere Blanche stood the large Guerin sugar factory, one of the finest in the island. It is now completely entombed in lava. The tall chimney alone is visible. One hundred and fifty persons are estimated to have perished there, including the owner's son. As the lava rushed into the sea, the latter receded 300 feet all along the west coast. Returning with great strength, the big wave covered the whole sea front of St. Pierre, but did little damage ashore or afloat.

Terrible detonations, heard hundreds of miles northwest, followed at short intervals and continued all night. In the intense darkness the electric lights failed, but the town was lit up by lurid flashes of flame from the mountain. The terror-stricken inhabitants rushed for the hills in their night clothes, screaming, shouting and wailing—mad with terror.

The Plissono family escaped to St. Tura in a small steamer. Thirty-five persons, mostly women and children, arrived here on the forenoon of the 6th and furnished the above details. The men remained at Martinique. The same afternoon, later, telegraphic communication was interrupted with both the islands of Martinique and St. Vincent.

During the afternoon of the 8th the British steamer Roddam, which had left St. Lucia at midnight on the 7th for Martinique, crawled slowly into the Castries harbor, unrecognizable, gray with ashes, her rigging dismantled and sheets and awnings hanging about torn and charred.

Captain Watter reported that, having just cast anchor off St. Pierre at 8 a. m. in fine weather, succeeding an awful thunder storm during the night, he was talkinng to the ship's agent, Jos[illegible] Plissono, who was in the boat alo[illegible] when he saw a tremendous clo[illegible]moke and glowing cinders rush[illegible] terrific rapidity over the town[illegible] completely, in an instan[illegible] the former in a sheet[illegible] and raining fire on engside, [illegible]ad just time enough and of s[illegible] when his boat dis- Rowing with [illegible] and port, [illegible] the crew of the dea[illegible] envelopin[illegible] scorched to ing[illegible] of flame [illegible] and[illegible]et of [illegible]rd. The agent h[illegible] efforts, having climb on boa[illegible]an cable was slipped the s[illegible]er backed away from [illegible]d, nine hours later, managed to reach Castries. Ten of the Roddam's men were lying dead, contorted and burned out of human semblance, among the black cinders which covered the ship's deck to a depth of six inches. Two more of the crew have since died. Two of the survivors were loud in their praise of the heroic conduct of the captain in steering the vessel out of danger with his own hands, which were badly burned by the rain of fire which kept falling for miles after she got under way. Beyond burns all over his body the captain is safe, as is also the ship's agent, though he is badly scorched.

Mr. Plissono is believed here to be the sole survivor of the 4000 in habitants of the town, and all the shipping in the town has been utterly destroyed, the West India Telegraph Company's repairing ship going first, then the Quebec liner Roraima, Captain Muggah of the later waiving his hand in farewell to the Roddam as his vessel sank with a terrific explosion.

The British royal mail steamer Esk, which called off Martinique at 10 o'clock Saturday night, reports standing off shore five miles, sounding her whistles and sending up rockets. She received no answer. The whole sea front was blazing for miles. The Esk sent a boat ashore, but it could not land on account of the terrific heat, which was accompanied by loud explosions. Not a living soul appeared ashore after the boat had waited two hours. Fire and ashes fell on the steamer.

In the afternoon a French coasting steamer arrived here from Fort de France seeking assistance, as all the country was burnt up, the stock was dying, all the plantations were charred, the country people were flocking into the towns and famine was feared. The steamer was loaded with food of all sorts and was sent back to Martinique at 7 p. m. The captain of the vessel reported that some thirty persons left St. Pierre by the 6 o'clock boat Thursday morning for Fort de France and consequently were saved.

All attempts to get to St. Pierre are barred by fire. The closest observation possible showed houses still blazing and streets strewn with charred bodies. It is certain that the whole town and neighboring country for miles is utterly destroyed and it is feared here that few, if any, of the inhabitants escaped.

The volcano of the Island of St. Vincent has burst out in sympathetic eruption. A steamer which returned from there last night reports that the northern third of the island was in flames and cut off from assistance by a continuous stream of burning lava, ashes falling in heavy showers, as far as one hundred and fifty miles away. Kingston, the capital of St. Vincent, is safe, but the people here are very anxious as to the fate of the rest of that island.

Dominica and St. Lucia have very active geysers, but they show no departure from normal conditions.

Paris, May 10.—The commander of the French cruiser Suchet has telegraphed to the minister of Marine, M. De Lehessan, from Fort de France, Island of Martinique, under date of Thursday, May 8th, at 10 p. m., as follows: "Have just returned from St. Pierre, which has been completely destroyed by an immense mass of fire, which fell on the town at about 8 o'clock in the morning. The entire population (about 25,000 souls) is supposed to have perished. I have brought back the few survivors, about 30. All the shipping in the harbor has been destroyed by fire. The eruption continues."

Washington, May 10.—The following cablegram has been received at the state department

"Point a Pitre, May 9.—Secretary of state, Washington: At 7 o'clock a. m. on the 8th inst. a storm of steam, mud and fire enveloped the city and community. Not more than twenty persons escaped with their lives. Eighteen vessels were burned and sunk with all on board, including four American vessels and a steamer from Quebec named Roraima. The United States consul and family are among the victims. A war vessel has come to Guadaloupe for provisions and will leave at 5 o'clock tomorrow.

The state department has been receiving dispatches from commercial houses in New York asking that a warship be sent at once to Martinique to afford relief. The matter is under consideration.

ELKINS IS AT WORK.

As Delighted as a Child Over Thirty Cents Which He Earned Recently.

Mount Vernon, May 8.—Inquiry of Professor Harlan of this city as to the manner in which young Wesley Elkins has been conducting himself since he left the penitentiary at Anamosa elicits the most favorable statements. Professor Harlan stated to a reporter that Eelkins' deportment is verything that could be desired. The young man is at work doing chores about the home of Professor Harlan, the latter having seen fit to give him enough work to keep the boy from feeling that he was a parasite.

Professor Harlan stated that one day recently young Elkins went to the home of another professor, where he did an odd job at gardening, for which he received the sum of thirty cents. When the boy returned home to Professor Harlan's he exhibited the thirty cents in much the same manner that a child earning its first real money might do. This is the first money that Elkins has earned since he left the penitentiary, though he pays for his board by making himself useful.

Asked as to wnat his future course toward the boy would be, Professor Harlan stated that he had not yet fully determined. He desires to discuss the matter with his friends before anything definite is determined upon. He is studying the boy daily and constantly finds new and interesting developments in his character. He believes the boy is going to win out in his hard battle with the world, and says he can find absolutely no fault with any of his actions thus far.

IOWA BANKS PROSPEROUS.

Des Moines, May 8.—The most remarkable bank statement in the history of Iowa has just been issued by the state auditor. It shows such an increase in cash and number of deposits as to indicate that the day of supreme prosperity in the state has just been reached. The total assets of the 293 savings and the 225 state banks at the close of business April 5 show an increase over those at the time the last quarterly bank statement was issued, on December 10th last, in the sum of $14,420,80[illegible].14, the best showing of the kind ever made in the state. During the same time the bills receivable of the banks have increased in the sum of $11,095,161.50. Cash and cash items have increased in the sum of $942,883.04, and credits subject to sight drafts, have increased $2,586,953.22.

At the same time there has been a decrease of $118,848.80 in the overdrafts, and a decrease of $85,341.82 in real and personal property. There has been an increase of $691,000 in capital stock of the different banks, and an increase in deposits of $13,263,435.11. The amount due banks and others shows an increase of $154,695.08. There is an increase of surplus of $309,306.79, making an increase in the total amount of liabilities $14,420,807.14.

By ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

"Where is the gentleman?" he asked.

"In one of the small private parlors, sir. I will show you the way, if you please."

The marquis glanced again at the card which he held, and read:

"Maurice Stanton Livermore:

"Give me a private interview immediately."

"Lead me to the gentlemen," he said, quietly, though there was a tumult in his heart.

As he reached the door of the bijou parlor he saw a man pacing restlessly to and fro, much as caged tigers are wont to exercise.

It was Captain Livermore, but his friends would have been shocked at his appearance, for his hair was sadly lacking in order, his face flushed, as though he dallied long over the wine, and his whole aspect like that of a man who has been on a spree.

The marquis was disturbed; he anticipated bad news, but had not a glimmer of what shape it would take until the captain, seeing him enter, advanced to meet him.

"Captain Livermore, what can I do for you?" the marquis asked, coldly.

"Sir, I have come for my wife!"

The marquis started as if some one had fired a pistol shot close to his ear.

Even the most collected individual might be a trifle rattled by such an answer. Still this did not prevent him, while he was whipping his wits into line, from exclaiming:

"Pardon me, sir, but I fail to exactly comprehend the meaning of what you say."

"Then I will explain further. My first intention was to shoot you down on sight, but I could not forget that once you refused to avail yourself of the privilege of taking my forfeited life, and I swore that the man who had been that generous should have at least a chance to defend himself before I killed him."

"Still I am in the dark. The first thing I grasp is that she has told you who I am."

"I was a blind fool never to have suspected it. You ruined me, marquis, but surely that should have satisfied your desire for revenge. All that I had might go and welcome, so long as I still call my wife and babies mine. Again I say, I have come to you to demand my wife."

Eye looked into eye. It was as though the captain's whole existence depended upon what he read there, his manner that of a distracted man holding his passions in check only through the most desperate effort.

"Jack Overton, do you swear to that?" he demanded, hoarsely.

"I do, on my life."

Again the captain met his gaze and seemed to read his very soul through those open windows.

After all, these were two men built pretty much upon the same model—both brave and frank by nature—such individuals can understand each other through the mysterious realm of telepathy.

"I cannot believe that the man whose generous spirit caused him to fire above my head on the other occasion would look me squarely in the eye and speak falsely. Yes, even against my will, I am compelled to believe you, and I prove it by offering you my hand, marquis; but if you are not guilty, then, in the name of heaven, who has taken my wife away?" I left home after dinner to meet a very important engagement that had a connection with my future—left there with the kisses of wife and children warm upon my face, for Fedora had told me all, and her distress concerning your possible future action had drawn us closer together. I returned later in the evening, just as speedily as a cab could bring me from the Victoria, to find her gone and my little darlings motherless. This note was left behind."

He handed the other a crumpled sheet of paper, upon which had been written in a peculiar chirography, a long, running hand, such as is taught in Spanish schools:

"To balance accounts.

"Guerre a mort."

When he looked up his face was ashen gray.

Those eager, bloodshot eyes saw that the miserable and tragic little paper, worthy of a place on the comedy stage, had struck home.

"You have guessed!" he exclaimed.

"I believe I know who wrote this, and, therefore, who is at the bottom of the outrage. In one way I am to blame. Listen, and in the shortest possible time I will tell you about the Senorita Juanita and the strange infatuation she has for me."

Rapidly he sketched the romantic story of his life under tropic skies.

The captain might have imagined it was a leaf from such amazing [illegible] the Arabian Nights, only th[illegible] deep interest in the matt[illegible] building

By degrees he began [illegible]ted to a coat a desperate woman [illegible] with, and new fears [illegible]ler has made ty assailed him. It [illegible]nts on his lot wondered at that [illegible] had faced many a [illegible] unflinchingly, tre[illegible]ru Lumber Co. his companion fo[illegible] buy 4-ft. sidement of terribl[illegible] woman he lov[illegible] was in danger made a flying trip

Nor did he [illegible] eight miles east of The marqui[illegible]y. doubts and fea[illegible] and, aroused to a real arrived at desperate situation that la[illegible] Henry was again the peerless comrade who had stood by Barrajo when they fought for the Golden Fleece.

"Captain," he said, ste[illegible]ly, "depend on me to remedy this [illegible]und. If it took my life, I would freely [illegible] to bring your wife back to your [illegible]are le[illegible]ove has redeemed me." [illegible]ling

It was a splendid thing for the captain, who found himself so overwhelmed by the distressing condition of affairs, that he had a comrade wide awake to the importance of speedy action.

Deep down in his heart the marquis cursed his folly for ever having been friendly in the least with one possessed of such a tigerish, tropical temperament, and groaned to think of evil befalling Fedora through such a source.

Shorn of all outside consideration then, the captain's story was of the hackneyed type—unsuspicious people may be deceived by the most ancient of specious tales, so that there is little need of originality, even in these modern days, in the matter of decoying a woman from under her own roof.

The paper which Livermore had picked up in the hall explained much, for strange to say, it contained writing that in some respects resembled his own—at least under the supposed conditions he might have been the author of the message:

"Was injured in a collision with another cab. Send this good Samaritan sister to bring you to me. Come immediately. God alone knows how serious it may be. Maurice."

When the marquis read it he muttered under his breath.

Perhaps the "good Samaritan sister" was Juanita herself in deep disguise, and with the most sinister of motives in her heart.

"Come, we must go to your house without delay. The start must be made from there. On the way we can collect ourselves and make some preparation for the work."

This was his way of starting in, and as they left the hotel the marquis beckoned to a gentlemanly looking young fellow who, while appearing to be somewhat of a swell, was in reality a detective serving as his bodyguard.

A four-wheeler was next in order, and thus they reached the captain's house.

The marquis asked a few questions and then allowed the man from Scotland Yard to take charge of the case.

Luckily the captain had a photograph of his wife along with him, snatched from the mantel at home by suggestion of his one-time deadly enemy, but now devoted friend.

The clerk recollected the party well. It consisted of two ladies, who appeared sick or suffering in some way, a couple of attendants, honest-looking fellows, and the woman who seemed to have charge of them all—he had supposed her to be a housekeeper or companion.

Thus they knew those they sought had gone on to Dover. It was a great triumph for the detective, and their faith in him arose accordingly.

Still the situation was lugubrious enough, since there was no train until morning.

That meant four or five hours wasted.

The captain grew red in the face with congested anger and threatened to have an apoplectic fit, but the marquis, upon learning that only a question of pounds, shillings and pence kept them from reaching Dover, put his hand into his pocket and made immediate arrangements for a motor and one first-class carriage.

In ten minutes they were leaving the station, and long ere the city limits had been reached found themselves whirling along at a furious speed.

It was agreed by all that Fedora while in the cab must have been drugged in some way, to prevent her calling for help—doubtless her cruel captor had made all preparations for this and had no difficulty in stupefying her mind while she still retained the use of her limbs.

The booking agent had noticed the vacant expression on her face and delicately hinted that at the time he had a vague suspicion the two ladies might be affected in their minds and were being taken to some private sanitarium near the coast.

Two!

A strange, cold shiver went through [illegible]e marquis as a dreadful thought wi[illegible]hed home.

M[illegible] remembered how he had met Jupare[illegible] on the stairs; how she had ques[illegible]ed him about the demure miniaM[illegible] painter; how she had bitterly exbere[illegible]ned that the little girl of his forweek. [illegible]quaintance had now grown up [illegible]harming little woman. Good

Dr. Z[illegible] Could it be possible that her Bock's la[illegible]anish hatred had extended of Mrs. Boc[illegible] and that, having laid all [illegible]ccomplish a certain pur-day evening [illegible]at there grinding his [illegible] and swearing that if heaven would forgive him and spare her he would devote his fortune to make people happy, the special gave several sharp whistles and plunged into Dover.

CHAPTER XXII.

"O'er Land and Sea."

Again the man from Scotland Yard was put in charge, and bent his energies to discovering what had become of those they sought.

The trail finally led them to the water, and then they knew the crisis was near.

In all his life Jack Overton never suffered such wretched pangs of remorse and despair as came upon him while they looked out upon the dark waters where the stars were reflected upon myriads of little wavelets, and considered what a trackless waste the sea might be.

The detective at last secured positive news.

Those they sought had gone to sea in a small steamer that had evidently been awaiting their arrival.

There was only one thing to do—follow.

Given a feverish anxiety to be afloat, and unlimited capital, in a seaport one need not search very long for the craft. The detective soon had them aboard a little craft that was used in the coasting trade, a stanch and speedy boat, such as would answer their purpose admirably.

Out of the harbor and away.

About daybreak of the second day the wind blew great guns, and they found themselves in a storm.

The storm was at its height about noon, and as they had been blown far out of their course, no one might say when the port of Santander would be reached, although the captain made some sort of a prophecy the under certain conditions they would bring up there by the second night.

At sundown the storm still raged and the gallant little steamer struggled desperately to hold her own.

During the night, between the cat naps he secured, the marquis was impressed with the belief that the vessel did not pitch and toss so violently and upon making an observation found that the clouds had parted, leaving a clear sky overhead.

Upon reaching deck he found everything lovely.

The sea had subsided almost entirely and a fresh morning breeze was commencing to stir its surface into myriads of laughing wavelets.

About noon the captain called their attention by means of the glass to far distant land to the south, which he declared to be the northern coast of Spain, showing that they were now traversing the romantic Bay of Biscay, known to the natives as the Gulf of Gascogne.

Thus there was now a fair chance, the captain promised, that before midnight they would be at anchor in the harbor of Santander.

How like lead dragged the hours as they steamed directly toward the beacon!

But all things must end, and finally they entered the harbor, where other vessels lay at anchor, and the captain soon had their mudhook fastened in Spanish soil.

It was perhaps ten minutes later when the marquis appeared at Livermore's elbow as the latter stood at the rail surveying the lights of the town, and said in a hoarse whisper:

"Make no outcry, my friend; control yourself and listen. Our captain is ready to take his oath that the steamer dimly seen on our quarter yonder is the boat that left Dover, and which we have chased over the sea!"

The words of the marquis electrified Livermore. All his lassitude seemed to suddenly vanish.

"I Want Everybody to Know How Completely It Cures Indigestion."

This shows the unselfish disposition of Mr. Hodge, of Orchard Cottage, Ippleden, Newton, who, having been cured by Vogeler's Compound, wishes every other sufferer to know of the benefit he has received from this marvellous remedy. He tells his story as follows:—

"Gentlemen—I find Vogeler's Compound a remedy above all others; last year I was in a thorough bad state of health, and could hardly drag one leg after the other. I had tried dozens of remedies advertised to cure indigestion and all its attendant evils, but was rapidly going from bad to worse, when I had the good fortune to be recommended to take Vogeler's Compound. I did so, and am thankful to say it made a new man of me. I should like other people to know its virtues, and how completely it knocks under the worst forms of indigestion and dispepsia.

(Signed) "GEORGE H. HODGE.

Vogeler's Compound is the greatest remedy of the century for all stomach disorders and liver and kidney troubles in both men and women. A free sample bottle will be sent on application to the proprietors, St. Jacobs Oil, Ltd., Baltimore, Md.

Why Is It

That St. Jacobs Oil always affords instant relief from pains, after all other remedies have signally failed? Simply because it is peculiar to itself, wholly unlike another remedy. It possesses great penetrating power, reaching the very seat of the disease. It acts like magic. It conquers pain quickly and surely. It is an outward application, and is used by millions of people.

Even where delay has aggravated the injury DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve effects a cure. "I had a running sore on my leg thirty years," says H. C. Hartly, Yankeetown, Ind., "After using many remedies, I tried DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. A few boxes healed the sore." Cures all skin diseases. Piles yield to it at once. Beware of counterfeits. J. L. Harr.

THE MODERNIZED MIKADO.

He Has Abandoned the Ultra Exclusiveness of His Ancestors.

The Mikado is the first Japanese sovereign to emerge from the dignified retirement in which his predecessors lived. This step has only increased the passionate loyalty of his subjects toward him, and people are already comparing him with the kaiser as regards the prominent public role he seems disposed to play.

During the army maneuvers his majesty, who followed events with the greatest interest and enthusiasm, ordered two privates to be brought before him, and questioned them through the medium of his chief-aide-de-camp. His questions were of the parental kind, such as the following:

How did they get on with the hardships of barracks life? Did they long to go home whenever they thought of their nearest relatives? Did they not think their lot a hard one each time their thoughts wandered back to the ease and joys of their home? Were they not feeling the effects of their daily exertions in the maneuvers? Did not the exactions of the military service some times make them cry in secret?

The young soldiers answered that they were quite happy in the army, and that their only desire was to do their duty toward their beloved sovereign.

A few days before the mikado, while traveling by rail, was cheered by a number of very old people at Shiraishi station. He sent them all presents through the local government, an act of kindness which moved the old people to tears of gratitude.

PASSING OF SAILING BARKS.

Have Been Driven Off the Seas by Steam Vessels.

Not many years ago the East river water front of New York was a "forest of masts." To-day a dozen smokestacks take their place. Poetry has given place to the dullest and driest of prose. An illustration of the sorrowful pass to which sailing vessels in the merchant marine have come was related last week by the son of a once wealthy shipowner now dead.

"I was present in my youth," said he, according to the New York Times, "at the christening of one of my father's barks, a quarter of a century ago. The vessel cost about $32,000. In her maiden voyage to Australia she cleared a net profit of more than $35,000—more than paid for herself, in fact.

"Not long since, while settling up my father's estate, $50 was offered to me for an eighth interest in another bark which he had owned. It cost him $4,000. I took the offer. It was a question of taking $50, or paying an assessment of $200, and as I was not empowered to spend money of the estate, and saw no probable profit if I did, I took the cash."

Tortures of the Habara.

The married Druse women of Mt. Lebanon, in Asia Minor, labor under a distinct species of torture endured under their peculiar head veil. It is attached to a long horn or tambour, usually made of metal, which is fastened to the head by means of a cushion. These habaras are of an infinite variety of colors, embellished with tassels, bands of embroidery and fringes. Underneath this again is worn a face veil of coarse thick net so heavily embroidered that one can scarcely see or breathe through it. This is fastened close to the face and the habara drawn tightly over it. They are so muffled in the folds of these clumsy stuffs that the stranger has to look twice before he can decide whether they are advancing or retreating, and the poor wretches suffer acutely under the weight of their veils.

Hawaii's Memorial Plan.

Honolulu will have its memorial to McKinley in the form of a park or square, if the sentiment of the people who have been brought into consultation upon the matter weighs with the members of the executive committee, who have the final decision. The memorial feature proper would be in a great arch entrance, which would give the name to the park, and at the same time give enduring form to the monumental feature. The arch could be built of native lava rock, and upon its summit could be placed a bust of McKinley, or a niche could be placed in the face of the keystone which would afford a fitting point for the bust.

Reveals a Great Secret

It is often asked how such startling cures that puzzle the best physicians, are effected by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Here's the secret. It cuts out the phlegm and germ-infected mucus, and lets the life-giving oxygen enrich and vitalize the blood. It heals the inflamed, cough-worn throat and lungs. Hard colds and stubborn coughs soon yield to Dr. King's New Discovery, the most infallible remedy for all throat and lung diseases. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at J. L. Harr's.

The Republican county primary election for the purpose of nominating a county auditor, county recorder, clerk of district court, county attorney and supervisor in dist. No, 2 and supervisor in dist. No. 3, will be held in the different townships and precincts in Hancock county, Iowa, on Saturday, May 31, 1902.

The names of all the candidates for the offices named, who have paid their assessments, will be placed on the ticket at a meeting to be held in Garner on May 17, 1902. at 11 o'clock a. m. under the direction of the chairman and secretary of the central committee.

The rules governing the primaries will be substantially the same as those previously adopted.

WEEK'S DOINGS IN CONGRESS

Business Transacted by the House and Senate in the National Capital.

PHILIPPINE DEBATE GOES ON

Republicans Change Their Tactics and Come to the Defense of the Administration—House Passes Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona Statehood Bill.

Washington, May 6.—House.—For almost four hours today a fierce discussion of the Philippine situation raged in the senate. It was started by Beveridge, of Indiana, who made some sharp strictures on the members of the opposition, because, as he said, they persisted in telling in their speeches only one side of the story. While he admitted that some outrages had been committed by the American soldiers in the Philippines, it was true, to, that unparalleled kindness had been shown by American troops to Filipino prisoners and Filipino wounded. Food and medicine, he said, had been shared with them, and they had been succored on the battle ground and cared for tenderly in the hospital. While saying that the omission to tell this side of the story by the democrats was unintentional, he suggested that it was unfair to make an arraignment of the American soldier and not tell both sides. Carmack and Rawlins warmly resented any charges of unfairness. Rawlins declared that no partisan motives had actuated the opponents of the present Philippine policy, but that they were moved only by patriotism and love of country. Turner, of Washington, delivered a scathing criticism of the methods practiced by the military authorities in the Philippines, dwelling particularly upon the alleged order of General Smith, whom he denounced as a monster in human form. He urged the Philippine committee to turn all the light possible on the Philippine question to the end that the people might be fully informed on the situation. Hoar, of Massachusetts, briefly defended the action of the Philippine committee, saying that already it had furnished much valuable information. He urged that the committee, in all justice, should call some prominent Filipinos to testify in their own behalf.

House.—The house today adjourned immediately after the reading of the journal out of respect to the memery of Representative J. D. Salmon, of New Jersey. This is the third consecutive legislative day on which the house has paid a similar tribute of respect to one of its deceased members. Never before in its history have three desks been draped at the same time.

Washington, May 7.—Senate.—Discussion of the Philippine bill in the senate took a sensational turn again today. McComas of Maryland, referring to the alleged cruelties of American soldiers in the Philippines—cruelties which he deeply deplored—told of some of the cruelties which had occurred on both sides during the civil war. Neither side, he held, was to be held responsible for those regrettable occurrences, as neither side approved of them. In this connection he suggested that senators from South Carolina and Mississippi, "where there is less popular liberty than in any others," were shouting loudest for constitutional liberty in the Philippines. These remarks drew a sensational reply from Tillman of South Carolina, who declared that it was no longer possible to sneer away the responsibility for the infamies committed by the Americans in the Philippines. He said that if it had been known in the south that the reigns of government were to be given to the negroes, the civil war would have been prolonged indefinitely. He insisted that, in order to maintain their self respect, the white people of the south had been compelled to subdue the negro by whatever means they could, using the shotgun as one of the means. He frankly described how one of the negroes had been defeated at the polls, admitting that the whites had gotten just such majorities as were necessary. He referred to the outrages in the Philippines, and then said he had heard only of the application of the sand cure in the south. He thought the sand cure as described, was mild. "When," he declared, "we get ready to put a nigger's face in the sand, we put his body there, too." The south would not submit to negro domination. He insisted that the republicans' contention was that the negroes of the south were fitted to govern in this country, but that the Filipinos were not fitted to govern themselves in the Philippines. In the United States, he maintained, a serious problem confronted the government—the negro problem—and we might better try to solve that than to hunt for trouble in the Philippines.

Washington, May 8.—Discussion of the Philippine bill in the senate today, while it scarcely abated in bitterness, took on an amusing phase. In a breezy speech Doliver of Iowa, made such a good natured, and yet such a sarcastic arraignment of Carmack of Tennessee, that senators and occupants of the thronged galleries were convulsed with laughter. While, seemingly, considerable temper was aroused by the debate, good feeling was shown by the active participants in the war of words—Dolliver and Carmack—who cordially shook hands and laughed over the encounter. Burton of Kansas concluded the speech which he began yesterday. He referred, as instances of atrocious cruelty, to the battle of Wounded Knee, to the Mountain Meadow massacre and to the massacre of Union soldiers at Fort Pillow, and contended that the action of the American troops in the Philippines was, in most cases, entirely within the regulations of civilized warfare. In response to some statements made yesterday by Tillman, Vest of Missouri, delivered a forceful and effective speech, and made an historical contribution with reference to the Hampton Roads conference between President Lincoln and Confederate leaders.

House.—The bill to place three new stars in the American flag had the right of way again today in the house. General debate, the feature of which was an extended speech by Grosvenor, of Ohio, in opposition to the measure, was closed at 3 o'clock, and the bill was then read for amendment under the five minute rule. An amendment offered by McRae to consolidate the territories of Oklahoma and Indian territory was defeated, 97 to 103. An amendment offered by Overstreet, of Indiana, to consolidate Arizona and New Mexico and admit them as the state of Montezuma was pending when the house adjourned. The only amendment adopted was one providing that nothing in the act should be construed to legalize polygamy. During the day a resolution expressive of the regret of the house over the death of Admiral Sampson was adopted and a committee of seven members were appointed to attend his funeral.

Washington, May 10.—Senate.—An effort was made in the senate to fix a time for a vote on the pending Philippine bill, but it was unsuccessful. The minority said many senators still desired to speak on the measure, and it would not be proper to determine at this time upon a vote. The day's debate on the Philippine bill was mild, Teller, of Colorado, occupying considerabe time in opposing the measure. He contended principally that the Filipinos were capable of self government and of establishing a government quite equal to some European governments.

House.—The opposition in the house to the bill for the admission of Oklahoma, Arizona and New Mexico collapsed at the last moment today, and the bill was passed without division as it came from the committee, except for a few verbal amendments. The real test came on an amendment offered by Overstreet, of Indiana, to join New Mexico and Arizona and admit them as the state of Montezuma. It was beaten by a vote of 28 to 106, and all opposition then ceased and the bill was passed. The closing scenes of the debate were accompanied by a dramatic incident, which narrowly escaped being a tragedy. Delegate Mark A. Smith, of Arizona, who has been fighting for the admission of his territory for a dozen years, had just made a vigorous speech against the Overstreet amendment, when he was seized with a rush of blood to the head. He was conveyed to the lobby, where several physicians who are members of the house, by the prompt administration of powerful heart stimulants, saved him from a stroke of apoplexy. He later rallied and was removed to the hotel.

Washington, May 10.—Senate.—A lively debate occurred in the senate today upon an amendment to the army appropriation bill, offered by Bailey of Texas, providing that no part of the appropriations made by the measure should be used in defraying the expenses of the special embassy to the coronation of King Edward VII. of England. Bailey contended that the United States should not send a special ambassador to the coronation of England's king, or to the coronation of any other ruler, when the country thus honored did not extend like courtesy to the United States on the inauguration of the president. After considerable discussion the amendment was withdrawn and the bill passed. Subsequently Baily offered a resolution which will be considered later, covering the point made in his amendment. A bill appropriating $100,000 for the relief of those who suffered by the late earthquake and eruption at St. Pierre was passed. The bill was offered by Fairbanks of Indiana and authorized the president of the United States to cause to be purchased such provisions, clothing, medicines and other necessaries as he shall deem advisable and tender the same in the name of the government of the United States to the government of France. The bill authorizes the secretary of war to use the necessary steamship to carry its purpose into effect.

House.—The house today transacted some minor business, including the passage of a resolution to print 5,000 copies of "Jefferson's Bible," and then laid aside public business to pay tribute to the memories of the late Representative Rufus K. Polk, of Pennsylvania, and the late Senator J. H. Kyle, of South Dakota.

TAFT IS TO VISIT ROME.

Will Consult Vatican as to Buying Friars' Lands.

Washington, May 10.—Governor Taft has closed up his business here in connection with the affairs in the Philippines and left for Cincinnati, where he will attend to some private business prior to his departure from New York on the 17th inst. on his return to his post at Manila. He will stop at Rome in order to discuss the question of the friars in the Philippines with the authority of the vatican. He will be accompanied in his mission to Rome by Judge James F. Smith of the supreme court of the Philippines and Major John B. Porter of the judge advocate general's office. These gentlemen were selected because of their familiarity with the questions at hand.

FIRE AT SCHOOL FOR DEAF

MAIN BUILDING AND CHAPEL ENTIRELY DESTROYED.

Actual Value of Buildings is about $100,000, but it Will Cost $200,000 to Replace Them.

Council Bluffs, May 9.—A fire that started at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon entirely destroyed the main building and the chapel of the Iowa school for the deaf, an actual loss of $100,000, but necessitating the expenditure of $200,000 for new buildings. The buildings were uninsured, the state carrying its own risks.

Fire Chief Templeton of this city was twice overcome by heat and his hands were badly burned. One woman narrowly escaped being crushed under falling walls, and the faces of three firemen were severely burned.

There were 260 pupils and 63 teachers, officers and employes in the building at the time, all of whom escaped without difficulty. The entire main building, 300x75 feet and four stories high, and the chapel, 125x75 feet, and their contents, were burned, little if anything being saved beyond the personal belongings of the pupils. Superintendent H. W. Rothert, whose office was in the center of the building, lost a valuable library and other effects valued at $3,000

The fire was first discovered in the floor between the kitchen and the chapel immediately overhead, and its origin is unknown. The institution is located beyond the fire limits of the city and depends upon an independent plant for protection. This plant was utilized, but the pressure was insufficient, and when the city department reached the buildings the flames were beyond control. From the chapel they swept north to the elevator shaft of the main building, both wings of which were soon in flames.

The fire department was helpless, there being no engine, and the pumping station lacked power to force the water through the line of hose laid by the firemen.

Superintendent Rothert began removing such furniture and the personal belongings of the pupils as could be secured with safety, and the rest of the building was permitted to burn until the flames burned out.

The superintendent said that the pupils would be sent to their homes today. Last night they were temporarily quartered in the school and other buildings on the grounds.

This is the fourth state institution to suffer heavily by fire within two years, the others being at Iowa City, Ames and Glenwood.

SCHOOL WILL CONTINUE.

Arrangements Made for Deaf and Dumb Temporarily.

Des Moines, May 12.—Unexpectedly good arrangements have been made by the board of control in the emergency caused by the burning of the institution for the deaf at Council Bluffs. Chairman John Cownie and Judge Kinne, with State Architect Liebbe, visited the school. On their return they were able to announce that definite plans for tiding over the emergency had been arranged.

Mr. Cownie explained fully the plans of the board shortly after returning. The school will not stop. The smaller children, about half of those in attendance, will be sent home this week. The remainder will be kept at school until the term closes the latter part of June. When the fall term opens, the first Monday in October, the board hopes to have accommodations provided so that all the pupils now at the institution, and more, if necessary, can be looked after.

August Herman of Northwood was shot and killed by his wife as the result of a family quarrel. The couple have not got along very well of late, having had numerous quarrels.

Preliminary arrangements for the republican state convention were completed by the state central committee at a meeting at Des Moines. Des Moines was the only place mentioned as a location for the convention and the committee was unanimous in the belief that last year's convention date should not be radically departed from. July 30th was selected as the most advisable time, considering other large conventions to be held in the state and the desire not in any manner to conflict. Congressman W. I. Smith of Council Bluffs will be temporary chairman.

Fast mail train No. 10 eastbound on the Northwestern, was wrecked a few nights ago west of Ames on the grade just north of the Iowa State College of Agriculture and Mechanical Arts. The tender, two mail cars and two express cars left the track, plowing into the gravel up to the journals between the double tracks. The road bed was torn up for a distance of 200 yards, obstructing traffic on both tracks. Mail clerk Griffin of Des Moines was badly bruised and severely cut on the chin, although not seriously injured. An unidentified tramp was killed outright.

J. W. Buck, pastor of the Congregational church at Eddyville, sixteen miles north of Ottumwa, and L. Coad, a lawyer evangelist living at Eldon, another small town in Wapello county, both of whom are conducting meetings in Buck's church, Eddyville, carrying on a crusade against the saloons, received a letter signed by a committee of thirteen, notifying them that if they persist in their work they must be prepared to stand such consequences as the committee may see fit to inflict. Coad is known as a pronounced temperance advocate and since he went to Eddyville has caused dissatisfaction among the saloon element with which the church people have had previous trouble.

EVERY one who loves the scenes of galloping cavaliers, brave sword-play, desperate adventures and the flash and charm of a game of hearts, will want to read NONE BUT THE BRAVE—. Merton Balfort, the hero, and his fellow soldiers John Acton and Robert Curtis are bound up together by both choice and circumstance much as were the "three guardsmen" of Dumas, and their adventures are no less thrilling and romantic than the deeds of those classic heroes.

Rarely has there appeared in fiction a maid of such versatile powers to charm and pierce the soul of a lover, as the tantalizing royalist, Deborah Philipse; for whom the hero gets into trap after trap, risking life and honor for her sake, only to be ignored and insulted a few moments afterward, until—but that's the story; and a charming, graphic and original denouement it presents.

The apple has proven the most successful of the fruits wholly unknown in Japan until introduced from abroad, and has become a chief product in some districts in the northern islands. The apples are of fine appearance and excellent flavor, and the trees yield a profit very encouraging to the cultivator, so that the area of their production is being increased.

Senator Hanna was recently asked if he ever cherished a wish for something in addition to all his present achievements. The questioner wished to decoy him into an expression of further political ambition. But he replied, looking along the dinner table at which they were seated: "Yes, I wish I might eat what I please, and compel some democrat to digest it."

The Irish potato, the common, or white potato, as distinguished from the sweet or yellow, potato, is so called from its being a staple food in Ireland. It was recommended for introduction into Ireland by the London Royal Society in 1663 as a safeguard against famines. A native of Chili, Peru and Mexico, the potato was transplanted to Spain from Peru early in the sixteenth century and brought to Virginia from Florida by the Spanish explorers, and from Virginia to Great Britain in 1565.

Rheumatism Cured at Last.

Lake Sarah, Minn., May 12th.—Thousands will read with pleasure that a cure for Rheumatism has at last been found.

A Mrs. Hildebrandt of this place after trying very many medicines has recently found a successful remedy for this painful disease.

This woman suffered so with the Rheumatism in her arms that sleep or rest became impossible.

She heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills but having little faith in anything was very reluctant to spend any more money for medicine.

However, she decided to try one box and this helped her so much that she continued to use the Pills. Now she says:

"I am real well and I don't know how I can express my thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills for what they have done for me."

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, May 12, 1902.

A. L. Dinio of Alta, chief expert accountant, named by the executive council to examine the state house officers and departments, is in the city, together with his assistant, C. O. Clement, of Marengo. Messrs. Dinio and Clements will at this time complete the examination of the offices, begun last winter. The insurance securities in the office of the auditor of state will be checked over first. The pharmacy commission accounts will also be examined. The fiscal year of the commission did not expire until April 23, and hence the accounts in that office were not examined when those of the other offices were. The board of control accounts will not be checked over for the present. The last examination made was up to the beginning of July, 1901, and a year has not gone by since then. The next examination of the board's accounts will not be made until after July 1.

It is asserted that the Des Moines detectives have the club with which the Peterson children were killed.

Labor Commissioner Brigham has prepared some statistics from the report of the census department showing the foreign born population residing in Iowa. He has compiled the figures in order to show the total population as distributed among the various races. The statement is as follows: Slavs, comprise natives of Russia, Russian Poles, Hungarians and Bohemians, 13,719; British, comprising English, Irish, Scotch, Welsh and English Canadians, 73,033; Teutons, comprising Germans, Hollanders, Swiss and Austrians, 139,316; Scandia, comprising Danes, Swedes and Norske, 72,611; Latin, comprising French, Mexican, Spanish and Italian, 4,651; others, 2,593. In figuring the number of voters to the population the ratio of four and one-half is used. In this manner it is easy to tell the number each race has in the state. Of course there are many generally considered as foreigners who are native born Iowans.

J. F. Carter and Frank E. Pinegar were indicted by the grand jury Friday on the charge of threatening to extort. Previously they had been arrested on an information filed in Justice Aylesworth's court. The grand jury had already investigated the case and was ready to return the indictment, which they did just before court adjourned Friday afternoon. Miss Edith Carlson was the prosecuting witness. She testified before the grand jury that the two officers had entered her room at the Goldstone and threatened to arrest her on the charge of being a dissolute character. Finally they consented to let her go if she would pay them $10. Having only $4.50 in her possession, she gave them that, whereupon they left. She immediately telephoned to police headquarters and the men were summoned and confronted with her in the chief's office. They admitted the deed and were compelled to give the money back to the girl. Former Police Captain Crewse and other officers appeared before the jury. Pinegar claims Carter did all the business. Carter got the money.

Governor Cummins has vetoed the bill passed by the recent legislature which provided that suits on notes given to insurance companies and sold by them or in the hands of receivers should be brought in the counties in which the makers live. He held the measure to be unconstitutional, because it impaired contracts and made an artificial classification of insurance companies. It was plain that the law which changed the form of a contract upon its negotiation and sale would be dangerous. This was the last bill in the hands of the governor. The busines of the Twenty-ninth General Assembly is now a matter of history.

Judge S. F. Prouty has issued a letter to the voters of the Seventh congressional district in which he states emphatically he will not continue in the canvass for the congressional nomination against Captain J. A. T. Hull. He states in his letter that the use of his name in the Story county primaries was unauthorized and that he will not permit his name to go on the ticket in the county primaries of the district yet to be held.

On petition of F. M. Hubbell, G. L. Godfrey and C. L. Watrous, Governor Cummins has appointed J. C. Hume to conduct condemnation proceedings for a subsurface drain from the army post to North River in Warren county. The drain will cross pieces of property. Four of the owners have consented and five have refused. The apointment of Mr. Hume is made under authority of a special act of the legislature and with the consent of County Attorney McLennan and the county attorney of Warren county, in whose stead Mr. Hume will act.

The cost to the state of sending home the boxes and baggage and the other goods and chattels of the members of the legislature will be about $1,000 in expressage. Heretofore the express companies have carried this property free, but this year for some reason the usual courtesy was not extended. This unlooked for expense will seriously hamper the appropriation for express expenses for the state. This is $6,700 for the biennial period. It was thought in view of the cost of express of the last period, $6,700 would be sufficient, but the expense of $1,000 for goods sent home for members of the assembly was not reckoned on and hence the appropriation is a thousand dollars short at the very outset of the period.

Mrs. Annie McKay, Chaplain Sons of Temperance, 326 Spadina Ave., Toronto, Cured of Severe Female Troubles by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Being a mother of five children I have had experience with the general troubles of my sex. I was lacerated when one of my children was born and from that hour I date all my afflictions. I found that within a few months my health was impaired, I had female weakness and serious inflammation, and frequent flooding. I became weak and dizzy but kept on my feet, dragging through my work without life or pleasure. A neighbor who had been helped by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound insisted that I take at least one bottle. I did so and felt so much better that I kept on the treatment. For seven months I used the Compound faithfully and gladly do I say it, health and strength are mine once more. I know how to value it now when it was so nearly lost, and I appreciate how great a debt I owe you. The few dollars I spent for the medicine cannot begin to pay what it was worth to me. Yours very truly, MRS. ANNA MCKAY, Chaplain Sons of Temperance."

HEALTH AND ALL ITS BLESSINGS

Health will come with all its blessings to those who know the way, and it is mainly a question of right-living, with all the term implies, but the efforts which strengthen the system, the games which refresh and the foods which nourish are important, each in a way, while it is also advantageous to have knowledge of the best methods of promoting freedom from unsanitary conditions. To assist nature, when nature needs assistance, it is all important that the medicinal agents used should be of the best quality and of known value, and the one remedy which acts most beneficially and pleasantly, as a laxative, is—Syrup of Figs—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co.

With a proper understanding of the fact that many physical ills are of a transient character and yield promptly to the gentle action of Syrup of Figs, gladness and comfort come to the heart, and if one would remove the torpor and strain and congestion attendant upon a constipated condition of the system, take Syrup of Figs and enjoy freedom from the aches and pains, the colds and headaches and the depression due to inactivity of the bowels. In case of any organic trouble it is well to consult a competent physician, but when a laxative is required remember that the most permanently gratifying results will follow personal cooperation with the beneficial effects of Syrup of Figs. It is for sale by all reliable druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

The excellence of Syrup of Figs comes from the beneficial effects of the plants used in the combination and also from the method of manufacture which ensures that perfect purity and uniformity of product essential in a perfect family laxative. All the members of the family from the youngest to the most advanced in years may use it whenever a laxative is needed and share alike in its beneficial effects. We do not claim that Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of known value, but it possesses this great advantage over all other laxatives that it acts gently and pleasantly without disturbing natural functions, in any way, as it is free from every objectionable quality or substance. To get its beneficial effects it is always necessary to buy the genuine and the full name of the Co.—California Fig Syrup Co.—is printed on the front of every package.

HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

We had the pleasure this week of looking over the plans and specifications for the new bank buildingto be erected in Klemme. The building will be of pressed brick, 24x70 feet, and two stories high. It is expected that work will be commenced on the building about the first of June. This will be a fine addition to our town, and a benefit in many ways.

Three strangers hove into town Tuesday and thereby hangs a tale. They proceded to "bowl up" some and one got abusive and showed an inclination to hammer up the face of one of his comrades. The abusive stranger was locked up in the city cooler, then given a hearing and fined $5. and trimmings. Meanwhile the other two hit the high places south. The abusive stranger, after being released, took the freight south and at Goodell swore out warrants for the arrest of the other two. We understand that he was stuck for costs in the trial at Goodell.

The county attorneyship lies between John Hammil and J. A. Senneff, both of Britt. They are both excellent attorneys, honerable and upright young men, thoroughly qualified for the position. It is simply a choice between good men. We have been acquainted with Hammill for years. He was reared in this county and passed through our public schools, is a home product, therefore the Hustler favors Hammill's nomination.–Corwith Hustler.

And this is the way they are all talking all over the county. John Hammill was raised here at Britt, graduated at our public school, studied law and graduated at the Iowa State University. He is a candidate before the people for the office of county attorney and ought to be elected with out opposition. Britt is for him with a large majority and we hope to see the county give him a unanimous election.—Britt Tribune.

Like a Drowning Man.

"Five years ago a disease the doctors called dyspepsia took such a hold of me that I could scarcely go," writes Geo. S. Marsh, well known attorney of Nocona, Tex. "I took quantities of pepsin and other medicines but nothing helped me. As a drowning man grabs at a straw I grabbed at Kodol. I felt an improvement at once and after a few bottles am sound and well." Kodol is the only preparation which exactly reproduces the natural digestive juices and consequently is the only one which digests any good food and cures any form of stomach trouble. J. L. Harr.

Eugene Mason, on trial at Clarinda for the murder of Oscar Miller, of Shenandoah, last December, was found not guilty. Special interest attaches to this case because Mason's partner, Edward Dennis, was found guilty of murder in the second degree for participation in the affair, and the evidence in both cases has been almost identical. Wesley Irwin yet remains to be tried for complicity.

The partly decomposed body of a new born babe was found in the water closet vault of J. E. McFarland in Stanhope. The McFarlands have occupied the place but a few weeks. Mrs. McFarland made the discovery by mere accident. Coroner Hall of Webster City held an inquest and rendered a verdict of death from unknown causes. Foul play is absolutely certain. Suspicion strongly points to one girl, but there is no direct proof against either her or her betrayer.

At Omaha a few days ago C. W. Budd, of Des Moines, not only defended his claim to the Hazzard trophy cup, but also made the remarkable score of 100 straight kills at live pigeons. His opponent was S. W. Phellis, of Cincinnati, who scored 87 out of 100. It was Budd's day from the first, and better shooting was never witnessed on the Omaha Gun Club grounds. The majority of his birds fell on the first barrel. The birds were a lively lot, but the day was a perfect one for shooting.

The safe of the postoffice at Monroe was blown open and contents rifled by unknown parties a few nights ago. The safe was well soaped, which deadened the noise. It is thought it occurred about 1:30 o'clock, as the postoffice clock stopped at that time. There is a freight that comes in from the east at 1[illegible] o'clock. It is thought the party came on that. The tools with which the work was done had been stolen from the Morrison blacksmith shop. Only about $5 in money and a few stamps were taken.

At Muscatine a few days ago Kid Noble, ex-prize fighter, was given a life sentence in the penitentiary for murdering Tom Morgan, a local saloon keeper last January. Noble's trial occupied the whole week and the jury returned the verdict in three hours. Noble and Morgan came to blows in the latter's saloon last January over a woman. Noble left the saloon and in a few minutes returned with his gun and shot Morgan. He escaped, but was captured two weeks later in Kansas. Noble is well known in Des Moines and Iowa sporting circles.

John Swipper, who has been working in the vicinity of Red Oak till recently, was found in a freight car at Shenandoah in a most pitiable condition. He had boarded the train at Red Oak several days previous in an attempt to steal a ride to his home in St. Joseph, Mo. Before reaching Shenandoah he had been ejected from the train and the brakeman, so he alleges, kicked him in the abdomen. He attracted the attention of some parties who were passing the car and informed them he had not had a thing to eat or drink in three days. He was removed to a private hospital where it was discovered he was suffering from an abcess in the loin. It is feared he cannot recover.

Emma Moore of Shambaugh was found dead near the Burlington railroad tracks about two miles south of Clarinda a few days ago. She had evidently been murdered, for a bullet had penetrated her breast midway between the nipples. She was the daughter of Pat Moore of Shambaugh, who gave the information that she had recently been keeping company with William Lucas of Clearmont, Mo., and they had been together during the last few days. The sheriff telephoned the city marshal of Clearmont to arrest Lucas, which he did, and the young man was brought to Clarinda and is now lodged in the county jail pending the hearing of the coroner's jury. Lucas formerly lived in Clarinda and operated a saw mill with his father. He is 23 or 24 years of age. He refuses to say anything, neither affirming nor denying knowledge of the affair. Miss Moore was about 25 years of age.

The town of Farlin, seven miles north of Jefferson, was almost wiped out by fire. The principal portion of the business section, including the postoffice, was destroyed. The loss is estimated at $40,000. The fire originated in the new office of the S. C. Lumber company, from cause unknown. It was discovered at 1:30 a. m., but was even then under such headway that its progress could not be even checked by the feeble efforts of citizens with buckets. There was no fire-fighting apparatus in the town. The burned buildings include three grocery stores, a restaurant, a dwelling house, millinery store and the lumber yard. The bank and a blacksmith shop are the only business houses remaining. The loss thus far known: Mahlon Head, building, $1,000; Charles Tray, building and contents, $6,000; Henry Roher, dry goods, $5,000; postoffice building and contents, $4,000; S. C. Lumber company, $[illegible],000; Thomas Williams' millinery store and dwelling, $1,000; Jack Terrill, dwelling, $500; Geo. Ulrich, restaurant and dwelling, $1,500; Gardner Dilivso, store, $750; John Williams, carpenter shop, $2[illegible]0; other buildings and merchandise, $15,000.

The 5-year-old son of J. B. Wells, living one mile south of Lacelle, was seriously injured in a runaway. The boy was thrown from a wagon, striking his head on an oil can with such force as to drive the spout into his head.

Fred Fleming and H. L. Beakler, both of Osceola, engaged in a pistol duel. Five shots were fired but neither was hit. The quarrel arose over family troubles, due to jealousy. Beakler was placed in jail, Fleming escaping. He has not yet been captured.

Paul Hockersmith, a 15-year-old youth, impressed by the exploits of Buffalo Bill and other Indian exterminators, donned a cowboy suit, procured a revolver, and entered the school at Savanna, a village in Davis county. He threatened to "clean out" the school, and the pupils were terrorized. The youthful terror now languishes in the county jail under sentence of twenty days.

Notice of appeal in the case of the Valley National bank et al. against the city council, acting as a board of review, has been served on Mayor Brenton of Des Moines. An opinion was given by City Solicitor Bremner to the effect that stock in other corporations owned by banks is taxable and it is on this question that the contest is being waged. The assessment involved about $1,000,000.

John Thomas, colored, alias "Alabama," accused of murdering James Dean in Oklahoma, March 30th, last, was turned over to Sheriff J. S. Thompson of Caddo county, Okla., requisition having been granted by Governor Cummins. Thomas was arrested by Sheriff John W. Teetor, having been put off a freight train while stealing a ride at Brighton. He will be taken back at once.

F. H. Fisher, a brakeman in the employ of the Great Western railroad, met with a terrible accident in the yards at Dyersville. Fisher was standing on the steps of the caboose giving signals to the engineer and the train was backing up. The brakeman did not think of the standpipe, which is situated between the tracks and without warning he was dashed against it with terrific force. The worst injury sustained was on the side of his head and his face was bruised almost to a jelly. The unfortunate man was knocked senseless and fell to the ground. He was given medical attention and is doing as well as could be expected.

City Auditor Lucas computes the cost of the smallpox epidemic during the past year in Des Moines at about $100,000. This, of course, includes the expense to the county and city both, although the city bore about four-fifths of the total expense direct, and the larger portion that comes from the county is paid by the city property owners indirectly. Included in the estimated cost is the $14,000 expended on the new hospital and the $20,000 paid out by the county for food furnished to the smallpox patients and their families that were quarantined. The city is, however, more free from smallpox than it has been for three years past, owing to the rigorous measures taken.

The mayor of Kensett has offered a reward of $50 for the arrest and conviction of the party or parties who wrote an anonymous letter, dated at Northwood and mailed at Fertile and published in the Northwood papers threatening the town of Kensett with dire calamities. The letter is the result of the recent court house fight in Worth county between Northwood, where the court house is now located, and Kensett. Kensett secured a large petition asking for the removal of the county seat from Northwood and this was met by an even larger remonstrance from Northwood. As a result the court house will probably remain in Northwood for the present at least, but feeling is very intense over the resut on both sides.

The civil service commission will hold examinations for eligible candidates for appointments to the grade of cadet in the revenue cutter service June 17, 18 and 19. The places in the west fixed for the examinations are Des Moines, Sioux City, Fort Madison and Mason City in Iowa; Omaha, Grand Island and Beatrice in Nebraska, and Aberdeen in South Dakota. These examinations will afford an opportunity for young men who have ambitions for a naval life and who have failed to secure appointments to Annapolis to enter the civil branch of the marine service with practically all the rights and privileges of naval officers. Since the passage last month of the revenue cutter bill men in this service have far better prospects before them than they ever had before. Applicants desiring to take the examination should apply to the secretary of the local civil service board in any of the towns named. They must be between 18 and 25 years of age, not less than 5 feet 3 inches in height, of perfect physique and of good moral character. In the mental examinations proficiency in mathematics will count fifty points in a possible 100.

[illegible]tate May Take Through Agents for Liquors and Deliver Them in Iowa.

Des Moines, May 16.—The supreme court of Iowa handed down an opinion yesterday in which it holds that sales of liquor by agents of nonresident firms comes within the meaning of the interstate commerce law and are therefore not indictable under the mulct law of the state. The decision is one of the most important and far-reaching that has been rendered in regard to the liquor laws of the state. Under it the question of the right of the state to seize sales of liquors to bootleggers and other resident violaters of the laws is decided, and the decision leaves the impression that the Iowa mulct law is not much protection to the anti-liquor interests of the state after all.

The court's decision will dispose of a large number of suits pending in the courts of the state at the present time, suits of long standing in which is involved the seizure of liquors from the express companies which have transported the same. The decision in the case of the state vs. Pat Hanaphy, appellant, from Jefferson county, which is reversed in favor of the defendant. Hanaphy was an agent for a liquor house in Illinois. He solicited orders for intoxicating liquors and secured one from Robert Carr of Fairfield, Iowa. The order was sent to the Dallas Transportation Co., liquor dealers at Dallas City, Illinois, where it was filed and sent by express to the consignee, payment being made to the express company upon delivering the goods.

The statute under which this action against Hanaphy was brought is section 2382 of the code, which was enacted by the legislature to prohibit just such sales as the one negotiated by the defendant, viz.: the taking of an order in one state, the filling of it in another and the completion of the sale in the state where the order was taken. The lower court convicted Hanaphy, Judge F. W. Eichelberger rendering the judgment, which was reversed by the supreme court. Judge Weaver writes the higher court's opinion, which is based entirely upon the holding of the United States supreme court in construing the interstate commerce act. Eleven cases are cited in support of the holding.

UNVEILING OF MONUMENT

MEMORIAL TO COLONEL KINSMAN AT COUNCIL BLUFFS.

Addresses Made Eulogizing Famous Soldier Who Died While Leading Twenty-Third Iowa.

Council Bluffs, May 19.—The monument for Colonel William H. Kinsman was unveiled Saturday afternoon, it being the thirty-ninth anniversary of his death on the battlefield of Black River Bayou, Miss. Everything went off as had been arranged, and but for a rain of a few minutes' duration while the services were being held at the cemetery nothing occurred to mar the impressiveness of the event.

The day had been a perfect one for such an occasion. The sun shone brightly and with almost summer heat till shortly after the procession reached the cemetery, then a slight cloud passed over and for a few minutes rail fell and was accompanied by considerable hail, necessitating the use of umbrellas by the audience, but the speakers continued without interruption.

The line of march was made up of soldiers from the war of the rebellion, veterans of the Philippine war, high school cadets, the local military company, Dodge light guards, and citizens and city officials in carriages. Prominent in line were the members of Colonel Kinsman's old regiment, the Fourth and Twenty-third Iowa volunteers infantry. From these two regiments there were forty battle-scarred veterans who had come from all over Iowa and adjoining states to assist in paying tribute to the memory of him who had led them to victory on more than one southern battlefield.

Color Sergeant Howard of the Twety-third carried the old flag of the Twenty-third. It had been taken from the flag case at the state capitol at Des Moines for the services. Adjutant Abbott of the Abe Lincoln post of this city, carried Colonel Kinsman's old sword, the one presented to him by the ladies of this city when he was promoted to lieutenant in the Fourth regiment.

General Dodge, who was president of the day, made a few brief remarks on the character of Colonel Kinsman, but the addresses of the day were made by Emmet Tinley, of this city, J. A. Straight, of Washington, D. C., and J. W. Dewese, of Lincoln, Neb.

STATE GETS HALF A MILLION.

Attorney General Notified by Henderson and Shaw.

Des Moines, May 19.—Attorney General Mullan has received two letters which settle it that Iowa will receive nearly one-half million dollars from the general government on account of its claim for money expended during the civil war in the equipment of the troops from this state. Both Secretary Shaw and Speaker Henderson have notified him that the whole of the claim will go into the appropriation bill, which mean that the secretary may expect to have this money snugly ensconed in the state treasury before the congress adjourns, and adjournment will occur about August 1, in all probability.

Des Moines, May 19, 1902.

Des Moines is assured of another railroad this season by the annoucement made at Centerville by officials of the Iowa & St. Louis railway. Officials of the road are authority for the statement that the road will make a trunk line, so far as this city is concerned, by building on to Sioux City and probably north in order to tap the Dakotas. Plans for the extension have been perfected, and it is said that the work will be pushed to the utmost. Credence in placed in the plans of this new road because of the business-like manner in which representatives of the company proceeded last winter when they commenced building south. The survey had been made and grading right-of-way secured in many instances before the public was in any way taken into the confidence of the builders.

The supreme court, through Judge Ladd, has announced a ruling, on the question of pharmacist's permits and bondsmen's liability in suits for damages. In the case of Edwin Carter and others against I. I. Nichol and others (his bondsmen), to recover damages for the school fund on account of alleged sales of liquor to minors and drunkards by the Nichol drug store in Iowa county, the court held that the removal of the druggist to the adjoining store room invalidated both his bond and his permit; that all his sales of liquor in the new location were illegal, and that his bondsmen were relieved of liability, for their bond only covered the first place where his permit was located. The fact that the building occupied subsequently laps over on the first lot cuts no figure.

George Keenhold, indicted on the charge of selling liquor contrary to the mulct law, pleaded guilty to two indictments and was sentenced to pay fines of $300 in each case. This also includes two attorney's fees of $35 each, bringing total amount of fines up to $1,000. After the judgment was entered an order was issued granting a stay of execution until January 1, in order to give defendant time to raise the amount. Keenhold was indicted through the efforts of the good citizenship league organized here by Evangelist Williams. A number of the members of this organization are said to have purchased beer at Keenhold's place on Fourth street. They caused Keenhold's arrest and prosecuted him in Justice Duncan's court. Something like $150 of a fine unpaid still hangs over Keenhold outside of those just assessed against him and for the same offense.

The supreme court handed down an opinion affirming the lower court in refusing to enforce a contract entered into between Mr. and Mrs. John F. Hull of Oskaloosa before their marriage by which the husband agreed to turn over all his property, said to be worth between $7,000 and $8,000, to the bride as a consideration for her love and affection, the prospective bride agreeing at the same time to provide a good and happy home for the groom so long as he lived. Each had been married before and was well along in years. The bride waited for a few months after the wedding, then failing to secure the deed to the property as per the pre-nuptial contract, brought to enforce it. The lower court refused to enforce it during the life of the groom on the ground that the consideration for the transfer of the property, viz: a good home for the remainder of his life, could not become a realization until death. The supreme court affirms the opinion.

The state board of medical examiners issued a certificate to Dr. C. L. Parsons to practice osteopathy. The action was taken as a result of an order by Judge C. P. Holmes of the district court. The Parsons case was carried into the courts after the refusal of the board to recognize osteopathy at a former meeting.

The supreme court of this state has once more sustained the tax ferret law, holding that it is retroactive. The case decided was that of August Berensheim, guardian, appellant, vs. William Arnd, county treasurer, and another case. It was appealed from the Pottawattamie county district court, O. D. Wheeler, judge. The plaintiff in the proceedings seeks to have annulled the assessments made upon the monies and credits of his record under section 1374, code of 1897, and chapter 50, acts of the Twenty-eighth general assembly. The district court held that the assessments for 1896 and 1897 were invalid and confirmed the assessment of 1898, 1899 and 1900. Both parties appealed. The supreme court decided the trial court erred in not confirming the assessments for 1896 and 1897 and awarding judgment therefore. Modified in this way the judgment entered is affirmed. The opinion is by Judge Watterman.

Luther Hudson, residing with his family, consisting of a wife and five children, committed suicide by swallowing a half pint of formaldehyde. Death ensued in a few minutes. Decedent was a painter and paper hanger by occupation and suicide was due to despondency.

The 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Phillips, living near Grinnell, was fatally scalded. A boiler filled with hot water was on the porch. The child while attempting to close the door, lost its hold and fell backward into the water. It suffered horribly for a few hours, until death brought relief.

Worry, if well cared for, will become a full-grown fear.

It is mayor Lau now.

By ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Copyright, by STREET & SMITH, New York.

CHAPTER XXII.—(Continued.)

"That is cheering news, marquis. If true it relieves our minds of one dreadful fear—the boat survived the storm, at least. Please heaven, she is safe on board, and that we may succeed in rescuing her! When shall we go?"

"Let us have a council of war," the marquis said with energy, "and take the opinions of our detective and the captain as to the advisability of making an immediate advance on the enemy's works."

A plan of action was decided upon.

Steam should be kept up by the commander, so that an immediate departure from the harbor could be made in case it was deemed necessary.

The three others entered a boat, which was manned by several of the stoutest and most expert sailors on board—men whose muscles were capable of enormous work should there be need of haste.

If an indifferent watch were kept aboard the craft there would be little or no difficulty in accomplishing the first part of their scheme, at least.

This was to temporarily disable the screw of the steamer, so that such a thing as pursuit would be out of the question.

Nearer they drew, and those who were so deeply interested held their very breath, for fear lest a sudden hail from on board might bring about discovery and possibly ruin for their plans.

CHAPTER XXIII.

The Search for a Wife.

It was already arranged that in case such a contretemps occurred they were to advance to the side of the steamer, addressing the man on guard in Spanish, which the marquis was easily capable of doing, announcing themselves officers of the port, bent upon their duties, who wished to come aboard.

Once alongside, they would speedily clamber over the low waist of the little steamer, whether invited or not.

As to the rest, they were armed, and meant to carry out their object though the heavens fell.

The sailors were to manage the task of using the chain which they had carried, so that it would be wound about the propeller with the first few revolutions made.

It was well done.

Not a single clanking sound betrayed them.

Their next task required an abundance of nerve, which, fortunately, was not lacking.

The marquis had been using his eyes as well as the darkness allowed, and he saw that the steamer was built in a manner that made the task of boarding her more difficult than he had anticipated.

They might be compelled to rely upon some chance rope dangling over the side.

The sailors knew what to expect, and foot by foot the boat was worked along close to the hull of the steamer until the groping hand of the man who searched came in contact with what they sought, a rope, by means of which any sailor ashore could, upon arrival at the vessel, clamber aboard.

The marquis was the first to take hold of it after the sailor had fastened one end to a thwart, and he passed over the rail of the steamer in a jiffy.

Then came the man from Scotland Yard, who also made the passage easily enough.

With Livermore it was a serious business, for he had accumulated much avoirdupois since his last equatorial tramp through the African wilderness. However, the same game spirit as of yore resided in his body, and while he puffed considerably, making sounds that Jack feared would draw attention from the watch, the discovery did not come, and he was given the privilege of assisting his friend aboard.

Fortune favored them in that they were able to reach the cabin without meeting any one.

Once at the saloon door, they looked its length without discovering a living soul.

Evdently those whom they sought must be in their staterooms opening off the cabin, and there was nothing left to them but to open these, one at a time, to discover the truth.

This was the crucial time.

The marquis, bold enough to take advantage of the slender opportunity fortune had granted them, stepped to the first door and opened it.

The light from the cabin entering disclosed Fedora seated on a chair, having refused to retire to the berth after the terror of the last two nights.

She was awake, and the astonishment felt at seeing the marquis almost caused her to faint.

He advanced to her side and said in a low but earnest tone:

"Do not cry out, or all is lost! We have come across the water to save you. He is close at hand—your husband. Come to him now, and please utter no sound above a whisper."

Then she suffered him to lead her out, not sure that it was a dream or some delusion.

There stood the captain awaiting his own, and with a cry she could not repress she threw herself into his extended arms.

The marquis rightly feared that discovery was now sure to come, and realizing that not a second must be lost he begged Fedora to tell him if she had a companion in her cabin.

Unable to speak, she pointed to the door opposite to the stateroom she had occupied, and as Jack turned at it he saw Mazette standing there, with pale face and disheveled hair—but Mazette, alive, thank Heaven!

Another instant and he had clasped her to his heart—it was one of those moments when words are useless to convey the sentiments of the soul, for Mazette knew he loved her, even as she had for years adored her former comrade and instructor in Bohemia.

Just as the marquis, overwhelmed by his sentiments, threw the mask aside and betrayed his love for Mazette by straining the miniature painter to his heart another door flew open and there issued forth a figure that in its warlike demeanor might have stood for a modern Joan of Arc—a figure that, at sight of the marquis and Livermore, uttered savage little cries in Spanish, and with blazing eyes and heaving bosom rushed toward the former, waving desperately in her hand a revolver, which he knew full well she had learned how to use under the palms of Gautarica, since he himself, as wretched luck would have it, had taught her the first principles of marksmanship.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Where Gold Proved Trumps.

Luckily the detective was prepared for just such a move as this, and as she came within reach, not noticing his presence, he caught her and with a quick movement wrested the revolver from her grasp.

The movement was successful, but it cost him dear, for the frenzied woman, baffled in her design, scratched his face after the manner of a tiger cat, all the while screaming as might an escaped maniac—doubtless, for the time being, she was out of her senses, so fearful a hold upon her mind had this idea of Corsican revenge taken, that the prospect of losing her prey rendered her mad.

He threw her from him with a curse, for she would very likely have dug his eyes out.

It was now high time they departed.

Already the alarm was given and they could hear the shouts of Spanish sailors as they ran to and fro, or came tumbling up from their quarters forward.

Already the captain was leading his wife to the deck; the old warrior's fighting blood was up, and woe to the man who dared bar his path.

The marquis followed with Mazette.

As for the detective, finding a key in the cabin door he whipped this latter shut and, having secured it, placed the key in his pocket, hoping that by thus separating Juanita from the unscrupulous captain and crew he might lessen the danger.

It was a politic move and did him credit.

They could hear her pounding at the door while her shrieks arose; then came several shots from her recovered revolver, whether as signals or fired in the hope of demolishing the lock that held her prisoner none could say.

No sooner had Livermore issued forth upon the deck than he was set upon by a couple of men, one of them possibly the captain of the steamer, who recognized in him a stranger.

At least here was an opportunity for Livermore to prove that he had not become rusty in his five years' retirement from the field of adventure and travel, and right royally he emphasized this point under the eyes of his wife.

He threw out his right hand and sent the fellow on that side headlong into the scuppers. At this his other antagonist drew a shining knife, with which every Spaniard loves to go armed at all times, and uttering fearful imprecations he made a wicked pass at the stout captain.

Fedora's scream was deadened by the report of the captain's weapon, and then the sailor man's tune changed, for, dropping his blade, he ran down the deck with a bullet in his shoulder, shrieking in pain in a man[illegible] command [illegible] sailor men [illegible] of the [illegible] leaving [illegible] empty [illegible] the [illegible] ng [illegible] to make them [illegible] forget their allegiance to the young King, and, heedless alike of entreaties and hard imprecautions, they set about scrambling for the coins.

There were fierce fights over some of the gold boys, where two men set about securing a single coin; and at another time and under different conditions the mad scramble might have presented certain elements of humor in the eyes of Livermore and the artist.

Just now their one desire was to shake off the society of these sad seadogs, and leave them to fight it out among themselves.

Accordingly, a forward movement was begun without delay, and they managed to reach the side of the vessel where hung the rope that had been of such signal assistance in helping them aboard, about the time the sailors again gathered in a threatening crowd.

The marquis lowered Mazette into the arms of the stout lads waiting below. Then came Fedora, assisted on both sides, and such trust did the ladies feel in those brave hearts that had risked all these dangers in their behalf that they forgot to exercise the first privilege of the feminine mind and scream as they were lowered over the rail into the darkness below.

As the Spaniards, urged on by their valorous officers, who took good care to keep in the rear, showed signs of making a rush, the nabob again with eager fingers chased all the fugitive coins he had in his pockets, and, having corraled them, opened another fusilade.

And again it was a grand success—nothing could withstand the power of gold.

Taking advantage of this digression, while the men chased the rolling discs, the captain was assisted down the rope and the marquis followed.

As the man from Scotland Yard started to follow, one of the steamer's officers made a slash at the rope with his cuchillo and severed it.

Luckily the detective was kept from going overboard, and the fragment of rope, found later on, was seized by Overton as a memento of this remarkable adventure.

Nothing now remained to hold them, so the boat was pushed off and oars unshipped.

In their course toward the other steamer they had occasion to pass around the stern of the one which had been the theater of such recent tragic events.

From a porthole, evidently opening from the cabin, came several shots; but, owing to the darkness covering the water, the bullets went wide of their intended mark.

Evidently the enraged senorita realized she had played her last card and lost the stakes, for they could hear her wild shrieks ringing over the calm bay long after they regained the deck of their own steamer and were on the way out to sea—perhaps the wretched Juanita, who had wagered so much and lost all in the game of love, had, in truth, become insane over her troubles; at least they hoped and believed they would never see her more.

And the Marquis of Montezuma, as he stood with Mazette's little hand in his own, looking back at the foamy wake they left behind, found that the last atom of bitterness had left his heart, and then and there he took upon himself a new vow, which the angels doubtless joyfully recorded, that from this hour in the future, to the father and mother of little "Jack," his namesake, he would be a brother in spirit and in deed; and it need hardly be said that any one who occupied such a close position to the heart of the American Nabob would never again know want in this world.

Cannibalism Among Brooder Chicks.

(A. B. R.)—"Can you tell me how to prevent cannibalism among brooder chicks? I have a lot eight days old that are doing nicely except that they have already killed one of their number and mutilated three others. They attack the victim around the vent and keep picking it until it is dead. They have had an abundance of grit and oyster shell all the time. Thinking the lack of animal food was the cause, I have given two feeds of green bone, but I don't see that it has done any good."—The trouble is not peculiar to brooder chicks. I had some cases with chicks with hens a number of years ago. I am not sure that I am right as to the way the trouble begins, but think it is when a chick, because of irritation at the vent, such as might be caused by any bowel disorder, picks itself there until blood appears. If this then attracts the attention of some of the others, and they begin to pick and get a taste of blood, they keep it up. It is possible that even when no blood has started the chicks seeing one of their number pecking itself, and evidently in distress, join it and soon create serious trouble; but I have seen little chicks, only a few days old, literally tear themselves to pieces without aid from others.—Farm-Poultry.

Filthy Yards.

We talk about cleanliness in the dairy, but let us not forget about cleanliness in the poultry establishment. Dirt and disease seem to go together in all places. Filth makes a good medium for the development of disease microbes. If a hen house and yard are kept clean there is seldom any visitation from diseases that sweep away the fowls. Very often the part of the yard directly in front of the hen house door becomes very filthy. This is especially so in the spring and fall when the precipitation is considerable. This occurs more with large flocks than with small ones. No matter how large the run for the poultry, the birds spend a good deal of their time near the poultry house. They seem to have but little aversion for splashing through soft mud. Sometimes they will eat up every green thing within a dozen feet of the hen house door and leave the green sward farther away. This is more so with the large breeds than with the small ones. The solution appears to be small flocks.

Enthusiasm of Poultry Raising.

All of the world's most successful men succeeded because of the enthusiasm that they had in their particular lines of work. It is unnecessary, then, to say that a man to succeed in poultry keeping must be enthusiastic. When a man that has a big poultry establishment finds his enthusiasm waning or being diverted to some other occupation it will probably be found the part of wisdom to drop the poultry business. A while ago the writer visited a poultry establishment where the owner had evidently had his enthusiasm for the poultry business diverted into another channel. He had another business, and that appeared to be thriving. His large poultry establishment, however, showed every sign of neglect. The pens had evidently not been cleaned out for a month, and sick hens were apparent here and there in the flocks. Enthusiasm would never have tolerated that condition of affairs.

Poultry Points Picked Up.

We have been asked if a cracked egg can be used for hatching. That will depend on several kinds of circumstances. If the crack is not too large, it may be mended by pasting over it a strip of thin, tough paper. The hen, if large and heavy, may break it even then. If the hen be light, or if an incubator be in use, the egg may come through all right and produce a chick.

* * *

It is a superstition that salt is poisonous to hens. A lady saw the writer salting the warm mash for the poultry and said, with surprise: "Why do you put salt in their food? I thought salt always killed hens." When salt is thrown out in the form of rock crystals, fowls sometimes eat them for grit and are killed thereby. A man would be killed by salt also if he ate it in proportionate quantities. The danger to hens from the presence of salt crystals should remind us that there are many other substances that if left around may prove injurious. But poison must not be left where fowls can find it. Bits of mire, tacks and even nails may prove deadly. The writer once had a fowl suddenly go lame and killed her. The lameness was found to be caused by pieces of wire exceeding an inch in length. These had worked from the gizzard into the flesh of the fowl, and one piece was in process of working out between the body and leg.

Irish and Danish Methods.

Let us draw a contrast by picturing one of our own creameries about 7 o'clock a. m., and any creamery in Denmark at, say 6 o'clock a. m. What do we see in the former? Is not the creamery surrounded by a double line of men, women and children, all either fighting their way to the receiving platform or else scrambling for skim milk, and altogether creating the impression in the mind of a stranger that certain political issues were involved, rather than the carrying on of an industry whose object is the improvement of our social and economic conditions? In the latter case we see one large two horse spring wagon holding between thirty and forty medium sized cans, beside the receiving platform, and one man standing on it unloading the cans, which are taken in by one of the dairymen. When the first wagon is unloaded, matters are so regulated that another wagon arrives just in time, so as to cause no delay either in the creamery or on the road. While one wagon is being unloaded, the other is being loaded with skim milk.

The two pictures constitute a striking contrast. May we call them "Peace" and "War"? No doubt.—Irish Homestead.

Pasteurization of Milk.

A series of experiments in continuation of those conducted in previous years, was carried on this past year, chiefly to determine the effects of different pasteurizing temperatures, between 140 and 200 degrees, on the bacterial content of milk, and upon the quality of the butter. Briefly, the results indicate that a temperature of 180 to 185 degrees is very favorable in reducing the bacterial content to a low point, and this temperature also adds keeping quality to the butter. If we wish to establish a good reputation for Canadian butter in the British markets, we shall have to adopt pasteurization; and if we wish our butter to retain its fine flavor for some time, we shall do well to pasteurize at a temperature of 180 to 185 degrees. In our experiments, the whole milk was pasteurized before separating and the skim-milk was run over a water-cooler before it was returned to the patrons. We found that this plan enabled us to send to the farmer a good quality of skim-milk for feeding purposes.—Report Ontario Experiment Station.

Two Types of Dairy Cows.

Prof. T. L. Haecker: We feed each cow all she can consume and assimilate. At the end of the first year we found that some cows charged us 7 cents per pound for butter made from their milk, while others charged only 12 cents, and others ranged between these two sums. The breed made no difference; some Shorthorns made cheap butter, and some Jerseys costly butter. Breed had nothing to do with the cost, it was all in the cow. Size or color had nothing to do with it. We put all the cows that made cheap butter on one side, and ranged the cows who charged the most for butter on the other side. Each side, no matter what breed, showed similar characteristics. Those that charged a high price were sleek, nice looking animals that would answer the description of the general purpose cow, while those that made butter cheap had the genuine dairy type, the light quarters and the heavy wedged shaped barrel. Every pound of food consumed was put to good use.

Composition of Milk.

H. D. Richmond, analyst, reports in the Dairy, London, England, results of his work on the composition of milk as follows: The average composition of milk as shown by the analyses of 13,978 samples during the year 1900 results as follows: The average for fat was 3.64 per cent; for solids not fat, 8.93 per cent, and for specific gravity, 1.0323. With regard to the variation of the constituents of the solids not fat the author states that "any deficiency of solids not fat below 9.0 per cent is chiefly due to a deficiency in the milk sugar;" any excess above 9.0 per cent is chiefly due to excess of proteids. As the result of a considerable amount of work on the relation between the proteids and salts of milk, he considers that one-third of the base with which casein is combined in milk is soda, and not lime; and that casein forms a molecular compound with calcium phosphate.

Horses in Argentina.

With a population of 4,780,000 the Argentine Republic possesses 5,081,000 horses. It is the only country in the world that has a horse for every inhabitant.

Dangerous if Neglected.

Burns, cuts and other wounds often fail to heal properly if neglected and become troublesome sores. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve prevents such consequences. Even where delay has aggravated the injury DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve effects a cure. "I had a running sore on my leg thirty years," says H. C. Hartly, Yankeetown, Ind., "After using many remedies, I tried DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. A few boxes healed the sore." Cures all skin diseases. Piles yield to it at once. Beware of counterfeits. J. L. Harr.

...times as formerly.

"Like other things here below, trade emblems undergo a change in the course of time," said a cigar dealer to a Washington Star reporter.

"Twenty years ago in front of every cigar store in the large cities stood the silent emblem of the tobacconist's calling, the wooden Indian, holding invitingly in his right hand a bundle of cigars or a bunch of tobacco leaf. If a man wanted to find a cigar store his eye wandered up and down the street in search of the wooden warrior. The wooden image gave way to the more elaborate figure of the untutored red man of cast iron, and now, sad, though true be the fact, the ferruginous cast is being relegated to the junk shop.

There are only a few of these images left in Washington, and in my trips to other cities I have noted their disappearance to a considerable extent. Why it is so I cannot say, unless it is that the tobacconist of today is too tired to roll his warrior out in the morning and pull him back at night, if he takes such good care of him.

"The Indian is an appropriate emblem for the tobacconist, but it cannot be said that a red and white striped pole surmounted by a blue ground with stars is appropriate to the barber's trade, as the national colors have nothing to do with that business. It is purely an arbitrary assumption of an emblem, the origin of which I never saw satisfactorily explained.

"The druggist of to-day does not display his emblem of mortar and pestal with such frequency as of old. Now that they have gone so extensively into the notion and toilet article trade perhaps the association of the pill mixer is repugnant to the compounders of prescriptions.

"When Maiden lane, in New York, marked the limits of the retail trade district of the metropolis on some sailors' signs would be seen the emblem of a lamb suspended in a sling of cloth tied at the ends. This appropriate emblem of woolen goods was brought from England, where it is to be seen now frequently upon the signs of the drapers and tailors' shops. The present generation in this country never saw this emblem here.

"If you see a painting of a high glass, with or without a side handle, but always with the representation of a lot of soapsuds flowing over the top, you may bet your last cent that inside of that window you can buy a glass of beer for a nickel.

"There are no gold beaters in Washington, but in the vicinity of South Fifth avenue and Prince streets, New York, pretty much all of the gold leaf used in this country is pounded into the neat little thin golden sheets used in the trade. In front of all of these places is either a sign or gilded wooden arm of muscular proportions bared to the elbow, with the hand clutching tightly the gold beater's mallet. A painter knows this sign as quickly as a thirsty man recognizes the schooner of beer.

"The pawnbroker will never take in the well-known three balls. Years ago one would see on a liveryman's sign the picture of a horse in motion, but now they are to be observed only in the smaller cities and towns. The blacksmith still keeps the horseshoe in front of his shop, while occasionally is to be observed the saw, plane and square of the carpenter. A good emblem for the plumber would be his proverbial bill. Old residents will recall the big boots which used to be placed in front of shoe stores on the pavement or suspended above the door, but now the emblem is relegated to the cobbler. The artist and painter have the palette with brushes through the thumbhole, the jeweler his street clock, and the optician the big spectacles. In short, all trade emblems are appropriate to their business except the barber's."

The famous Lady Holland was born nobody in particular, but she made up in assurance what she lacked in ancestry. Once at a gathering of half of the nobilities of the French capital, she dropped something on the floor, and, turning in the most natural way to one of the haughtiest princesses, said, "Pick it up, my dear."

Of all the eccentric checks which have been drawn in the world the palm must unhesitatingly be awarded to one which was presented to the cashier of one of the Tonawanda banks recently. The check, which was for $10, was made payable to "the sweetest of the sweet," and was presented to the cashier in the ordinary way. The cashier naturally startled by the unusual expression in the body of the check, asked in innocence: "Who is the 'sweetest of the sweet?'" "I am," replied the lady. "Kindly endorse it that way," said the cashier. She did. And as her husband's account warranted it, for, like a prudent man, he had not overdrawn it, the "sweetest of the sweet" received her money.

Business Transacted by the House and Senate in the National Capital.

PHILIPPINE DEBATE GOES ON

Appropriation of $200,000 Is Made for Sufferers on the Island of Martinique—House Has a Lively Discussion of Philippine Affairs.

Washington, May 13.—Senate.—An additional appropriation of $200,000 was made by the senate today for the stricken people of the French West Indies, in accordance with the recommendations of the president that $500,000 be appropriated. The agricultural appropriation bill was passed and then Stewart, of Nevada, in supporting the Philippine bill, warned the minority that no political gain would accrue to them from their attack on the army. The American people, he said, always had supported the army and always would. He declared that for us to now take down the American flag from the Philippines would be a national disgrace. While discussing the proposed coinage of the silver dollar for the Philippines, Stewart declared that the silver question in this country was dead, at least for the present, on account of the large output of gold.

House.—The naval appropriation bill, which provides for two new battleships, two armored cruisers, and two gunboats, and carries a total of $77,650,000, was taken up in the house today. Representative Foss, of Illinois, chairman of the naval committee, in opening the debate, sounded a note of warning against the over-confident belief that our navy is invincible. He declared that our victories in Manila and Santiago were due to the fact that we were contending with a decaying nation and that our strength far outmatched Spain's in those two contests. Foss said that while we have 183 ships built and building, yet comparatively few of them have any real fighting value. Most of those now building are termed peace boats. Rixey, of Virginia, strongly supported the plan of government construction of warships. The senate bill making additional appropriation for Martinique sufferers was referred to to appropriation committee.

Washington, May 14.—Senate.—During the greater part of the senate session today the fortifications appropriation bill was under consideration. Proctor, of Vermont, offered an amendment providing that no part of the appropriation should be used for procuring disappearing gun carriages. The amendment precipitated a debate, which continued for two hours, and had not been concluded when the measure was laid aside for the day. Proctor led the fight against the disappearing carriages, declaring that they never would be effective and that in actual war it would be shown that they were lamentable failures. Perkins, of California, warmly defended the war department in adopting the disappearing carriages, maintaining that the bulk of evidence upon the subject was in support of the carriages.

House.—The naval appropriation bill occupied the attention of the house throughout the day, Dayton of West Virginia, speaking on the need of strengthening of our naval battle line, while W. W. Kitchin, of North Carolina, Fitzgerald, of New York, Metcalf, of California, and Maynard, of Virginia, strongly advocated the building of warships in government navy yards. The debate took a wider range at times. Rhea, of Pennsylvania, speaking in criticism of the administration's Philippine policy, and Elliott, of South Carolina, presenting the advantages of the proposed Appalachian forest reservation.

Washington, May 15.—Senate.—An extended speech by McLaurin of Mississippi, in opposition to the pending Philippine government bill, was a feature of today's session of the senate. The Mississippi senator vigorously assailed the administration's policy in the Philippines. He deprecated the outrages perpetrated in the islands, whether they were committed by the Filipinos or the Americans. They were, in his judgment, the natural outgrowth of the government's policy, for which, he maintained, the republican party was responsible. He urged the abandonment of the policy in the interest of humanity and justice. He declared that the minority was not discussing the pending measure to obtain political capital, as all the political material which the democrats desired had been made for them by the republicans in this congress. The bill providing for the erection of a union railway station in Washington and the fortifications apropriation bill were passed.

House.—The house today was plunged into an exciting debate on Philippine affairs. Thus far the subject of alleged atrocities in the islands has engaged the attention of the senate alone and only occasional echoes have been heard in the house. But today the reports of cruelty and outrage were rehearsed in the house with vehemence and bitterness. The naval bill was the order of the day, but it received only scant attention after the allegations of Philippine outrages were presented. A speech by Vandiver of Missouri, reciting instances of alleged outrage, brought on the discussion. Personalities and recriminations were freely passed about. Vandiver was supported in his criticisms and Lessler of New York. ... debate on the naval bill closed at 1 o'clock, and when the house adjourned the measure was being read for amendment.

Washington, May 16.—Senate.—An effort was made by Lodge, of Massachusetts, in the senate today to induce the minority to fix a time when a vote might be taken on the Philippine government bill, but Dubois, of Idaho, speaking for the democratic side, did not desire to specify a date for the vote. Assurances were given that the minority were not seeking for delay, but wished simply that discussion should be exhausted before the vote was taken. McLaurin, of Mississippi, concluded his speech begun yesterday in opposition to the present Philippine position of the government, which he maintained, was responsible for all the ills that had come to the United States in those islands. Deboe of Kentucky, supported the pending measure in a carefully prepared speech, maintaining that the policy outlined by McKinley ought to be followed to the end. He asserted that peace would quickly come when the sympathizers of Aguinaldo ceased their attacks on the American army and flag.

House.—The house had another lively day of debate today. Philippine atrocities and the Schley case came in for considerable attention. The naval appropriation bill received little attention after the more exciting themes of debate came up. Cannon, of Illinois, and Hepburn, of Iowa, brought on the discussion by criticizing the extent to which naval officers secured comfortable berths ashore, whereupon Williams, of Mississippi, made a very sarcastic speech at the expense of Admiral Crowinshield.

Washington, May 17.—House.—The house spent the day in discussing the naval appropriation bill and the most important feature of the discussion involved a revival of the Sampson-Schley controversy. This arose over an amendment to the bill which was presented by Mudd, of Maryland, and which was adopted, prohibiting the use of Maclay's history of the navy as a text book at the naval academy. A number of minor amendments to the bill were adopted, but the consideration of the measure was not completed before the house adjourned.

TOLD BY AN EYE WITNESS.

Mayor of Trinite, Who Saw Eruption of Mont Pelee, Describes it.

New York, May 19.—Ferdinand Clerc, a millionaire, and mayor of Trinite, is one of the few persons who witnessed the eruption of Mont Pelee and lived to tell about it, says a dispatch to the World from St. Marie, Martinique. He says on the morning of May 8 he noticed the rumblings from the volcano, which were more pronounced that they had been up to that time. The barometer in his house fluttered violently, and he at once notified his servants to hitch mules to the carriage and prepare for flight. Clerc took his wife and four children with him and rushed from the city. He warned all his friends to hasten away also but his advice was discredited.

He left behind him at a house twenty-eight of his friends, who had gathered there at his call, and whom he advised to get away as rapidly as they could. As Clerc and his family were leaving St. Pierre, he saw Mr. Prentis, the American consul, standing in front of his house with Mrs. Prentis. Mr. Clerc called out to Mr. Prentis and warned him to flee from the city at once, but the consul only laughed and waived his hand as he answered: "Oh, there is no danger, don't be afraid."

When Clerc reached Morne Rouge, distance from St. Pierre about six miles, he saw a huge mass of slate-colored stones and ashes burst from Mont Pelee and tumble down on St. Pierre. This was immediately followed by a great wall of flame, which seemed to rise and topple over on the doomed town. The whole thing lasted not more than two minutes.

So sharply defined was the wall of flame that a bull caught on the edge of its tracks was roasted to a crisp on one side and not a hair of the animal was singed on the other.

A man named Lazzerne, with a companion, was entering St. Pierre in a small carriage drawn by a pair of mules. The mules were instantly killed and Lazzarne and his friend was severly burned, but the coachman who was between the mules and the two men was not burned in the least.

Washington, May 19.—With imposing ceremonies the remains of Major General William Starke Rosecrans were entered in Arlington cemetery, and under the direction of the Society of the Army of the Cumberland. President Roosevelt, members of his cabinet, senators and representatives, and a host of friends, including many of the old army associates, were present to pay their last tribute to the old soldier.

"I am perfectly well," says Mrs. Martin, of Brooklyn. "Peruna cured me."

MRS. ANNA MARTIN.

Mrs. Anna Martin, 47 Hoyt street, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"Peruna did so much for me that I feel it my duty to recommend it to others who may be similarly afflicted. About a year ago my health was completely broken down, had backache dizziness and irregularities, and life seemed dark indeed. We had used Peruna in our home as a tonic and for colds and catarrh and I decided to try it for my trouble. In less than three months I became regular, my pains had entirely disappeared, and I am now pertectly well."—Mrs. Anna Martin.

Miss Marie Johnson, 11 Columbia, East, Detroit, Mich., is Worthy Vice Templar in Hope Lodge No. 6, Independent Order Good Templars. Miss Johnson, as so many other women also have done, found in Peruna a specific for a severe case of female weakness. She writes:

"I want to do what I can to let the whole world know what a grand medicine Peruna is. For eleven years I suffered with female troubles and complications arising therefrom. Doctors failed to cure me, and I despaired of being helped. Peruna cured me in three short months. I can hardly believe it myself, but it is a blessed fact. I am perfectly well now, and have not had an ache or pain for months. I want my suffering sisters to know what Peruna has done for me."—Miss Marie Johnson.

Miss Ruth Emerson, 72 Sycamore St., Buffalo, N. Y., writes: "I suffered for two years with irregular and painful menstruation, and Peruna cured me within six weeks. I cannot tell you how grateful I feel. Any agency which brings health and strength to the afflicted is always a welcome friend, and to-day the market is so filled with useless and injurious medicines that it is a pleasure to know of so reliable a remedy as you place before the public."—Miss Ruth Emerson.

It is no longer a question as to whether Peruna can be relied on to cure all such cases. During the many years in which Peruna has been put to test in all forms and stages of acute and chronic catarrh no one year has put this remedy to greater test than the past year.

Peruna is the acknowledged catarrh remedy of the age. Dr. Hartman, the compounder of Peruna, has written a book on the phases of catarrh peculiar to women, entitled, "Health and Beauty." It will be sent free to any address by The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Miners Vote to Continue the Fight to the Bitter End.

145,000 MEN WILL STOP WORK

Miners Have Been Preparing for Eighteen Months and Are Thought to Be in Good Condition for a Fight—Operators Oppose Any Concession.

Hazelton, Pa., May 16.—The anthracite mine workers, in convention late yesterday afternoon, by a vote of 461¼ to 349¾, decided to continue the strike of the 145,000 men against the mine owners and to fight it out to the bitter end. The matter of calling out the engineers, firemen and pump runners will be decided by the delegates today.

The step taken yesterday by the miners after practically considering the matter for two months has wiped out the uncertainty of the situation, and it is freely predicted that the most serious labor struggle in the history of the country, if not in the world, is about to begin. That is the view taken by nearly every miner. While the leaders are cautious and will not forecast their actions, it is not unlikely that the miners' fight will be carried into the bituminous coal regions and into other fields of industry.

Mine workers for eighteen months have been looking forward to this strike, and are considered to be in better shape today for a fight than they were in the great strike of 1900. That struggle ended in the mine owners giving the men a 10 per cent advance after a six weeks' suspension. The operators are on record as being unalterably opposed to granting the men any concessions, and they have personally informed the mine workers' leaders to that effect.

The workmen fear that the present fight may mean the destruction of their organization, because they believe that the mine owners are bent more on wrecking their union than they are in opposing the demands for higher wages and shorter days.

Hazleton, May 16.—The anthracite mine workers in convention yesterday, in order to win their strike, unanimously decided upon a plan that if carried into successful operation would practically tie up the industries of the country, paralyzed business and inconvenience people throughout the United States. It is their desire that a special national convention of the United Mine Workers of America be called as soon as practicable for the purpose of endeavoring to have all the bituminous mine workers, both organized and unorganized, involved in the anthracite miner's struggle. This announcement was officially made yesterday by President John Mitchell.

If a special national convention is called, and the miners succeed in their object, it would directly effect 449,000 men who are employed in and about the coal mines of the country. Coal would soon become scarce and this would ultimately result in the tying up of railroads and all sorts of industries that use large quantities of the fuel. It is doubted by some interested persons here who are closely watching developments that such a stupendous movement could be brought about for the reason that the business interests of the world would not stand idly by and permit such a plan to be put into effect.

The striking miners are enthusiastic over the convention's action and many of them can see only success in the proposition.

An absolutely trustworthy source is authority for the statement that the special convenion will be called, probably at Indianapolis in the course of several weeks.

PELEE IN VIOLENT ERUPTION.

Lightning Plays About Crater and Inhabitants are Horror Stricken.

Fort de France, Island of Martinique, May 17.—Great ashes of very bright light were emitted from Mont Pelee between 10 and 11 o'clock Thursday night. They were visible from here. Thick, glowing, red clouds, interspersed with flashes of light, are issuing from the volcano this morning. Showers of cinders lasting for twenty minutes, acompanied the activity. The people in the districts of Lorraine, Marigot, Sainte Marie and La Trinidad are panic stricken.

London, May 17.—The Daily Mail says it understands that sufficient indications of the attitude of the Boer leaders at Vereening have transpired to justify the assertion that peace in South Africa is absolutely assured. Madrid, May 14.—Queen Maria Christiana has resigned her regency. The scene in the palace was extremely pathetic. Though the ceremony virtually ends her regency, she remains officially queen regent until the king takes the oath in the presence of the chambers next Saturday.

I have been Cured

I have been a great sufferer from Rheumatism for many years. I was laid up with Rheumatic Fever for nine weeks in 1894, and again for sixteen (16) weeks in 1896. I tried many medicines I saw advertised and others I was recommended; finally I was induced to take Vogeler's Curative Compound, which did me more good than all other medicines. In fact, I feel quite a different man since I have been taking the Compound. All my neighbors and friends are quite surprised to see me about and looking so well. I can only say that Vogeler's Curative Compound taken internally and by using St. Jacobs Oil outwardly acted like magic in my case. I had been taking medicines for years without obtaining benefit, but Vogeler's has practically cured me. I have recommended Vogeler's Curative Compound to a lot of my acquaintances, and they tell me that it has worked wonders.

"Wishing you every success in the sale of your Vogeler's Curative Compound and St. Jacobs Oil, I remain, gentlemen,

"Your obedient servant,

HERPICIDE

TO HAVE THICK, LUXURIANT HAIR

is the most longed-for desire of every woman. She knows what a powerful aid to beauty it is, and endeavors to make her own as soft, glossy and thick as possible. Comparatively few of them are aware as yet that Newbro's Herpicide, a recent scientific discovery, will enable them to possess hair as thick and luxuriant as anyone could desire.

It works on a new theory of destroying the germ that feeds upon the hair root, and thus making dandruff and falling hair impossible. It then proceeds to produce a growth of thick, glossy hair that soon becomes the pride of its owner.

One trial will convince you of its virtues.

ALL CASES OF

by our new invention. Only those born deaf are incurable.

HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen: — Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours.

DOINGS IN AND NEAR ELL CENTER

Dished up to Suit all Classes by Our Special Correspondent.

Several of our young people went to Klemme Monday night to take in the show but were disappointed.

Joe and Horace Lawhorn with their families and Miss Christie spent Sunday at Clear Lake.

Remember the primary Saturday, May 31.

Miss Olive Braund, who has been at the hospital in Charles City for treatment, has returned home, and we hope she will regain her usual good health.

Ed. Post had business in this corner of the earth last Sunday.

A great many from here expect to attend the memorial services at Garner Friday, and pay their respects to the gallant heroes who died for their country.

LAST WEEK ITEMS

Mr. Barz is painting his house on his Ell Center farm, occupied by Mr. Schwarz.

Chas. Schroeder was hauling lumber through here last week for his new house on the farm east of here.

A. B. Shafer and family passed through here last Saturday on their way home from their visit in east Ell.

W. R. Bloom and Wm. Schaper were here the fore part of last week looking after the latter's political interests. Mr. Schaper is a fine appearing man and to a fellow up a tree it looks as though he would gather in the plum.

Like a Drowning Man.

"Five years ago a disease the doctors called dyspepsia took such a hold of me that I could scarcely go," writes Geo. S. Marsh, well known attorney of Nocona, Tex. "I took quantities of pepsin and other medicines but nothing helped me. As a drowning man grabs at a straw I grabbed at Kodol. I felt an improvement at once and after a few bottles am sound and well." Kodol is the only preparation which exactly reproduces the natural digestive juices and consequently is the only one which digests any good food and cures any form of stomach trouble. J. L. Harr.

FOR GRANDPA'S SAKE.

My grandpa went to war long years ago,
I never saw him, but they told me so,
And how, after a battle, sad news came,
Among the "missing" was my grandpa's name.

They never heard of him again, they said,
And so we know that grandpa must be dead;
And when I think of him, so good and brave,
I wish we knew where he had found a grave.

When Decoration day comes, every year,
I feel so sad, and sometimes shed a tear,
To see the soldiers' graves all spread with flowers,
While grandpa cannot have one rose of ours.

So if some little Southern girl should know
A nameless grave where never blossoms grow,
I'd love her so, if there some flowers sne'd lay
For grandpa's sake, this Decoration day.
—Youth's Companion.

The Last Charge.

BY J. WHITFIELD SCATTERGOOD.
(Copyright, 1902, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Far away under the trees of the park lounged hundreds of people. Polite attention prevailed among those within hearing distance; farther away the hum of voices and shouts of unsuppressed laughter arose on the air in unmistakable volume. This was sacrilege to the ears of Weak-Eyed Jones. To him no event was more solemn than the present, and it seemed the same dignity and reverence he felt should actuate the conduct of others.

The air was suffocating. Early in the day the heated atmosphere had become saturated with clouds of choking dust, which rolled into the city behind hundreds of incoming farmers' conveyances. But Weak-Eyed Jones took it all with a generous degree of humility and uncomplaining. A young couple at his elbow induiged so busily in conversation he could not hear the voice of the adjutant, yet he bore it silently. Even though his obscure sight, years before made almost useless by a rebel minie ball, which carried away the bridge of his nose and grazed both eyes, was powerless to penetrate the dust-heavy distance between him and the speaker he was secretly happy.

His meditations were cut short by a ...iden commotion at his elbow. Peo... were hurrying from their seats; ... program must be over. He was ...ried along with the rest, towards ... speakers' stand, but he hadn't gone ...en he noticed some one trying ...k. Above the noise he just ... the last phrase: "Will close ... election by the young ladies'

... drum corps somewhere ...eet struck up "Marching ...gia"—the line com... n. Hurried along with ...eak-Eyed Jones took up ...sition with others of his ...mrades. The heat was ...ng here, as they stood waiting for what seemed like hours. Presently Weak-Eyed began to grow faint. The morning had found him physically indisposed, but never yet having missed meeting with his soldier comrades on the thirtieth of May, he didn't propose to to-day. It might be the last time—probably it would—but he'd go this once!

The band up the street struck up "The Star-Spangled Banner"—he was conscious of the column moving. He had stood still so long his legs were almost stiff and action made him stagger, but with the use of his cane he maintained his balance and managed to move along. Shouts of "Hurrah!" Hurrah!" greeted his ears from every side. Proudly he lifted his head and threw his shoulders back with unctious military dignity.

The ovation continued with increased enthusiasm as they passed up the street. Someone tried to retaliate with a "Hurrah for the boys of '61!" but the voice was lost in the lusty tide of cheering for "The boys of '98!" Following the squad of soldiers came a bicycle brigade, men on horseback, and, lastly, wagon loads of flower girls dressed in white—wagons for strong, healthy girls, while decrepit old veterans must go afoot.

As the long line rounded a corner and passed from the boulevard into an east and west thoroughfare, Weak-Eyed Jones tottered. Bravely he pulled his remaining strength together and ambled on, his faltering footsteps unable to beat time to the rapid music. Many of his comrades, too, had long since forgotten how to march. And how few they numbered now—these veterans!

Mount Zion cemetery was a beautiful spot—lifted above woods and sky just beyond where the lake nestled quietly between two hillsides—the valley, with its ribbon of a rivulet, winding verdure-laden at its woody base, the azure heavens outlining its great white gates, its marble monuments, its flowering shrubbery, its trees of green, with rare exactness beyond.

Weak-Eyed Jones raised his eyes to the hill yet in the distance. He could see but the outline of the hallowed spot rising against the lurid sky. His spirit was awed! The heavy march was telling on his weakened body, his steps were getting more and more uncertain. A momentary dizziness came over him.

"Hark!" Suddenly the music of the days of '63 ... once more he ... youth—strong, vigorous, in arms! And could this, then, be Thomas' brigade?—and yonder—yonder hill—Missionary Ridge where, proudly drawn in battle array, the Confederate legions awaited them calmly with a welcome of leaden death?

And whence all this rub-a-dub-dub, rub-a-dub-dub, that fired the very blood within the veins? Ah! Foolish question! Why ask when there was Soffels, the drummer boy? Nobody but Soffels could drum like that! Soffels was the only one who could make his drum "talk" in accents so clear and true—now gay, gay as the morning sunlight; now sad—sad as the hour of death, as he turned the tide of battle into victory or defeat!

"Take the rifle-pits at the base, then halt and reform!" Weak-Eyed Jones heard the order as clear as on the day it fired the souls of thousands of Union soldiers to battle and to victory. The march of many feet was heard; the glint of polished bayonets seen. The stars and stripes stood straight to the breeze as like clockwork that human phalanx moved to obey.

Was that the foe there, entrenched at the base of the hill, calmly waiting with muskets primed and ready? But never a man did he see falter. Onward they pressed, with music soaring and flags flying, into the fray and into the face of death. Then, when the first volley had been met and passed, they were over the breastworks and upon the foe. He felt an absence about him then. He looked for Billy. Billy was gone! A bullet had carried him down at the first onslaught, he concluded. Then he saw the men in the trenches waver for a moment, club their muskets for a last feeble stand. That was all; then they fled. The Federal troops, forgetting their orders in the enthusiasm of the moment, were as quickly over the ramparts and after them—through woods, over logs, past gulches, and into the face of a murderous musketry from above!

Presently Weak-Eyed reeled and fell from the marching column, striking his head as he fell. Grasping a shade tree by the side of the thoroughfare he slowly raised himself to his knees. Had he, too, been struck by a flying bullet? He put his hand to his head. Yes, there was blood! —and the bridge of his nose was gone! But he forgot the pain momentarily as he heard the order: "Charge the crest of the hill!" pass from mouth to mouth as it came from Grant. His pulses leapt. His blood fairly bounded at the words. He tried to rise and obey, but he could neither see nor walk.

"Hurrah fer th'—stars an'—stripes!" he shouted in the exultation of the moment, but the effort cost him throbs of pain.

A vehicle full of belated celebrationists, hurrying after the procession, heard his shout. "A drunken soldier," they said. Weak-Eyed thought an ammunition wagon was hurrying to the front.

His sight cleared a little after the first daze from his fall. In the distance he saw clouds of dust arising. "The smoke of the battle," he thought. The music was still playing, clearer and louder than ever, indicating the enthusiasm of battle. Someone approached his side.

"Only a—scrape—comrade!" he said. "Never—mind me—I'll be—all right—soon. There's work—fer you—up there!" He indicated the hill with a wave of his hand.

"I tell you he's not drunk; he's sick." The man at his side addressed some one near at hand.

In pity they tried to raise him to his feet. His legs would not support ...EAR ... "Hark!" ... exc... rising himself with heroic effo... "I hear—th' sound o' vict'ry!" Volleys of musketry rang out on the air. "Give it—to 'em—boys!" he added.

"Chances are against him," a voice was heard to remark nearby. "He must be taken to a physician."

"Aw! He's only had a drop too much t' drink, I tell you," some one answered.

Weak-Eyed didn't hear; his whole mind, his whole being was centered in another direction. Back of Mt. Zion's crest the sun began to set, and, presently, there came the long, low, solemn roll of the drums—the slow, melancholy, almost human roll.

"Ah! it's—all—over!" he said, faintly.

Only a few women were at his side now.

"It's—over," he gasped, "an'—Billy—you'll have t'—go—with th' rest—into th' trenches—an' under th' sod. But—not—me! They said—I c'd—go home. I'm wounded. I'll—tell her—Billy—when I git—there—that you—died a-fightin'—an' a-think-

He attempted to rise, but could not. Some one held a flask to his lips and he drank.

The procession meantime wended down the hill again.

The first columns swept past where Weak-Eyed Jones was prone upon the grass. Some one stepped out to hail some passing vehicle. The mayor's carriage aproached. "A jolly old drunk, there!" the occupants remarked, then bowled away up the street and out of hearing. Another carriage swept past without a heed, a load of flower girls drew near. The driver was beckoned to halt, but his attention was centered upon his screaming, laughing passengers.

The sun was now almost set.

Presently Weak-Eyed Jones feebly raised himself upon his emaciated elbows, peered with all the power he could muster through his almost sightless orbs in the direction of the blood-red sun and moved his lips to speak:

"Yes—they're waitin'—fer me, Billy. I wish—you—was—a-goin'—too!" he said.

British Ambassador to Washington Dies Passes Away.

STATUE TO GEN. ROCHAMBEAU

United States and France Unite in Doing Honor to the Noted Frenchman—Roosevelt, Cambon, Porter and Lodge Make Addresses.

Washington, May 26.—Lord Pauncefort, British ambassador to the United States, died at the embassy Saturday morning at 5:35 o'clock.

The improvement which had been noticed in his condition during the past week received a sudden check about 6 o'clock Friday evening, when it was noticed that he was experiencing difficulty in breathing. Soon after 3 o'clock distinct weakness of the heart developed, and his pulse began to collapse. He died so peacefully that it surprised even his physicians, who feared that the anaemia would prove troublesome when the end came.

All through the past winter Lord Pauncefote has been a sufferer from rheumatic gout, but he bravely kept on his feet as much as possible, went to the state department regularly on diplomatic days and generally strove to keep up his active duties, though it was evident that the effort it cost him was great. In the early part of March the ambassador went to North Carolina on a visit to George Vanderbilt at Biltmore, and stayed there for about a fortnight in the hope of recuperating from his affliction in the Carolina pines. He returned to Washing about the middle of the month with his suffering but little abated. In April there came another severe attack and from that time until his death the ambassador has been confined almost continuously to his bed, and his strength has been slowly but surely leaving him. He suffered pain from his swollen limbs so intense so as to bring, toward the last, temporary delirium, and to gain rest for him. Dr. Jung, of this city, and Dr. Osler, of Baltimore, his attending physicians, found it necessary to administer opiates, though these were given most cautiously in fear of detriment to the heart.

STATUE TO ROCHAMBEAU.

United States and France Do Honor to Noted Frenchman.

Washington, May 26.—Amid the enthusiastic demonstrations of a great concourse of people the superb bronze statute of General Count de Rochambeau, who brought the forces of France across the sea at the hour of greatest peril in the American revolution, was unveiled Saturday. Seldom has any event presented so many brilliant features of military pageantry, and at the same time given occasion for the manifestation of the strong bonds of friendship existing between the French republic and the United States. For the first time in the history the national capital witnessed the sight of rank on rank of French seamen swinging through Pennsylvania avenue and mingling their cheers with those of the American blue jackets and soldiers, while at the same time the French tri-colors were entwined with the stars and the stripes, and the sound of the "Marseillaise" was heard along with the "Star-Spangled Banner."

The ceremony of unveiling occurred at the southwest corner of Lafayette square, almost directly opposite the White House, where the massive figure of the French general has been erected. Surrounding the figure were grand stands to accommodate the many distinguished officials and the guests invited to take part in the exercises. On every hand the colors of France and America were blended, one stand being hung with great folds of red, another with white and still another with blue. Within the amphitheater were gathered representatives of every branch of the government, including the president of the United States and members of his cabinet, the chief justice and associate judges of the supreme court, the lieutenant general of the army and the admiral of the navy, senators and representatives. Not less distinguished was the representation of France, designated by President Loubet, and including General Brugere, the highest field officer of the French army; Vice-Admiral Fournier, inspector general of the French army; the venerable General Count Chalendar, the descendents of Rochambeau and Lafayett and others distinguished in French military, official, literary and artistic life. With them were the French embassador, M. Cambon, and the entire staff of the French embassy, all in brilliant and diplomatic uniform, while the diplomatic corps was represented by the German, Russian, Italian and Mexican ambassadors and ministers from many foreign countries.

President Roosevelt and members of the cabinet were escorted from the White House by a file of minute men, dressed in the uniform of continental days. Addresses were made by President Roosevelt, Ambassador Cambon, General Horace Porter and Senator Lodge.

Look before you leap and see if there is a soft place to light.

To-morrow is the fool's Land of Promise.

SUFFERED 25 YE[ARS]

With Catarrh of the Sto[mach]. Pe-ru-na Cured.

Congressman Botkin, of Winfield, Kan.

In a recent letter to Dr. Hartman, Congressman Botkin says:

"My Dear Doctor—It gives me pleasure to certify to the excellent curative qualities of your medicines—Peruna and Manalin. I have been afflicted more or less for a quarter of a century with catarrh of the stomach and constipation. A residence in Washington has increased these troubles. A few bottles of your medicine have given me almost complete relief, and I am sure that a continuation of them will effect a permanent cure."—J. D. Botkin.

Mr. L. F. Verdery, a prominent real estate agent of Augusta, Ga., writes:

"I have been a great sufferer from catarrhal dyspepsia. I tried many physicians, visited a good many springs, but I believe Peruna has done more for me than all of the above put together. I feel like a new person."—L. F. Verdery.

The most common form of summer catarrh is catarrh of the stomach. This is generally known as dyspepsia. Peruna cures these cases like magic.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

The latter was one of the subordinates on whom the great commander and hero in the march to the sea absolutely depended, and in whom Grant, too, had absolute confidence. The Iowa major general is therefore peculiarly fitted to discuss the subject on which he dwelt last night to the edification of large numbers of his comrades. At the Y. M. C. A. auditorium the Spanish-American war veterans held a campfire, all the regiments in the late war being represented. At the Mirror theater the ex-prisoners of war renewed in memory the horrors of the southern prison pen and lived over again the days and nights of misery spent in Libey and Andersonville, or told of thrilling experiences in escaping from captivity.

Upward of 5,000 veterans, it is estimated, were gathered in the city yesterday, and the larger part of them marched in the grand parade in the afternoon. Following the parade reunions of the different regiments and organizations were held. Notable among these was the reunion of the survivors of the Vicksburg campaign and siege at the Mirror theater. In the course of the day the Vicksburg commission met and organized and laid plans for the work before it of having monuments constructed to Iowa soldiers who took part in the siege and campaign.

The first business session of the state department was held yesterday morning. It was marked chiefly by the reports of officers and by the adoption of resolutions upholding the national administration's policy in the Philippines.

Des Moines, May 21.—The members of the Iowa department of the Grand Army of the Republic were last night welcomed to the city by addresses by Mayor Brenton and Governor Cummins before an immense audience at the Auditorium. Addresses were also made by Department Commander Metzger, Commander-in-Chief Torrence of Minneapolis, Mrs. Jones of Bradford, Vt., president of the Woman's Relief Corps, Governor Van Sant of Minnesota, General Dodge and ex-Governor Drake.

During the afternoon Governor Cummins, Governor Van Sant and Commander-in-Chief Torrence held a reception at the capitol.

Des Moines, May 23.—The twenty-eighth annual encampment of the Iowa department of the Grand Army of the Republic adjourned yesterday. It was the largest attended and best encampment held for over a decade. The officers and all are enthusiastic over the way Des Moines welcomed and entertained the old soldiers, and at the very creditable reports made to the encampment.

Officers for the ensuing year are as follows: Department commander, John Linda, of Council Bluffs; senior vice commander, N. S. Durgen, of Cresco; junior vice-commander, Joseph Mallison, of Fonda; medical director, Dr. J. Ames Shaffer of Keokuk; chaplain, Rev. S. R. Ferguson, of Parkersburg.

Resolutions were adopted urging the national encampment to give proper recognition to the Memorial university at Mason City; specifying that in the opinion of the old soldiers a fair construction of the laws relating to marriage would be that where a man was living with a woman as his wife up to the time of his death, such evidence ought to be conclusive enough to entitle said woman to a pension; urging the Iowa members in congress to work for the passage of the Clara Barton bill as to annuity for that deserving woman; expressing the sentiment that a law should be passed giving all honorably discharged soldiers some kind of a pension, such to be classed as graded; commending State Superintendent R. C. Barrett for his work in securing recognition of Flag day, of the observance of the Lincoln and Washington birthdays; urging congress to provide for the preservation of the Shirley house in the Vicksburg National Park.

John Swipper, who has been working in the vicinity of Red Oak till recently, was found in a freight car at Shenandoah in a most pitiable condition. He had boarded the train at Red Oak several days previous in an attempt to steal a ride to his home in St. Joseph, Mo. Before reaching Shenandoah he had been ejected from the train and the brakeman, so he alleges, kicked him in the abdomen. He attracted the attention of some parties who were passing the car and informed them he had not had a thing to eat or drink in three days. He was removed to a private hospital where it was discovered he was suffering from an abcess in the loin. It is feared he cannot recover.

The sale in New York of the famous library of John E. Burton, of Lake Geneva, Wis., recalls the fact that it was Burton who some years ago traded his $100,000 hotel in Hurley, Wis., to a letter carrier, Byron S. Ross, of Chicago, for a collection of 3,000,000 stamps.

Edwin Ginn, the publisher, was honored recently by thirty of his townsfolk, representative citizens of Winchester, Mass., by a dinner in appreciation of his recent purchase of Ringelel, a beautiful residential park in the center of the town. Had it not been for his timely purchase this beautiful expanse of trees and lawns would have been divided by speculators into a hundred house lots.

William Halleck Deming, a wealthy citizen of San Francisco, called a friend up by telephone one morning and was much impressed by the soft and gentle tones of the girl at the central office. He managed to make her acquaintance, and found her entire personality was in close harmony with her voice, proposed and was accepted. The former "hello" girl will travel in Europe with her husband this summer, and San Francisco business men have lately noticed a strange sweetness in the voices of the girls still in the central office.

Burning Head.

Star City, Ark., May 26th.—A very remarkable case has just occurred here.

Mr. W. H. McFalls has been suffering severely for two years with an ailment that puzzled the doctors and everybody. The trouble seemed to be all in his head, which had a burning sensation all the time.

At last he tried a new remedy called Dodd's Kidney Pills and was agreeably surprised to find that the burning gradually disappeared.

An attack of La Grippe has laid him up for the last few weeks, but Dodd's Kidney Pills have banished his old trouble entirely.

His son George used a few of the Pills which his father did not need and they have done him so much good that he says he would not take ten cents a pill for the few he still has left.

Mrs. D. Arnold, President German Woman's Club, Grand Pacific Hotel, Los Angeles, Cal., Relieved of a Tumor by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered four years ago with a tumor in my womb, and the doctors declared I must go to the hospital and undergo an operation, which I dreaded very much and hesitated to submit.

"My husband consulted an old friend who had studied medicine, although he was not a practising physician, and he said he believed that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would cure me. That same day I took my first dose, and I kept it up faithfully until twelve bottles had been used, and not only did the tumor disappear, but my general health was very much improved and I had not felt so well since I was a young woman.

"As I have suffered no relapse since, and as I took no other medicine, I am sure that your Compound restored my health and I believe saved my life."—MRS. D. ARNOLD.

Don't start the summer with a lingering cough or cold. We all know what a "summer cold" is. It's the hardest kind to cure. Often it "hangs on" through the entire season. Take it in hand right now. A few doses of One Minute Cough Cure will set you right. Sure cure for coughs, colds, croup, grip, bronchitis, all throat and lung troubles. Absolutely safe. Acts at once. Children like it. "One Minute Cough Cure is the best cough medicine I ever used," says J. H. Bowles, Groveton, N. H. "I never found anything else that acted so safely and quickly." J. L. Harr.

Landlord Fuller, of the Klemme house, is more than spreading himself. After papering the interior of his hotel, he is now re painting the outside. The improvement is very noticeable.

A vote for John Hammill for county attorney is a vote for a good worthy man, and a man who will fill the office in first class shape. We predict that he will carry Ell township easily.

It is the duty of each voter to get out next Saturday and vote at the primaies. In this county the republican nomination is equivalent to election and therefore to make each nominee the choice of the people. everyone should get out and vote.

Last Tuesday a strange dog, that had been loafing around town for several days, bit the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Suckow. Must we wait until the Gimlet man wakes up to the condition affairs are in before we can find out the result of the primaries? No, dear Gimlet, we can't afford to wait for your Honorable Slowness. You are entirely too far behind the procession. You didn't catch onto the fact that Mr. Lemke had withdrawn from the race until you seen it in the KLEMME TIMES. Now let us give you a little tip. Wm. Schaper will be the next supervisor from the 3rd district, the "wonderful and influential" Gimlet to the contrary notwithstanding, AND, Mr. Schaper will carry Avery "if—you-don't—watch—out." Mr. Lemke had quite a strong following and his friends will support Mr. Schaper. The Gimlet man will wake up some day, perhaps.

[illegible]ne Klemme light-weights drove over to Meservey last Thursday to cross bats with the husky ball team of that place, and succeeded in getting their scalps, so to speak.

The game was close and exciting all through, and was a very good game considering the rough grounds that were played on. The score was a tie at the end of the eighth inning and in the ninth our boys showed their ability with the stick and pounded out the needed run with one man out. Frank Kluckhohn and Bert Crawford officiated as battery for Klemme and Russell and C. P. Ell for Meservey.

Both batteries did excellent work. Some of the fielding was poor on account of the rough and sloping grounds. but taken as a whole, the game was a nice one.

MUST FULFILL CONTRACT.

Iowa Court Holds Against Building and Loan Company.

Des Moines, May 24.—The supreme court yesterday decided that a building and loan corporation doing busines in Iowa cannot enter into special contracts with its stockholders and not live up to its agreement. The case at bar is that of Elizabeth Field vs. the Eastern Building and Loan Association of Syracuse, New York, in which action is brought to recover an amount alleged to be due and payable upon certain certificates of stock in defendant association. The contract entered into was to the effect that plaintiff was to take out five shares of stock on which she agreed to pay regular monthly installments of 75 cents during the period of 78 months, at the end of which time she was to receive the full face value of the shares of stock, $100, with interest at six per cent.

The evidence showed that plaintiff had paid all her monthly dues, in all $292.00, but the books of the association also showed that the "book value" of the stock at the expiration of the term specified in the contract was $292.65, or a gain of six cents during the 78 months. This amount the plaintiff contended was all that it could be held liable for, and that this amount was due only when plaintiff's application for withdrawal should be reached in order of its filing, and when one-half of the monthly receipts from the stock payments and dues should be found sufficient for that purpose. The lower court held, however, that the defendant was entitled to recover the full face value of her stock, and this decision is affirmed by the supreme court.

The defendant association made the claim that its agreement to pay the full face value of the contract at the expiration of the specified time was only intended as an estimate of what the stock might earn while maturing. The supreme court says that it requires too great a strain upon human credulity to believe that language used in the certificate was intended to be understood by the applicant for the stock as a mere estimate for the time when the net profits added to the stock holder's payments, would be equal to $100 a share. If it was intended as an estimate it was an easy thing to say so, the court says.

FIERY GRAVE FOR MINERS

OVER A HUNDRED MEN ENTOMBED AT FERNIE, B. C.

Mines at Fernie are Full of Gas and Dust and Have Always Been Considered Dangerous.

Vancouver, B. C., May 24.—One of the most terrible mine disasters in the history of British Columbia occurred Thursday night in the Crow's Nest Coal company's mines at Fernie, B. C. Over 100 men are either dead or imprisoned in the mine and little hope is entertained of rescuing any who may be alive. Fernie is 300 miles up country and the limited telegraph facilities have not enabled complete details of the disaster to be sent out.

A special last night from Fernie says that the explosion took place Thursday night at 7:30. The management has a list of 133 men who are known to have been in the mine and there are probably others. Of these only twenty-four are known to be safe. It is feared that few, if any, of the remaining 109 are now alive.

What caused the explosion has not yet been definitely ascertained Many of the miners were foreigners. It is reported in Fernie that the explosion resulted from the use by an Italian of an open or naked lamp.

Another theory is that a miner struck a match, exploding the gas which was almost always present in No. 2 shaft. The true cause of the disaster will probably never be positively ascertained, for it is doubtful if any man who knows will reach the outer air alive or be able to tell the tale. The explosion took place in No. 2 shaft of the mine, being repeated in a few seconds in No. 3, with which it is connected.

The work of rescue is being hurried and perfect order prevails, assistance coming from every available source. The presence of coal damp is adding to the danger of rescue work. People are hoping against hope, but is unlikely that any of the miners now entombed in the shaft will be seen alive again.

A new fear has become general—that the mines may catch fire at any time, and survivors are besought by their relatives not to venture into the shafts, even for rescue work.

Seattle, May 26.—A special to the Times from T. C. Thompson, Commercial manager of the Crow's Nest Coal company at Fernie, says: "We are able at this moment to give the [illegible] of the accident which happened 7:30 Thursday evening, resulting heavy loss of life. About 130 were in the mine at the time of accident and of these 20 were saving the death list at 110. [illegible] night we had taken out thirty bodies and we expect to have [illegible] out by tomorrow. The mine [illegible] is improving hourly, fans working well and the prospects [illegible] favorable. There are no indications of fire and everything progressing as favorably as expected.

"J. R. Stocket, general superintendent and Archibald Dick, government inspector of the mines, are doing work as rapidly as possi-

Johnnie Hanley, the 4-year-old son of John Hanley, a laboring man of Fort Dodge, was run over and instantly killed by a street car. The boy was rolling a hoop and was struck while trying to cross the track ahead of the car. The wheels of the car passed over his head, killing him instantly.

John Hallinan of Mt. Pleasant, 56 years of age, a stone cutter, was discovered dead in the woods near the old pork house. Advanced decomposition indicated that the man had been dead at least twenty-four hours, and probably longer. Death was the result of a prolonged spree, there being no evidence of foul play.

Wesley Irwin, who has been on trial at Clarinda for the murder of Oscar K. Miller at Shenandoah last December, was found guilty of murder in the second degree. Two others have been tried at this term of court, charged with participation in the same crime. Edward Dennis was found guilty of murder in the second degree and Eugene Mason was found not guilty. Mason has since been arrested on a charge of perjury.

Louis E. Holman and Myrtle Allen, school teachers and members of prominent families, were arrested at Blencoe charged with arson. It is alleged that they set fire to a floating barge in the Missouri river on which a saloon had been conducted for some time. The owner of the barge was recently enjoined by the courts from selling liquor, but appealed to the supreme court and continued business pending a decision of the tribunal.

The citizens of Decorah have been engaged in providing for those who suffered because of the recent storm. Upward of $3,000 has been raised. The loss is estimated from $200,000 to $300,000. Hundreds are at work clearing the streets and building temporary bridges. Two hundred students from Luther College have been engaged in helping to clean the city. Mail, freight and passengers are conveyed overland to Calmar, twelve miles distant.

As the result of a storm a few nights ago the Milwaukee road is in a worse condition than it has been for years. The Volga branch has not had a train over it since, nor is it expected to have one for two or three days. The Calmar branch is in the same condition, and so are the Waukon and Preston branches. Gangs containing hundreds of men are at work repairing the washouts and every possible effort is being made to get the line in working order. Several bridges were torn from their fastenings, miles of track were washed out, and the lines in general throughout the northeast part of this state are in the worst condition imaginable.

A man representing himself to be J. E. Morton appeared in Spencer a few days ago and began negotiations for the purchase of one of the largest business houses in the place. He closed up the deal, the consideration being $40,000, offering as a payment down drafts amounting to $4,000. He secured a sum of money stated to be $200 in one telegram and $400 in another from the Citizen's State Bank, and also about $200 from different merchants around town on sight drafts on a Philadelphia firm. He secured a team and drove to Storm Lake where he bought a ticket to Omaha and took a train to Fort Dodge. He was arrested at Tara, a little town near Fort Dodge by Sheriff Parker, of Buena Vista county, and was returned to Spencer.

A double track electric railway from the border of Canada to the Gulf of Mexico will be a realization within the next few years, if the plans of a syndicate of the Mississippi valley, with Judge John Porter of Eldora, Iowa, at the head, are carried out. The railway, according to present plans, will start near the Lake of the Woods and will follow the Mississippi valley to the gulf. Judge Porter was in Waterloo a few days ago to get President Carr of the Waterloo and Cedar Falls electric railway into the deal. He stated that the plans were practically assured. A meeting of the promoters, representing every state between Minnesota and the gulf will be held at Des Moines June 1 to perfect the organization. Judge Potter is one of the best known promoters of electric railways in Iowa and the middle west.

During a fit of jealous rage, Mrs. Lysle Russel of Ottumwa, attacked Miss Gladys Lamkin with a dirk on the streets of that city, cutting her victim's clothing to shreds and seriously, if not fatally, wounding her. Mrs. Russel is in jail awaiting the outcome of Miss Lamkin's injuries. Miss Lamkin stopped Mrs. Russel's husband on the street and made an inquiry regarding the progress of a trial now on in the district court. From a window in her residence Mrs. Russel saw the action, and, grabbing a dirk, she dashed from the house and made a furious onslaught upon Miss Lamkin. In a few minutes Miss Lampin fell suffering from several severe gashes, and but for the timely interference of Mail Carrier John Hughes, would probably have suffered more severely. She was taken to the hospital

The Chicago Great Western road, through its attorney, handed over a check for $15,000 in payment for injuries sustained by Charles Prowse of Dubuque while coupling cars eight years ago. The case is one of the most famous of its kind in the country. The case has been tried and retried in every kind of court.

George Masten was instantly killed within a few hundred feet of the Rock Island depot at Iowa City by a fast freight train eastbound. No one saw the accident, but appearances indicate that he was endeavoring to board the train and missed his hold. The upper part of his body was badly bruised, and his lower limbs ground to pieces. He was 45 years of age.

Iver Svaleson was crushed to death under a fall of tons of rock in one of the mines of the United States Gypsum Company, at Fort Dodge. Svaleson and a companion, Ed. Port, were trying to bring down rock loosened by a shot, when the whole ceiling of the room fell, catching Svaleson. Death was instantaneous. His body was badly mangled. Port escaped with a fracture of the hip. Svaleson leaves a wife and yarge family.

A stabbing affray, which may end in murder, took place at an ice cream social at the Smith school house, three miles east of Montezuma. Some fellows loaded up with cheap whisky and proceeded to start trouble. A fellow named Jake Wrath attacked a farm hand named Paul Watts with a knife, inflicting severe wounds. Wrath was placed in jail to await the action of the grand jury. Watts' injuries are serious.

The coroner's jury at Clarinda recommended that Will Lucas be held for the murder of Anna Moore in spite of the fact that he protests his innocense and the evidence introduced seemed to acquit him of the crime. Anna Moore died from a 32-calibre pistol shot in her heart. Lucas carried a pistol of that calibre, but it was a rim fire weapon, while the bullet which caused her death was from a center fire shell.

A gasoline torch in the hands of D. G. Carson, a telephone lineman in the employ of the Boone County Telephone company at Ames, exploded, burning him about the face and neck, inflicting very painful and serious wounds. He was using the torch in melting cable compound, which is used in covering the wires. He was taken to the West House and a doctor called, who pronounced the burns serious, but not fatal.

Flossie Thomas, who stabbed Louis Wade at Newton recently, was cleared at her preliminary examination. Wade was a waiter in a local restaurant and girl was employed in the kitchen. During a scuffle she ran a butcher knife into Wade's stomach, from which he died. She claimed that the stabbing was accidental. The evidence introduced at the preliminary examination bore out the statements made by the girl and she was freed.

The remains of a new born babe were found in the woods near Hamilton. Nearby was an empty beer bottle in which had been kerosene. A band of movers had been camped near the place a few days ago and it is supposed that the baby was killed shortly after it was born by pouring coal oil on the rags and clothing in which the infant was wrapped and then setting fire to the pile. It is not known in what direction the campers went. The coroner has been called to the place and the officers will make an effort to comprehend the parties.

A terrific electrical storm swept over McGregor, causing a loss of $50,000. Lightning struck the jewelry store of S. C. Freese, and it, together with the Metropolitan saloon and billiard hall, were demolished. Eleven men in the saloon at the time rushed out the door as the buildings [illegible] and saved their lives. Peter Lux, a fisherman, asleep on a billiard table, went down with the building, but half an hour afterward crawled out from under the debris unhurt, save a few slight scratches. Blocks of planks were floating away and nearly all the basements and cellars in the business portions of the town were flooded with mud and water. A score of business houses are covered with a coating of mud several inches in thickness on the first floor.

A storm which passed through the country ten miles southeast of Harlan carried destruction and death with it. The cloud first came to the ground near the home of Andrew Sorrenson, one mile north of Kimbleton, Audubon county. Mr. Sorrenson was so seriously injured that he died the next morning. His barn and all of the outbuildings were destroyed. The residence of Lewis Hansen was destroyed and the family was saved only by taking refuge in the cyclone cellar. Chris Nisson's residence was moved from its foundation and all outbuildings were destroyed. The family had taken refuge in the cellar. School house No. 3, Sheron township, was completely destroyed. At Chris Jorgensen's place all the farm buildings and his residence were destroyed and a large number of hogs were killed. James Rasmussen's place was the last one. Here the storm attained its greatest fury. All of his fine farm buildings were destroyed and trees eighteen inches in diameter were torn out by the roots or twisted off.

PHILIPPINE DEBATE GOES ON

Senator Hoar Makes a Noteworthy Address in Opposition to the Administration's Philippine Policy—House Considers Immigration Bill.

Washington, May 20.—Senate.—The subject of the concentration of the inhabitants of the Philippines into camps was a leading topic of the discussion of the Philippine bill in the senate today. Bacon, of Georgia, attacked the policy of the concentration, likening it to the reconcentrado camps established by General Weyler in Cuba. Foraker, of Ohio, defended the action of the military authorities in establishing the camps in the Philippines as wise and proper and as a means of protecting friendly Filipinos from assassination at the hands of roving bands of insurgents. He read a description of the camps to show that they were really camps of instruction and sanitation. Hoar, of Massachusetts, spoke briefly in line with Bacon, criticizing the concentration camps and pointing out the difficulty in getting army officers to testify regarding the situation. The day's debate was closed by Clapp, of Minnesota, in an eloquent speech, in which he urged that the Filipinos ought to be taught to admire and respect the United States as a nation which always had stood for liberty and progress and never had broken its word to any people, great or small.

House.—For a third time within a week the house has instructed its conferees on matters in dispute between the senate and house. Today the instructions were given on amendments in the army appropriation bill before the conferees had even considered the matters in controversy. The motion to instruct was made by Cannon, of Illinois, chairman of the apropriation committee. It was resisted by Hull, chairman of the committee on military affairs, and the somewhat spirited debate which followed developed antagonism between the committees. The amendment at which Cannon aimed was that increasing the appropriation for military posts from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000. A bill amending the passport law was passed. The remainder of the day was devoted to private claims bills.

Washington, May 21.—Senate.—Before the senate resumed consideration of the Philippine bill today it adopted a resolution congratulating the republic of Cuba on its entry into the family of independent nations, and the secretary of state was directed to transmit the resolution to the president of the new republic. The senate also ordered the Associated Press account of the ceremonies of the transfer from the United States to the Cuban authorities printed in the Congressional Record as a public document. Wellington, of Maryland, opposed the pending Philippine measure, and said the action of the United States in the Philippines was as indefensible as the attacks of the hordes of hell upon God. He declared that above the army and the war department and the president were the American people, and in his judgment they were responsible for the condition of affairs in the Philippines, because they had placed the dollar above the man. Bacon, of Georgia, again denounced the Philippine policy pursued by the government. He indicated that if leading republican senators would declare it to be their purpose to give the Filipinos a free government the minority would not quarrel about the time when the governm nt was to establish it.

House.—The house began the consideration of the immigration bill today. The principal speech was made by Shattuc, of Ohio, chairman of the committee on immigration. Wood, of Alabama, gave notice of an amendment to provide an educational test and much of the discussion was on this subject. The house earlier in the day settled three contested election cases in favor of sitting members, and passed a number of bills of minor importance.

Washington, May 22.—Senate.—A notable contribution to the discussion of the Philippine question was made in the senate today by Hoar, of Massachusetts. His views on the subject are well understood, but his expression of them today was profoundly interesting and even impressive. When the venerable senator began to speak every senator at the capitol was in his seat, and for the two hours and a half his address consumed, he was accorded the most careful attention, not only by his colleagues on the floor, but also by the people in the thronged galleries. Hoar confined himself closely to his manuscript. He denounced the attitude of the government in the Philippines as one of the most wicked and foolish chapters in the American history. He urged that the United States withdraw from the islands and permit the people to erect their own government, as has been done in Cuba. He arraigned General Funston for the methods he pursued in the capture of Aguinaldo, and intimated strongly that had the senate been aware of the facts Funston might not have ben confirmed in his recent promotion. He hoped that as the irrevocable step had not been taken by the United States, better counsels would [illegible]evail, and this government [illegible] leave the Philippines. Spon[illegible]s applause swept over the sen[illegible]nd the galleries at the conclusion of the speech. Such a demonstration is very unusual on the floor of the senate. So pronounced was it that the presiding officer called the attention of the senators to the rule prohibiting any expression of approval or dissent. Teller, of Colorado, delivered a speech in the nature of a history of the legislative proceedings through which the new Cuban republic was erected.

House.—The house today resumed discussion of the immigration bill. Almost the entire day was taken up by the amendment offered by Underwood, of Alabama, requiring the educational test for immigrants to this country. It was adopted. The house disagreed to the amendment of the senate to the omnibus public building bill, and it was sent to conference. An amendment to the rules was adopted requiring that conference reports should be printed in the Congressional record before being presented to the house.

Washington, May 23.—Senate.—A temperate and carefully prepared speech was delivered in the senate today on the Philippine bill by Dubois, of Idaho. He confined himself almost entirely to the discussion of the commercial and industrial aspect of the Philippine question, his purpose being to show that it would be a disadvantage to the people of this country to retain the islands. Whatever of profit there might be in them, he said, would accrue to a few capitalists who, by their development of the resources of the archipelago though cheap labor, would come into competition with the the agriculturalists and manufacturers of the United States in the market. This government's activity in the Philippines also would serve to arouse China from her lethargy, and once aroused, the dragon would devour the trade of the world. An earnest and forcible reply to Dubois was made by Beveridge, of Indiana, who contended that the development of China's resources would be of advantage in trade and commerce to the United States, as the industrial development of other nations had been.

House.—The house devoted the day to private pension bills and to a few other minor matters. Loud, of California, criticized the special pension legislation as a disgrace, and drew emphatic responses from Sulloway, of New Hampshire, Sulzer, of New York, and Miers, of Indiana. In all 105 private pension bills were passed.

WAR IS TO END.

Peace in South Africa Now Regarded as a Certainty.

London, May 24.—Great public interest was manifested in yesterday's meeting of the cabinet than has been the case in any meeting since the earlier stages of the war. The ministers reached Downing street from all parts of the country and were greeted by hundreds of people anxious for some sign of the probable trend of affairs. The stock exchange has fully made up its mind how things are going and declares that the bases of peace were signed at Pretoria yesterday. The cabinet meeting adjourned at 5:10 p. m. The Associated Press has ascertained that the government regards the war as practically ended.

Advices received at the war office indicate that whatever decision the Veereening conference may arrive at most, if not all, of the Boer leaders who went to Pretoria will not continue the fight. The present negotiations are merely for the purpose of enabling the Boer leaders to "save their faces." After they learn the results of yesterday afternoon's meeting of the cabinet the Boer leaders are expected to announce their reluctant acquiescence with the British terms. The war office does not expect any serious defections of the rank and file from the line taken up by Generals Botha and DeWet. Every precaution is being taken at Downing street to prevent premature publication in view of the posibility that a portion of the Vereening delegates might bolt and continue the struggle without their leaders. Privately, however, confidence is expressed in official circles that everything is over but the shouting.

Interesting references to the peace are contained in a letter from Klerksdorp, Southwestern Transvaal, dated April 25. It says:

"Seventy thousand to eighty thousand British troops are here, waiting for General Blelzrey's answer from the peace conference and every hour we are expecting them (the Boers) to march in and surrender. We have actually sent out wagon loads of clothing to enable them to come in tidy; so there is every prospect of peace. Lord Kitchener comes here from Pretoria, every other day, and seems to be in particular good spirits. He actually smiles, and that's a thing he not often does. We attach importance to those smiles in regard to peace."

Cubans Will Never Forget.

Washington, May 23.—The secretary of war received the following mesage from the president of Cuba:

"Havana, May 21, 1902.—Elihu Root, Secretary of War, Washington: I am deeply moved by your heartfelt message of congratulation on the inauguration of the republic of Cuba, to the birth of which the people and the government of the United States have contributed with their blood and treasure. Rest assured that the Cuban people can never forget the debt of gratitude they owe to the great republic, with which we will always cultivate the closest relations of friendship and for the prosperity of which we pray to the Almighty.

CHAPTER I.

In the Street of the Steen.

It all happened in quaint old Antwerp, and Charlie Stuart found reason to believe that seldom in romance or history had a more singular adventure befallen a pilgrim from London than chanced to his lot on this same day.

The morning was half spent and Stuart found himself somewhat at a loss to know what he should turn to next for amusement. He had idled in the markets, discovering new and attractive features constantly; had been through the various museums and picture galleries—in short, exhausted the sights of old Antwerp, and was on the point of considering his exodus, which would occur just as soon as he could make up his mind where his next objective point on the map of Europe or the world would be.

Then it was that Fortune, fickle jade, took the pilgrim from London by the throat as it were, and radically changed the whole course of his existence.

As he stood there idly twisting his blonde mustache, he became aware of the fact that someone was bearing down upon him at a swift pace, some one whose quick, energetic movements reminded him irresistibly of a hawk pouncing upon its prey—someone who held out a hand in eager greeting and seemed bubbling over with animal spirits.

Stuart welcomed him eagerly. His name was Barnaby—Artemus Wycherly Claude Barnaby—and his profession that of an amateur dramatic novelist. It was simply astonishing, the weird fancies generated in that erratic brain of his, each of which exceeded all others in phantasmagorie and, it must be confessed, sometimes ludicrous splendor.

"Just the man of all England I wanted to see. Consider it a lucky omen, by Jove, to run across you in this manner. I'm going to enlist your sympathy and co-operation in a little scheme I have on foot, my boy, and, you can depend upon it, I won't take 'no' for an answer, so consider yourself engaged as the second conspirator."

"Well, I don't know about that; but what wild, hair-brained scheme have you on foot at present?"

"Charlie, I've run across the noblest theme for a startling drama that ever bobbed up in anybody's path. Why, it actually opens an opportunity for fame and fortune to the gifted genius who has boldness enough to grasp the chance."

"You have, of course, visited the Steen, that great castle down the street yonder, once a prison of the Inquisition, now a museum. Did you take a guide with lighted flambeaus and explore the frightful dungeons under the castle, each cell and corridor of which seems to exhale hideous memories of the tortures inflicted upon unfortunate prisoners in the Dark Ages, when Spanish cruelty ruled this country with an iron hand?"

Stuart replied in the negative. His artist soul had feasted on the treasures which lay littered about the courtyard of the onetime palace; but the musty dungeons he had but hastily surveyed, being naturally averse to the contemplation of such horrors.

"Oh, I am glad of that," said Artemus, eagerly, "for you will be better prepared to accompany me to those same dungeons now."

"The deuce!" exclaimed Charlie, taken aback; but, not in the least disconcerted, the other went on:

"Tell me, have you heard the story or rumor that is circulated here and there through certain circles about a modern man in the Iron Mask supposed to be incarcerated in the Steen dungeons?"

"I remember hearing some little talk about such a thing, but really never pursued the subject."

"Briefly, then, it has long been whispered that there was recently, and may still continue to be, a secret prisoner confined in a lonely dungeon under yonder massive pile of masonry—a man whose face is forever hidden behind an iron mask that is secured by a padlock. I have reached the conclusion that this man of mystery might be some troublesome heir to the German throne, or else a son of Louis Napoleon. Think for a minute what wonderful possibilities this vista opens to the dramatist! It is quite enough to inspire the dullest mind! And I am resolved to explore those ancient dungeons personally, as no one has ever done before, with the secretly avowed purpose of learning whether I may found my great drama upon a truth, or the mere fabric of a Dutch legend. And you will accompany me, my boy, out of pure philanthropy, to share in the exhilaration of success"—touching a suspicious bottlelike package he carried under his left arm—"or to support me in case of exasperating failure."

Charlie Stuart could not say him nay; he really had nothing on foot whereby to kill time, and Artemus was such a jolly and original dog that it were worth something to have the pleasure of his society for a space of time.

So, hesitating, he fell.

And, thus sauntering down the street of the Steen, the two friends arrived in the shadow of the great building whose history stretched back centuries into the dim past.

Together they entered, like other pilgrims desirous of gazing upon the art treasures which lay within those ancient walls.

Charlie had seen all these before, and cast but a casual glance around, being more deeply interested in the actions of his confederate.

An old dame with her wide cap started toward them, but one glance from Artemus' eyes seemed to bring about a decided change in her intentions, for she stood still, and then backed away.

It was a signal victory, or, as Artemus expressed it, a "howling success;" nevertheless, his companion was still fain to believe the magic of gold had more to do with the old lady's sudden blindness than the exertion of rare hypnotic powers on the part of the proud wizard.

Content to follow the other's lead, Charlie soon found himself in that apartment where several tall brass candlesticks stood upon an antique table, to be used in exploring the mysteries below.

Artemus motioned that he should straightway possess himself of one, in order that their candles might have a proper receptacle, and Charlie, having enlisted for the war, come weal, come woe, took up the nearest of the lot, which was in itself a treasure of art.

Nervously Artemus tried several keys in rapid succession, muttering to himself the while in a way peculiar to him. At last came a little subdued screech that announced success on the part of the chattering idiot at his side. They were evidently in for it, since the ponderous door opened before them.

Charlie was not the one to hold back, so he stepped beyond the portal and went down.

Immediately the door closed, and the clang of it was unlike any sound he could ever remember hearing. That creaking, rusty key turned in the lock.

"Now," said Artemus, in a shrill voice, pregnant with eager anticipation, "now we are in control, and the devil dungeons of the Steen must yield up their ghastly secrets to a master."

Down the venerable stairs they wended their way. Could those same steps have been gifted with the power of speech, what strange and startling tales they might have given forth, of human misery, of historical personages and deeds that would have made the bravest cheeks pale. But they were mute. The dread secrets of the dim past would ever be safe in their keeping.

"Hark!"

Artemus uttered this word in a shrill whisper, and at the same time clutched his companion's arm. Their surroundings were so eerie that it was not wonderful that his vivid imagination seized upon the slightest pretext to arouse the ghosts that had lain here for long centuries.

"What you hear is only the gurgling of the river Sheldt beneath our feet. At the foot of the worn stone staircase we descended there is a trap in the solid stone, through which opening many a wretched condemned man met his fate. Yes, it was only the fretful flood you heard crying peevishly for more victims."

Charlie's calm manner quite reassured the other.

"Perhaps you are right; but it sounded wonderfully like a human voice calling for help."

Thus in tiers the dungeons lay, each individual one seeming to surpass its predecessors in awful associations.

Long had they been at their task. The regular routine pursued by tourist and guide had been done; but there were other dark passages to explore, gloomy as the river Styx—passages that the ordinary voyager never saw, but which Artemus was bound to investigate; for if perchance ... such an unused qu... Charlie began to feel a bit anxious. He was about ready to confess that for one he had quite enough of it, and only figured on how he might manage to curb this insatiate ambition on the part of his companion.

Artemus was eagerly urging him on to "fresh fields and pastures new," while Charlie held the other in check, fearful lest they fall into some horrible pit, with rusty spikes at the bottom, such as they had discovered in one dungeon, when, suddenly, without warning, there came to their ears a sound so strange in this uncanny region, so utterly out of sympathy with their surroundings, that both men stood still, as though paralyzed—and the sound was as of a woman weeping!

CHAPTER II.

What They Found.

There were those who knew Prince Charlie well who had reason to believe he had passed through some unpleasant experience with lovely woman—been deceived, perhaps jilted.

Although always gallant toward the fair sex, he seemed to be ever on his guard, as though quite determined no mortal who wore petticoats should have a second opportunity to play battledore and shuttlecock with his heart.

But this was something entirely out of the common run; and as he stood there listening, to make sure there could be no mistake, he felt an electric thrill pervade his whole being, such as he never before experienced.

Charlie determined to go forward. He was surprised at himself for the peculiar resolution that urged him on. It seemed as though he were being dragged forward by some inexorable fate, whether he would or not.

And the sound of sobbing still continued, stealing along the gaunt passageways. The darkness beyond was apparently as fearfully dense as that which descended upon poor, plague-stricken Egypt at the time Pharaoh declined to let the children of Israel go.

As Charlie advanced he noted that the sound, which had erstwhile reached their hearing but faintly, grew more distinct. Thus he was presently able to place the sobbing, and, still advancing, he began to discern the dim outlines of a figure upon the ground.

As he drew closer he saw that this was a girl in a long cloak, and that she had hidden her face in her hands, as though to shut out the ghostly figures conjured up by the gloom.

One thing was very sure—when Artemus, in the earlier stages of their exploration, declared he heard a faint shout, it had not been the gurgle of the greedy Sheldt gliding underneath the crypts and corridors, as he (Charlie) had so confidently declared, but in all probability, this lost explorer calling for help.

Well, thank God they had found her, and were in a position to render her the assistance she craved. After all, it had not been such a wild-goose chase as he had believed when yielding to the importunities of his adventurous comrade.

They advanced closer still.

As yet the distressed one was not aware of their presence, or the blessed answer to her prayers.

Her attitude of abandon was most effective, and Charlie could not but think what a charming picture she made there, overwhelmed, not by grief, but the terror of her situation.

It was not intentional on Artemus' part, but some sudden chill draught caused him to give a vociferous sneeze.

This was instantly followed by a little shriek as the girl's hands fell from her face, and she turned a pair of very large and very startled eyes upon the two comrades.

It was, of course, Charlie's bounden duty to immediately speak and reassure the alarmed fraulien that they were flesh and blood like herself, and not spirits of the olden martyrs who had met deaths of torture in these dungeons; but for the life of him, and perhaps for the first time in the course of his whole experience, he could not say a word.

For the soft light of his waxen taper fell full upon the face that had until now been hidden behind the girl's hands—a face that, tear-marked as it was, and more or less begrimed from contact with foul walls during her groping in the dark, electrified him with its peculiar charm of beauty, and started his traitor heart to beating as it had not done these many moons, since he had quitted the presence of another fair woman, with bitterness against the whole sex raging in his bosom.

IRONING A SHIRT WAIST.

Not infrequently a young woman finds it necessary to launder a shirt waist at home for some emergency when the laundryman or home servant cannot do it. Hence these directions for ironing the waist: To iron summer shirt waists so that they will look like new it is needful to have them starched evenly with Defiance starch, then made perfectly smooth and rolled tight in a damp cloth, to be laid away two or three hours. When ironing have a bowl of water and a clean piece of muslin beside the ironing board. Have your iron hot, but not sufficiently so to scorch, and absolutely clean. Begin by ironing the back, then the front, sides and the sleeves, followed by the neckband and the cuffs. When wrinkles appear apply the damp cloth and remove them. Always iron from the top of the waist to the bottom. If there are plaits in the front iron them downward, after first raising each one with a blunt knife, and with the edge of the iron follow every line of stitching to give it distinctness. After the shirt waist is ironed it should be well aired by the fire or in the sun before it is folded and put away, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

It is a great mistake to think that the man who works all the time wins in the race.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

RESULT OF COUNTY PRIMARIES

Asplin Nominated for Auditor, Bush for Clerk, Brown for Recorder and Hammill for County Attorney.

WM. SCHAPER FOR SUPERVISOR

The republican primary election for Hancock County was held last Saturday and excitement ran high. There was a good hard fight on for all the offices except Clerk of Courts, for which office Fred C. Bush had no opposition.

The closest contests were on auditor and county attorney.

We give below each candidate's vote in the county with the exception of Germantown, which we are unable to obtain at this writing. However, Germantown gave a good majority to Asplin, Katter and Hammill.

For Auditor—

| | |
|---|---|
| S. B. Durant | 795 |
| W. T. Searson | 338 |
| George Asplin | 829 |

For Recorder—

| | |
|---|---|
| P. L. Brown | 1065 |

For County Attorney—

| | |
|---|---|
| Jno. A. Senneff | 1015 |
| John Hammill | 1112 |

The above figures are as near correct as we can get them without Germantown and shows conclusively the nominees.

In Ell township Asplin had a plurality of 6 votes, Katter had 68 over Brown, and Hammill 24 over Senneff.

For supervisor from the third district Wm. Schaper has the nomination over J. H. Mulkins by a majority of 41 votes.

The Ell township officers nominated are as follows:

For trustee—J. J. Stork.

For Constables—Oscar Carlson and John Gruetzmacher.

For Justices of the Peace—G. L. Bartholomew and E. P. Dow.

For assessor—Wm. Yohn.

For Clerk—H. Terhufen.

The steel teeth of the drag rolled and bruised her over the entire body, but fortunately no bones were broken.

Died, after a lingering sickness of heart disease and dropsy, Mrs. Wm. Oxley, eight miles northwest of Kanawha, on Sunday morning, at 7 o'clock, May 25, 1902.

Naturally, Charlie Stuart was justified in believing the girl to be the child of some Flemish citizen. True, she was not dressed in the usual Dutch fashion, but her golden tresses and blue eyes, that shone like twin stars, made him take the fact for granted.

He was, therefore, considerably surprised when, springing to her feet, she advanced a step or two toward them, holding out her hands, a look of great joy illuminating her face, and in a voice which the echoes of her recent sobs still haunted, addressed them in purest English:

"Oh, sirs! Heaven has heard my prayer and sent you to my rescue!"

Stuart made up his mind then and there, strange as such a proceeding might be, that there was a deeper mystery about the presence of this young girl in these terrifying surroundings than had at first occurred to him.

Many things united to make him believe this—the fact of her not being missed by her party, her manner in avoiding any reference to the friends who should be so anxious—yes, then and there he became convinced that a story lay back of it as startling as any product of an opium smoker's dream. Charlie knew it would be well for him to divert the girl's mind as much as possible from the horrors she had so recently been forced to face. Thus as they walked along, he even grew somewhat merry, and his object was accomplished, since the girl's temporary trembling fit had passed away and she was now calm enough to ask questions regarding their opportune presence in the dismal place.

Several times Charlie knew she was looking at him intently.

He believed that he could guess the reason—that she had a story to tell, a story far out of the ordinary run, and was studying him when she thought herself unobserved, studying him to determine whether she dared entrust him with its astonishing details.

CHAPTER III.

Charlie Makes an Engagement.

Who was she?

This question came into Chalie's mind many times while they walked through those ghostly passages, seeking the worn stone stairs at the top of which stood the roughly hewn oak door studded with rusty nails.

At the foot of the worn stone steps the girl came to a sudden stop.

"Sir," she said, addressing Charlie as though he were the only party in sight, "unless I am mistaken these steps lead up to the museum of the Steen, and we have reached the exit of this horrible underground tomb."

"We can be in the light as soon as I unlock the door up yonder," he said quietly.

"One moment, before we ascend. I want to catch my breath—to tell you how grateful I am for your timely assistance——"

"Please don't mention it," said Charlie.

"Indeed, it was a great pleasure, fair [illegible]dy," chirruped Artemus, eagerly.

"You overwhelm me with confusion. [illegible]have, as you may well suppose, re[illegible]ved something of a shock, and [illegible]rdly feel equal to the task of ex[illegible]ining to you just now what strange [illegible]rcumstances brought me into the [illegible]esperate predicament from which I have been rescued by your assistance. But I trust I may see you again soon, when the explanation that is due will be gladly given. Forgive me if I say I have been studying you all this time, and something tells me I may surely trust you with my life. God knows I need friends."

Her words thrilled Charlie.

"Pardon me, miss—I should have [illegible] you before—my name is Charlie [illegible]rt. I am at present an exile from [illegible]London, in search of a mission. [illegible]ps I have found one," he said, with an amused smile.

A quick flush chased across her coun[illegible]—am Arline Brand."

[illegible]; allowed fear of [illegible]ence my actions,"

[illegible]e cruel and unscrupulous. You can realize that after seeing to what a dreadful fate they would have condemned me because I refused to carry out their will."

"They are a set of precious scoundrels and cowards!" he declared.

"Ah! but perhaps they are all-powerful at court—men in touch with a dynasty that can shake the earth if aroused, to whom one poor human life is as a fallen leaf," she said, as if testing his loyalty.

"It is the same—I see no reason why I should draw back." Taking out his watch, he continued, in the most deliberate fashion: "It is now almost high noon. At eight, then, this evening, to the minute, I shall do myself the honor of calling upon you at your hotel, and until I am convinced that it is unlawful for me so to do, all the police of Antwerp shall not stop me in my rights of a British citizen traveling under the protection of his flag."

Arline impulsively held out her hand.

"I thank you. God bless you, Mr. Stuart!" she said, in broken tones.

And Charlie, as he felt the little hand quiver and throb in his, found a strong indignation arising within his breast, directed against those unknown parties who had so mercilessly condemned so charming a young woman to a cruel fate.

It was Artemus who unlocked the heavy door and ushered them into the garish light of day, who gravely relieved Charlie of his brass candlestick and placed it, together with the rusty keys, where they belonged.

Charlie saw that his companion glanced hastily to the right and left through her veil. Once he was almost sure she gave a start, but by no word did she signify discovery.

"Could you get a cab for me?" she asked with a perceptible tremor in her voice.

"Easily, no doubt. There are usually vehicles waiting outside the Steen. This way, please."

Before the vehicle started, Arline Brand threw back the veil, and again Charlie was given the privilege of looking into those honest blue orbs, rivaling the heavens in their hue.

"I will release you from your promise if you regret making it, Mr. Stuart," she said, softly.

"Thanks; but I am a singularly obstinate man, I fear. At eight to-night, I said. Besides, I confess to much curiosity to hear what you promised to tell."

Those wondrous eyes beamed upon him; a little hand crept out to allow of a parting pressure; then the vehicle lumbered away, leaving him there in front of the historic Steen, watching its progress down the crooked thoroughfare, and wondering at the change that had broken into his quiet life.

When Charlie Stuart reiterated his rash promise with regard to seeing the owner of those marvelous cerulean orbs that same evening, he had but a faint conception of the magnitude of the task he had taken upon himself.

He was dimly conscious of a figure hanging from the rear window of a second old vehicle—a figure that made all manner of pantomime gestures, and in which he recognized his friend Artemus.

"No harm done, I imagine," he said, aloud. To his surprise some one added:

"That remains to be seen, young sir."

Turning indignantly to see who had dared to thus address him without invitation, Charlie faced a middle-aged gentleman of military aspect, who was regarding him with much urbanity.

"I am quite ready to explain the meaning of those words I uttered, young sir, on condition that you favor me with your name."

Charlie's first hasty inclination was to refuse point-blank, but he had up to this point of his existence never known the time when he found reason to be ashamed of his name. It belonged to one of the best families in Scotland, and his ancestry dated back to the days of Bruce and Wallace.

"That is a condition easily complied with, as I have never yet refused it to any man who felt enough interest in me to ask. It is Charlie Stuart."

The other bowed.

"Good! I see we shall get on together amazingly well. There need be no trouble whatever, since we agree so charmingly," he said.

"Ah! about what, now?" asked Charlie, once more keenly on his guard.

"H'm! Say, the pretty fraulein."

"But perhaps we do not agree on that subject; in fact, our views may be illustrat[illegible] true ok[illegible] Spirit and Okobo," "but I [illegible] you [illegible]. [illegible]ow when you came to Antwerp, and just how you have employed your time since."

"The deuce you do! Then you must have known my name. Why did you ask for it?" with the light of suspicion and unbelief in his eyes.

"To ascertain how far you would have confidence in me. I see you are incredulous; but, young man, it is my especial business to know every stranger who comes to Antwerp, whether he be French, English, Russian, American or Turkish; also to discover as much with relation to his business here as is necessary to understand his status in society. Although you have never met me before, I doubt not you would recognize my name. Permit me."

A card was thrust into Charlie's hand.

Mechanically he glanced at it.

The result was peculiarly unpleasant.

It simply bore a name, but that name was as famous at St. Petersburg and Paris as in Antwerp—Baron Demetrius Peterhoff.

This wonderful man had been at the head of the famous Third Section in Russia; he had been the terror of Nihilists for years; an argus-eyed head of police; until, unfortunately, a cog slipped with fatal result, since the Czar Alexander was murdered through the instrumentality of a bomb, and from that hour Baron Peterhoff's usefulness in Russia was at an end.

"Ah!" Charlie said, very calmly; "I have heard of you very often, baron; but, really, I confess the prospect of meeting so renowned a character never entered my mind. To what am I indebted for the honor?"

Again the distinguished gentleman uttered the word that had startled Charlie before.

"To the pretty fraulein."

Charlie frowned.

"See here, baron—I know this lady as Mlle. Arline Brand. Surely there must be a mistake."

"She has golden hair?"

"Yes."

"And eyes so blue"—holding up his hands in a dramatic manner that would have delighted Artemus—"that they shame the lovely skies of the Riviera."

Charlie gr[illegible]d an assent. A crushing weight seemed to press upon his brain and he felt as though tottering on the verge of a precipice.

"As to the name," continued the baron, coolly, "what does it matter? Mlle. Arline Brand is as good as another—indeed, when you come to examine it, there is something of the adventuress stripe about so delightful a cognomen, don't you think, young sir? To my knowledge that is only one of a score of different names the lady has adopted within the last few years."

"Adventuress!"

How like the shock of a rattlesnake's stroke the mention of that word fell upon Charlie's hearing.

"Since you have been so kind as to give me warning, suppose you tell me who this wonderful lady of many names is?" he asked, coldly.

"You must have heard of the Countess Isolde Brabant."

It was a name he had often seen mentioned in London and continental papers, a name belonging to a beautiful Russian young woman, given over heart and soul to the cause of Nihilism, connected with high families in the Land of the White Czar, banished through royal decree, and now turned adventuress in Vienna, Paris and other capitals of Europe.

"At least I am under favors to you, baron, for your kindness; and if I make a fool of myself it will not be for lack of warning."

"Well, young sir, I owe my life to your father. Before Sebastopol, when a fierce engagement was in progress, I had been cut down and lay there helpless, when a squadron of British dragoons charged. They would have crushed me to atoms, but that a wounded Highlander captain, crawling over, shielded my body with his own, and, raising himself, waved his tartan in the air, at which the dragoons separated, sweeping past to the left and to the right. That brave Highlander was your noble father. For years we corresponded; but in my eventful life the memory of the debt I owed him—[illegible]e shame to me—became obscured by other issues. Young sir, for his sake I have sought to save you from the snare of the fowler. Be warned in time."

Charlie seemed wrestling with the problem, and drawn first this way, then that; but his natural obstinacy finally won out.

"Well," he muttered through his teeth, "I said eight o'clock to-night; and, come weal or come woe, I shall keep the appointment."

CATHEDRAL OF BURGOS

(Special Letter.)

BURGOS, the once gay capital of "Old Castile," forever famous as the "dear home" of the Cid, where even now his bones repose! Where are the dreams of sunshine, laughter and brave deeds of chivalry, that seem linked indissolubly with the name?

Across the old stone bridge that spans the rio Aclanzon—every rivulet is a river in this barren land—rose the queer arch of Santa Maria, built as a sort of humble apology to grim old Charles V. for having dared to differ from him. Poor old Burgos! That happened in 1562, and she has never built anything since. Into this quaint old triumphal arch seems builded some way the very soul of medievalism, standing out in startling contrast against the gayly painted modern buildings that surround it.

Nuno Rasma and Lain Calvo, first magistrates of the old republic of Burgos, 1,200 years ago; Fernan Gonzales and Charles V. himself, al carved in crumbling stone, stare stolidly out, each from his separate niche, while the Cid, with sightless eyes of stone, gazes—at what?

Lucky Cid! Your stone eyes cannot see the shame of those sad later days of your fair Spain. No dazzling procession of bright-armored knights pass a-jou[illegible]r the arch below. The dull-[illegible]y in the barracks yonder p[illegible]knightlier deeds than t[illegible]f some Carlist rabble, [illegible] few starved wretche[illegible]!" with the flat of t[illegible]

"The finest [illegible]of the gothic renaissance in the world!" How often had we heard that; how little realized its meaning! Towering, calm and beautiful, above the dirty squalor of the town as some fair-petalled lily rises from the river slime, its marvelous towers seemed part, not of the earth, but of the sunshine and the blue Castilian sky!

It appeared impossible that their fairy tracery could be composed of grim, unyielding stone. Surely it was the work of some titanic silversmith, fashioning with infinite cunning his fragile jewel. The glory and the triumph of the gothic dream that laughed at difficulties of mere material, weaving cobwebs out of rock!

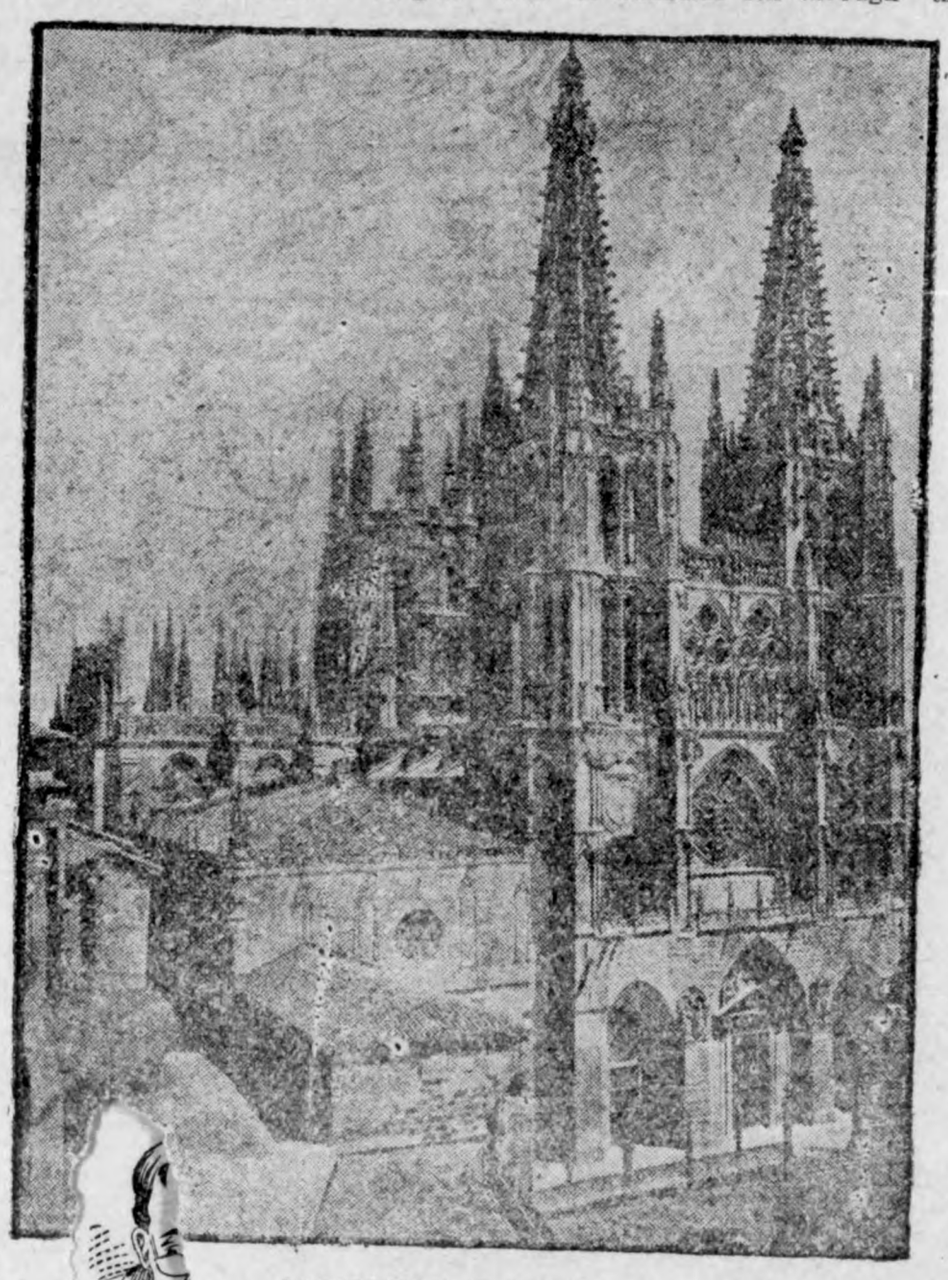
Once inside the ever-open door, what poor grouping of words can describe the solemn grandeur of this majestic mass of stone. It is not a building, but a vast forest of huge stone pillars rising like trees in dense profusion, stretching on and on until lost in the faint blue incensed haze; trees that reach upward until, far overhead they stretch out their huge arms and blossom out in marvelous masses of delicately chiselled flower and leaf, their slender branches interlocking in graceful arches that bear up what was not so much a roof as a cloud of carven foliage, through which, from somewhere far above, the dim light filtered softly down.

The tiny figures of the worshipers were so many ants, crawling over the gigantic roots. All was still, with the stillness of high noon in the depths of the virgin forest.

The faint tinkle of a silver bell from the nigh altar barely set the heavy air atrembling; the deep intoning of the priest droned like the humming of a distant bee. From somewhere, the answering choir of pure, rich voices swelled into majestic volume in response. It was wonderful—all the grim majesty of the old church, the awful Rome whose anger sent emperors on barefoot pilgrimages, fell upon us. Life had swept back a thousand years.

At first nothing may be discerned save a mist of luminous fairy lacework, reaching up, up, 160 feet, to where the roof becomes a great eight-pointed star, across whose center marvelously carven beams are laced and interlaced in bewildering cobweb patterns. Gradually the eye becomes aware of hundreds and hundreds of wonderfully chiseled figures, saints, angels, apostles, demons, monsters without a name.

We looked down long colonnades of pillars so lofty that the wide space between them seemed cramped and narrow. High in the end of the nave sacramenta, to the right, a glorious flood of sunshine fell through the most wonderful rose window, whose glass was set in fretted frames of stone upon the massive figure of St. Christopher bearing the infant Christ.



CATHEDRAL OF BURGOS.

Dark, rugged and bold, the figure of the saint stood elevated over the high iron screen, but on the figure of the Christ child a single ray of sunlight fell, making his form seem to glow with a radiant glory of his own.

Finally our guide proceeded to show us the Christ, famous as the Christ of the Cathedral of Burgos, that is said to bleed on every Friday. Through long, gloomy passageways, we followed to a little chapel, darkened and mysterious, the lights upon the altar casting weird shadows. The flickering light, the damp, the chill, the solemn silence, fill one with vague terror.

A curtain behind the altar slips aside, uncannily, as if drawn by ghostly hands, and there—no trick of carver's art, no chiseled stone nor gilded wood, but of flesh, real, human skin, a horrible triumph of the taxidermist's art, hangs before your shuddering gaze, with face transfixed in awful agony, the terrible Christ of Burgos.

Never seemed blue sky and golden sun so glorious as when we reached the outer air, and gazed upon the tangled garden of the cathedral cloisters.

Many relics of the Cid did we behold in Burgosa. His home, his tomb, nay more, in the town hall, rudely separated, no one knows when nor why, from their quiet resting place, we handled awesomely the veritable bones of the great Cid himself. But, somehow, the glory of his name seemed dwarfed, belittled, by the somber majesty of that most wonderful cathedral, and that vivid vision of "The Burgos Christ."

Mrs. Hannah Barrett has just celebrated her 102d birthday in Boston. Her father served in the revolutionary war and was under Washington in the Valley Forge campaign.

When the British ships under Lord Nelson were bearing down to attack the combined fleet off Trafalgar, the first lieutenant of the Revenge discovered an Irishman, devoutly kneeling at the side of his gun. So very unusual an attitude exciting his surprise and curiosity, he asked the man if he was afraid. "Afraid!" answered the tar, "no, your honor; I was only praying that the enemy's shot may be distributed in the same proportion as the prize money—the greatest part among the officers."

The other day, a thin, nervous looking young man asked to be excused from service on a jury on account of illness. "I'm suffering from something that might prove embarrassing to the other jurors, and is certainly embarrassing to me," he said. "What is the nature of your illness?" asked the judge. "Well," said the young man, hesitatingly, "I'd prefer to tell you in private. I'm somewhat delicate about speaking about it in public." "I cannot hear anything in private," responded the judge, impatiently; "if you want to be excused you must tell me here and now what is the matter with you." "Well, if I must tell it here—I have the itch." "The itch?" echoed the judge, and, turning to the clerk, without marking how apropos his observation was, said, "Mr. Jones, scratch the juror off."

Scabies and Cattle.

Bulletin 140, Department of Agriculture: The mite that causes cattle itch, or mange, is closely related to the mite that causes sheep scab—both belonging to the same genus and species, but are different varieties. The sheep-scab mite will not attack cattle, nor will the cattle mite attack sheep or other animals. The itch mites are found to be very numerous upon affected cattle, and a very small quantity of debris from an actively infested area of the skin will often reveal a surprisingly large number of the parasites. These mites may be removed from an animal and retain their vitality for a long time. The Work of Jonas Webb.

Elihu Burritt, writing of Jonas Webb, says: But what higher honor can attach to human science or industry than that of taking such a visible and effective part in that creation in sending out into the world successive generations of animal life, bearing each, through future ages and distant countries, the shaping impress of human fingers long since gone back to the dust—features, forms, lines, curves, qualities and characteristics which those fingers, working, as it were, on the right wrist of Divine Providence, gave to the sheep and cattle upon a thousand hills in both hemispheres? There are flocks and herds now grazing upon the boundless prairies of America, the vast plains of Australia, the steppes of Russia, as well as on the smaller and greener pastures of England, France and Germany, that bear these finger-marks of Jonas Webb as mindless, but everlasting, memories to his worth. If the owners of these well-created things value the joy and profit which they thus derive from his long and laborious years of devotion to their interests, let them see that these finger-prints of his be not obliterated by their neglect, but be perpetuated forever, both for their good and for an everlasting memorial to his name.

At Calving Time.

Prof. D. H. Otis: If the weather is chilly, put the cow in a box stall well bedded and free from draught. When the calf is born, blanket the cow until she regains her normal condition. If nothing better is available, gunny sacks, sewed together, will answer. Give light, loosening feeds and water from which the chill has been removed. Cold water is likely to cause a contraction of the womb and retention of the afterbirth. If the latter is not discharged in twenty-four to forty-eight hours, it should be removed. If the udder is hot and caked, it is better to milk the cow frequently (at least once in two or three hours), but not dry, as a fresh flow would be stimulated which would increase the inflammation and might lead to milk fever. Steaming the udder with a flannel cloth dipped in as hot water as the hands will bear is very desirable, after which the udder should be rubbed dry and treated with camphorated vaseline. Keep the bowels loose. If any signs of constipation appear, give one and one-half to two pounds of epsom salts, dissolved in warm water. Adhering to these points means much in giving the calf a good, vigorous start.

Partridge Wyandottes.

From Farmers' Reveiw: The Partridge Wyandottes compare very favorably with the rest of the Wyandotte family. They are good layers and make good table fowls, their flesh being very juicy. They are early to mature. They breed very true to color and markings and better than 75 per cent of all birds raised make good breeders. I think that in a very few years the Partridge Wyandottes will be the most popular of the Wyandotte family.—C. F. Avery, Whitley county. Indiana.

MEMORIAL SERVICES AT GARNER

Large Crowd Turns Out to Honor Our Departed Heroes---A Good Program Was Rendered.

Decoration Day was appropriately observed at Garner Friday, and Klemme was nearly deserted as a result, a great number of our people driving up to help our neighbors in the good cause.

In the forenoon at 10 oc'lock the parade formed, headed by the Klemme cornet band, and marched to the cemetery, where the usual services were held and the graves decorated.

At 2 ociock in the afternoon a fine program was rendered in the large pavillion. The first number was music by the baud, followed by invocation by the pastor of the Garner church. The next was by a double quartette "I Carrie Noble gave an oration; of riate recitation in a very commendable manner. The reading of Lincolns Memorial Address at Gettysburg by Miss Hannah Tierney was greatly enjoyed by the large audience.

After another song by the quartette, came the address by Rev. W, F. Barclay, and his speech was indeed given in an able manner and well received by the heares. The pavillion services were then closed by the audience singing America.

The day was well spent, and a very large crowd attended to pay their respects to our noble heroes. Garner did herself proud, and no games or amusements were allowed, to turn the minds of the people from the real purpose of the observance of the day.

A Real Friend.

"I suffered from dyspepsia and indigestion for fifteen years," says W. T. Sturdevant, of Merry Oaks, N. C. "After I had tried many doctors and medicines and to no avail one of my friends persuaded me to try Kodol. It gave immediate relief, I can eat almost anything I want now and my digestion is good. I cheerfully recommend Kodol." Don't try to cure stomach trouble by dieting. That only further weakens the system. You need wholesome, strengthening food. Kodol enables you to assimilate what you eat by digesting it without the stomach's aid. J. L Harr.

Virulent Cancer Cured

Startling proof of a wonderful advance in medicine is given by druggist G. W. Roberts of Elizabeth, W. Va. An old man there had long suffered with what good doctors pronounced incurable cancer. They believed his case hopeless till he used Electric Bitters and applied Bucklen's Arnica Salve, which treatment completely cured him. When Electric Bitters are used to expel billious, kidney and microbe poisons at the same time this salve exerts its matchless healing power, blood diseases, skin eruptions, ulcers and sores vanish. the toward him, and people comparing him with the kaiser regards the prominent public role he seems disposed to play.

During the army maneuvers his majesty, who followed events with the greatest interest and enthusiasm, ordered two privates to be brought before him, and questioned them through the medium of his chief-aide-de-camp. His questions were of the parental kind, such as the following:

How did they get on with the hardships of barracks life? Did they long to go home whenever they thought of their nearest relatives? Did they not think their lot a hard one each time their thoughts wandered back to the ease and joys of their home? Were they not feeling the effects of their daily exertions in the maneuvers? Did not the exactions of the military service some times make them cry in secret?

The young soldiers answered that they were quite happy in the army, and that their only desire was to do their duty toward their beloved sovereign.

PASSING OF SAILING BARKS.

Have Been Driven Off the Seas by Steam Vessels.

Not many years ago the East river water front of New York was a "forest of masts." To-day a dozen smokestacks take their place. Poetry has given place to the dullest and driest of prose. An illustration of the sorrowful pass to which sailing vessels in the merchant marine have come was related last week by the son of a once wealthy shipowner now dead.

"I was present in my youth," said he, according to the New York Times, "at the christening of one of my father's barks, a quarter of a century ago. The vessel cost about $32,000. In her maiden voyage to Australia she cleared a net profit of more than $35,000—more than paid for herself, in fact.

"Not long since, while settling up my father's estate, $50 was offered to me for an eighth interest in another bark which he had owned. It cost him $4,000. I took the offer. It was a question of taking $50, or paying an assessment of $200, and as I was not empowered to spend money of the estate, and saw no probable profit if I did, I took the cash."

Tortures of the Habara.

The married Druse women of Mt. Lebanon, in Asia Minor, labor under a distinct species of torture endured under their peculiar head veil. It is attached to a long horn or tambour, usually made of metal, which is fastened to the head by means of a cushion. These habaras are of an infinite variety of colors, embellished with tassels, bands of embroidery and fringes. Underneath this again is worn a face veil of coarse thick net so heavily embroidered that one can scarcely see or breathe through it. This is fastened close to the face and the habara drawn tightly over it. They are so muffled in the folds of these clumsy stuffs that the stranger has to look twice before he can decide whether they are advancing or retreating, and the poor wretches suffer acutely under the weight of their veils.

Hawaii's Memorial Plans.

Honolulu will have its memorial to McKinley in the form of a park or square, if the sentiment of the people who have been brought into consultation upon the matter weighs with the members of the executive committee, who have the final decision. The memorial feature proper would be in a great arch entrance, which would give the name to the park, and at the same time give enduring form to the monumental feature. The arch could be built of native lava rock, and upon its summit could be placed a bust of McKinley, or a niche could be placed in the face of the keystone which would afford a fitting point for the bust.

HOW MANY—

Men give to the alms seeker without regard to worthiness.

Women have no idea as to how men pass their leisure hours.

Women think it no harm to resort to trickery to appear to advantage.

Dogs Lead the Blind.

A new field of usefulness has been opened for especially intelligent dogs by the keeper of a kennel in England. The animals are trained to lead the blind, and, with this object in view, they are taught to walk in a straight line and at a steady pace. To accomplish this result with a frisky young puppy requires about two months of constant daily practice. The dogs are also taught to avoid carts on the street, and their sense of locality is developed to a high degree. It takes about five months to train the dog in all branches of his work, and when he has thoroughly mastered his profession he is sold for $10 or $15.

Salt Stopped Paris Electric Cars.

One result of the slight fall of snow was that several electric tramways in Paris stopped running. It would appear that snow itself has no hindrance, but that the coarse salt thrown on it to make it melt, in accordance with the instructions of the municipal authorities, acted as an insulating medium on the plots where the trolley system is not in use. The companies in question have asked that salt may no longer be scattered and have offered to clear away the snow themselves.

His neck was broken and the body was badly crushed.

L. M. Garman, the Glenwood grain dealer, who was shot several weeks ago by his son in the back of the head, has had an X-ray examination of the wound. The machine located the bullet up against the bone in the neck just at the base of the brain. Here the bullet is flattened out and is about the size of a silver quarter. Had the bullet gone a trifle to one side or the other it would have penetrated the brain and proven instantly fatal. Mr. Garman is now attending to business.

"Kid" noble, the man convicted of the murder of Thomas Morgan at Muscatine on the night of January 22, 1902, was sentenced to spend the remainder of his natural life behind prison walls. The motion that had been filed by his attorneys for a new trial was overruled. Noble was unmoved, save showing a rather gloomy and disheartened feeling, but seems to have resumed his usual composure and is as cheerful as usual. The case will be appealed to the supreme court.

There was filed trust dated May 1 by the Iowa and St. Louis Railroad company to the Illinois Trust and Savings bank of Chicago, in the sum of $2,000,000. William A. Rule is named as trustee. The deed is a first lien on 100 miles of railroad now building from Centerville, Iowa, to Macon, and the trust company is to advance $20,000 per mile upon each section of five miles or more of road as completed. This assures the building of the road and its probable extension to St. Louis.

The Rocky Mountain limited, east bound train on the Rock Island, was wrecked three miles west of Avoca. The train was late and was running at the rate of seventy miles an hour to make up time. The tender jumped the track and the train proceeded for more than a mile with the tender tearing up the middle of the track. At the end of this distance the gearing broke, causing the back truck of the tender to break and drop back under the composite car. This wrecked the composite car and the entire train was derailed.

Mrs. Herbert Heskett and her infant child were killed in Cedar Falls by an Illinois Central passenger train. Mrs. Heskett was walking on the track on a trestle, wheeling her child in a cab before her. A sharp curve beyond the trestle shut off the view until too late for the engineer to save them. The woman died instantly and the child lingered but a few hours. They were just returning from the funeral of the 2-year-old son of Thomas Philpot, killed but a short distance from the same spot by an Illinois Central freight train on the previous day.

Thirty members of the Iowa Society of the Philippines from all over the state met in Council Bluffs a few days ago to perfect arrangements for holding the third annual encampment of the national society, which will be held on August 13, 14 and 15. A full quota of officers have been elected and are already at work on the arrangements. Secretary Emerson received a letter from President Roosevelt, who states that he will do all in his power to make the meeting a success. It is also expected that a number of the leading generals who took part in the Philippine campaign will also be in attendance.

With Justice Weaver dissenting the supreme court has affirmed the action of the trial court at Sigourney in sending pretty, young Sarah Kuhn to Ft. Madison penitentiary for life for the murder of her husband, who was twice her age, crippled in two legs, one arm and one hand and afflicted with impotency, a defect that had been concealed from her prior to their marriage which occurred four months before he died from the effects of poison in his beer. It was shown on trial that she had clandestinely met Andrew Smith, her former lover, a few days before the murder, that she had upbraided Smith for having married another girl after she married Kuhn and that on the night before the murder she quarreled with her husband. Justice Weaver dissents, however, on the ground that there was manifest prejudice in the neighborhood against Mrs. Kuhn and that it was not shown positively that death was not suicidal. A will was drawn by Kuhn in August, a few weeks before his death, in which he gave all his property to his wife in event of death. This and the intimacy between her and Smith is regarded by Justice Weaver as calculated to work great prejudice against defendant in a country community and it is believed by him prevented the giving of fair consideration to her claim that if poison was in Kuhn's beer, he took his own life, despite his dying declaration in the presence of others that his wife had poisoned him.

One of the most wonderful inventions ever contrived is by a citizen of Indianalo and is the "Success" corn husker, recently invented by A. W. Richards. It is designed to cut the corn stocks near the root, snap the ear from the stock, husk it, and bind the stocks into shocks. The machine is 39 feet long, 19 feet high and weighs 6,500 pounds. The inventor claims that four horses and three boys can operate it.

In the district at Clarinda Judge Thorne passed sentence on Edward Dennis and Wesley Irwin, who were recently convicted of the murder of Oscar K. Miller at Shenandoah last December. Dennis was given eighteen years and Irwin drew twelve years at the penitentiary at Ft. Madison. Dennis is 22 years old and Irwin is 18. When asked what they had to say before sentence should be passed they both stoutly maintained their innocence to the crime.

The big Sioux City plant of the National Starch company is to be kept closed permanently by the big merger known as the Corn Products company. A. B. Beach, manager for the trust in Sioux City, is just back from a Chicago conference with the heads of the various companies, where this decision was reached. Very recently the plant at Sioux City was repaired and overhauled at a heavy expense. It is said to be the intention of the Corn Products company to cease the manufacture of alkali starch and make glucose starch. It is also stated that the trust has in view an increased bond issue. The closing down of the Sioux City plant will probably be followed by the organization of a local independent company and the building of a new factory.

County Attorney Zmunt, for Johnson county, has brought suit in the district court against ex-Treasurer Dennis Maher for the recovery of $1,890.80 and interest at 6 per cent from July 1, 1896, interest amounting to about $700. The suit is brought in compliance with the wishes of the board of supervisors. Mr. Zmunt alleges in his petition that during the years of 1894 and 1895, Mr. Maher converted to his own use moneys belonging to Johnson county and falsely and fraudulently concealed the taking of said moneys, and manipulated the books and records in his possession so that the default was not discovered by the plaintiff until September, 1900. Mr. Maher's bondsmen on his bond of $50,000 are made parties to the suit. Many local attorneys of prominence claim that the statute of limitations is fully effective in this case, and that it would prevent prosecution of even a guilty man, which Mr. Maher's friends positively assert he is not and never was.

P. H. Herrington was arrested at Clarion by Sheriff Duer for the murder of Marshal Smith, at Chelsea, last December. Herrington with two other men, attempted to rob the bank of Chelsea. They were discovered by the town marshal, Smith, who was killed in a running fight with the three men. Sheriff Buchanan of Tama, took the prisoner to Toledo, where Herrington will stand trial. Herrington is alleged to be a member of the Brady gang, which caused the banks of central and northern Iowa so much trouble last fall and winter. George McDonal. Harry Edwards and Sam Page, other members of the alleged gang, were arrested three months ago at Camden Point, Missouri, where they had attempted to rob a bank. They were followed by a posse and captured near the east end of the Fort Leavenworth bridge, and all three men were sentenced to ten years in the Missouri penitentiary for the job. It was known at the time that one of the members of the gang was at large and Pinkerton detectives have been on the lookout for Herrington ever since. He is believed to be the man who fired the shot that killed Marshal Smith.

Mrs. Benjamin Scroggins, a bride of three weeks, and but 19 years of age, is under arrest at Waterloo on the charge of attempting the life of her [illegible]-year-old husband by administering poison to him in his food. It is alleged Scroggins came home to supper at the usual hour and sat down to the customary evening meal. He had eaten but little and had drunk a cup of tea when he was seized with severe pains which were followed by purging and vomiting. A physician was called, who at once pronounced it as a case of poisoning, the symptoms being that of strychnine. The officers were informed of the affair, and upon investigating, they found the house where Mr. and Mrs. Scroggins lived closed up, but they effected a forcible entrance. Whatever traces there may have been of poison in the house is said to have been removed, excepting a piece of carpet on which some of the contents of Scroggins' stomach had been vomited. These have been sent away for chemical analysis and on the chemist's report probably depends the question as to whether the prosecution of the wife for the crime will be pushed. According to the best information obtainable the honeymoon of the couple had been a stormy one and disagreements began after the marriage. The relations were beginning to be unendurable. It is alleged that the wife had made threats against her husband's life, and these will double the evidence brought forward to fix the responsibility for the poisoning upon her.

FIVE RECORDS ARE BROKEN

DRAKE SHOWED UP WELL AT INTERCOLLEGIATE MEET.

Chapman Broke the Pole Vault Record and Pell Took the Hammer Throw.

Chicago, June 2.—Five Western Intercollegiate records were broken and one equalled at the annual meet of the Intercollegiate Conference Athletic Association on Marshall field. Michigan won the meet, having secured 36 points, while Chicago was third with 25 points, and Wisconsin third with a total of 19 points.

The records for the 120-yard hurdle, one and two mile runs, the pole vault and the discus throw were broken, while the record in the 100-yard dash was equalled. F. G. Moloney (Chicago) lowered the 120-yard hurdle record, formerly held by himself, and J. M. Richards (Wisconsin) by two-fifths of a second, the time today being 15 2-5 seconds.

The record for the 100-yard dash was equalled by Hahn (Michigan), who ran the distance in 10 seconds flat. In the one mile run G. R. Keachie (Wisconsin) lowered the former record held by Cragin (Lake Forest) by 1 1-5 seconds, Keachie's time being 4:31-2-5 seconds.

Kellogg, of Michigan broke his former record for the two mile run in the fast time of 10:07. The previous time was 10:09 3-5.

In the pole vault, H. T. Chapman of Drake University, created the sensation of the day by defeating both Devorak, of Michigan, and McGee, of Chicago, who had been picked as sure winners in this event. Chapman cleared the bar at 11 feet 6½ inches, which is half an inch better than the former record held by Dovoray, of Michigan, who secured second place today over McGeen. Charles H. Swift, of Iowa, broke the record for the discus throw, formerly held by Stangle, of Wisconsin, by one foot and five inches, his record being 118 feet and 9 inches.

In the one mile relay race, which was participated in by Minnesota, Illinois and Northwestern, the former college won by a good margin. The result of the race did not figure in the general resuults.

The score of the various colleges was as follows:

Michigan 36, Chicago 25, Wisconsin 19, Drake University 10, Minnesota 9, Beloit 8, Illinois 6, Nortre Dame 5, Iowa 5, Northwestern 3.

JUDGE WEAVER ALONE DISSENTS

Prejudice and Circumstances Were Against Sarah Kuhn.

Des Moines, May 29.—With Justice Weaver dissenting the supreme court affirmed the action of the trial court at Sigourney in sending pretty, young Sarah Kuhn to Ft. Madison penitentiary for life for the murder of her husband, who was twice her age, crippled in two legs, one arm and one hand and afflicted with impotency, a defect that had been concealed from her prior to her marriage which occurred four months before he died from the effects of poison in his beer.

It was shown on trial that she had clandestinely met Andrew Smith, her former lover, a few days before the murder, that she had upbraided Smith for marrying another girl after she married Kuhn and that on the night before the murder she quarreled with her husband. Justice Weaver dissents, however, on the ground that there was manifest prejudice in the neighborhood shown against Mrs. Kuhn and that is was not shown positively that death was not suicidal.

A will was drawn by Kuhn in August a few weeks before his death, in which he gave all his property to his wife in event of death. This and the intimacy between her and Smith is regarded as calculated by Justice Weaver to work great prejudice against the defendant in the community and it is believed by him prevented the giving of fair consideration of her claim that if poison was in Kuhn's beer, he took his own life, despite his dying declaration in the presence of others that his wife had poisoned him.

J. E. BLYTHE HAS WITHDRAWN.

Announces He Is Convinced He Cannot Carry Cerro Gordo County.

Mason City, May 29.—James E. Blythe last evening withdrew as a candidate for congress in the Fourth district in the following public announcement:

In view of the adverse result of the caucus, held on Monday last, I am convinced that I cannot carry the county and have decided not to contest the remaining precincts, hence admit my duty to make this public statement in order to avert continued controversy. In releasing my supporters from further adherence, I wish to thank the republican press of the county for their loyalty to my cause and to assure all friends that my gratitude for efforts in my behalf is just as cordial as though my candidacy had been finally crowned with success. A life time of party fealty renders almost superfluous the statement that I cheerfully acquiesce in the evident choice of the county. Very respectfully,

James E. Blythe.

This gives to Duncan Rule the united and enthusiastic support of Cerro Gordo county and greatly increases his prospect of carrying the district.

In a family fracas at Vinton Henry J. Brown, an old soldier, fired a shotgun at Lew Tiffany, in which six shot took lodgment in Tiffany's right leg. The shooting occurred in the rear of their homes, which are situated on adjoining lots, and within a few feet of each other. Tiffany is in the employ of Moore & Van Skike, liverymen, and is married to a niece of Brown.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, June 2, 1902.

Governor Cummins has settled the controversy between Detective Eli Hardin and J. S. Connolly of this city, over the $300 reward offered by the state for the apprehension and conviction of the murderer of Dr. B. M. Failor of Newton, in favor of Detective Hardin. Detective Hardin was paid the $200 offered by the town of Newton in the same case, and Governor Cummins holds that without doubt he is entitled to the $300 offered by the state. About ten days ago the case was heard by the governor and taken under advisement. The reward was offered under Governor Shaw's last administration.

A Franklin county criminal case decided by the supreme court reversed Judge Weaver on a point of law. G. C. Jamison of the Farmers' State bank of Dows, who conducted a stock buying business for several years, was indicted with W. C. Crone, and employe, for using false weights to defraud customers. They were convicted and appealed and the indictment was found faulty. Another indictment was found and again conviction followed, the evidence being that they had a small weight which they used to make the weight of animals bought appear less than they were. They talked too much and the scheme became known. The supreme court has again found the indictment to be faulty in that it failed to be specific in accusing them of any actual fraud but rather of an intent to commit fraud, and also because it charged a continuing crime. The case has been long fought and attracted a great deal of attention at Dows where the defendants lived and were prominent in business.

The supreme court has just taken the rare course of reversing a case because of misconduct of counsel. The case was that of Vernon Walch, appellee, vs. The Union Central Life Insurance company, appellant. The appeal is from the Cedar Rapids superior court, T. M. Giberson, judge. Maxwell & Ramsey and Smith & Smith were attorneys for appellant, and J. W. Jamison and Will Smyth were attorneys for the appellee, who was the plaintiff in the trial court. It is the plaintiff's counsel that the supreme court in this instance rebukes. The action was one at law on a policy of insurance issued by the defendant company upon the life of one Otis S. Hogg. There was a trial by a jury and verdict and judgment for plaintiff. This is the second time the case has been before the supreme court. In the course of the trial below the plaintiff's counsel, Mr. Jamison, made a number of remarks of a heated and indignant nature, to which the defendant's counsel objected as misconduct and asked that it be made a part of the record. It was made a part of the record and much of the record is quoted in the supreme court's opinion.

The supreme court has closed up another chapter in the long-standing Wallace-Pierce controversy. It rendered a decision in the action for libel in the case entitled Henry Wallace, appellee, vs. the Homestead and Jas. M. Pierce, appellant. The appeal was from a decision of Judge S. F. Prouty in favor of Wallace. The supreme court upholds the district court's decision, which gave Wallace damages to the amount of $1,500. The Homestead published several charges against Wallace at the time the latter was appointed as one of a committee of three to supervise an investigation as to the efficacy of certain alleged cures for hog cholera. October 8th, 1897, and February 18th, 1898, there were articles published to which Wallace took exceptions. Wallace was referred to as a bribe taker in the course of the attacks made upon him.

The dates for the encampment of the different regiments of the Iowa National Guard have been fixed by Adjutant General Byers. The places for the camps have not yet been settled upon. The first regiment to go into camp will be the Forty-ninth, from July 8 to 14, inclusive. The Fifty-first and Fifty-second will be in camp the same week, July 17 to 23, inclusive. The Fiftieth will be the last in camp, from August 5 to 11, inclusive. The place and date for the encampment of the First Signal company, Captain C. T. Prime commanding, will be announced in subsequent orders.

Auditor of State Merriam has issued his report covering the fire insurance business done in Iowa during the past year. The joint stock and mutual fire insurance companies wrote $311,695,076 in risks and paid $2,652,707 in losses. The state and county mutual insurance assessment associations wrote $91,253,782 in risks and paid $458,362 in losses. All kinds of companies paid $4,111,069 in losses. The insurance company fees paid during the year amounted to $48,207 and the taxes to $194,074. Since and including 1892 the insurance companies have paid the state $377,404 in fees and $1,398,627 in taxes. The sum of $2,161,614 was received by Iowa fire companies in premiums; by all other companies, $2,707,046; by other than fire, $279,584; grand total $5,148,246. There were 112 fire insurance, ten fidelity, seven employers' liability, four plate glass, six hail, one steam boiler, nine accident and two burglar insurance companies doing business in the state. Of the fire companies there are eleven Iowa joint stock, seven Iowa mutual, sixty-eight non-Iowa joint stock, one non-Iowa mutual, and twenty-five United States branches of foreign companies. There are 154 county mutuals, thirteen state mutuals, three tornado and ten exclusively hail concerns.

SPOONER CLOSES THE DEABTE

On the Philippine Bill for the Republican Side—Immigration Bill Passes With an Amendment Forbidding Sale of Intoxicating Liquors in Capitol.

Washington, May 27.—Senate.—A fruitless effort was made just before adjournment of the senate today to secure an agreement on a time for a vote on the Philippine bill. For several hours today Patterson, of Colorado, discussed the Philippine question concluding the speech which he began yesterday. After review and commenting on the general Philippine question, he attacked the pending bill, particularly its provisions regarding the holding of lands. He declared that it was monstrous and never should be enacted into law. He urged that the Filipinos be granted their independence, and drew an eloquent word picture of the turning over to the Filipinos by the United States of the islands when they had established a government. Burrows, chairman of the committee on privileges and elections, reported that the majority of the committee was opposed to the house resolution providing for the election of senators by the people. Wellington, of Maryland, moved to discharge the committee from further consideration of the resolution. This motion went over at the suggestion of Hoar. A resolution offered by Hoar requesting the president to inform the senate whether there be any law which would prevent any Filipino not under arrest from coming to the United States and stating his views or desires as to his country to the president or to either branch of congress, was adopted.

House.—The house today passed the Shattuc immigration bill. The feature of the day was a lively debate on the question of prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors at immigrant stations. It was precipitated by an amendment offered by Mr. Bowersock, of Kansas, to prohibit such sale, which was carried, 83 to 18. Mr. Landis, of Indiana, followed this victory with an amendment to prohibit the sale of intoxicants in the capitol, and it prevailed by a still larger majority, 108 to 19. The bill brings together into one act all the scattered legislation heretofore enacted in regard to the immigration of aliens into the United States, arranges it in sequence, etc., eliminates what has become obsolete by reason of subsequent legislation, amends some of the administrative features, and also adds some provisions to the general laws and others made necessary by the extension of the territorial limits of the United States.

Washington, May 28.—Senate.—An agreement was reached in the senate today by which a final vote on the pending Philippine government bill and all amendments will be taken next Tuesday at 4 p. m. Burrows, of Michigan, explained the bill at length and urged its enactment, maintaining that it would advance the interests and promote the prosperity of the islands. In his judgment it would be a mistake to accord to the Filipinos self government and independence now. Such a proceeding could result, he said, only in disaster to the inhabitants and possibly anarchy in the islands. Hoar presented a letter from General M. P. Miller, U. S. A., correcting what he said was an error in a recent speech of Hoar, who had said that General Miller "notoriously did want an attack and Aguinaldo met it with speedy defiance," the reference being to the issuance by General Miller of President McKinley's proclamation, a part of which was suppressed by General Otis. In his letter General Miller said Hoar was in error. He said General Otis had not informed him that the president's proclamation was not to be issued in full. He was not anxious for a fight and always had advised the Filipinos to accept the sovereignty of the United States, as he believed the United States would grant them their reasonable desires. Hoar said the letter evidently was that of a sincere and honest gentleman. He absolutely acquitted General Miller of publishing the proclamation in order to bring on hostilities.

House.—The house spent the day debating the bill to increase the subsidiary coinage by coining the silver bullion in the treasury and to recoin standard silver dollars as the public necessities may require. The limit of subsidiary coinage is now $100,000,000. The bill increases this to an indefinite amount, in the discretion of the secretary of the treasury. The bill aroused the opposition of the democrats, who claimed it was only a step in the direction of the complete striking down of the silver dollar. The debate drifted into a general discussion of the silver question. Very little interest was shown, and Cochrane twice made the point that no quorum was present. Newlands, of Nevada, finally offered an amendment to make subsidiary silver a legal tender, and this amendment was pending when the house adjourned.

Washington, May 29.—Interest in the Philippine debate is increasing as the discussion draws to a close. Today the senate galleries were thronged with auditors and the attendance on the floor was larger that it has been for some time, including many members of the house of representatives. Lodge, of Massachusetts, in charge of the bill, offered, on behalf of the committee, several amendemnts to the measure, the most important being the one extending to the Philippines the provision of the bill of rights of the constitution of the United States, excepting only the right to a trial by jury. All of the amendments were agreed to. Morgan, of Alabama, delivered an extended speech, in which he supported in the main the bill as presented by the committee. He said it looked toward peace and toward a just and peaceful government in the islands. Some changes were necessary, in his opinion, but these he thought would be made. Clay, of Georgia, opposed the pending measure in a carefully prepared speech. Late in the afternoon, Spooner, of Wisconsin, began a speech in support of the bill and the administration's policy in the Philippines, which is to conclude the general debate on the measure by the republican side.

House.—The house today passed the bill to increase tne subsidiary silver coinage. The democrats directed their fight chiefly against the provision to recoin the standard silver dollars into subsidiary coin as public necessities might require. A half dozen roll calls were forced. Some of the New York democrats voted for the previous question, but voted with their colleagues on a motion to recommit with instructions to strike out the provision relative to the coinage of silver dollars. The conference reports on the omnibus public buildings and fortifications appropriation bills were adopted and the house adjourned until Monday.

Washington, May 31.—Senate—Hissing in the senate is no unusual that when it occured in the course of the Philippine debate today it created a sensation. Spooner, of Wisconsin, was speaking, and referred incidentally to the story that a thousand Filipinos had been put to death by American troops in trenches which they were compelled to dig. Lodge, of Massachusetts, said that the story had been denied by the father of the soldier who started it, and that the war department has cabled to General Chaffee to ascertain the facts. Carmack, of Tennessee, interrupted to say that no doubt the soldiers would deny the story, as all the soldiers in the Philippinos had been required to do. His remarks were greeted with hisses from the galleries, and demonstrations of disapproval calling out a sharp rapping of the gavel from the chair. Spooner occupied nearly five hours of today's session in concluding his speech begun on Thursday. His earnestness and eloquence attracted the attention of all senators and hundreds of occupants of the crowded galleries. He maintained that the United States could not leave the Philippines "like a coward" and abandon a people who had come under our protection, thus surrendering them to "tyranny and chaos." He did not believe in the admission of the Philippines to the Union as states, but in the conduct of the islands nothing savoring of imperialism had been suggested except for party purposes. He charged that an incessant effort had been made by the minority to put this country in the wrong and to stain the country with dishonor. In the course of his speech, Spooner became involved in a spirited colloquy with Hoar, of Massachusetts, during which Spooner read a statute of the state of Massachusetts, which offered a reward of $100 for the scalps of male Indians over the age of twelve years. Hoar declared that it was a cruel and barbarous law, and Spooner himself did not attempt to justify it, simply citing it as an instance of cruelty in the fighting of savage natives. Pettus, of Alabama, discussed some of the legal phases of the Philippine question, and McLaurin, of Mississippi, insisted that the democrats in the senate had not slandered the army, as had been charged. Carmack, of Tennessee, occupied the floor at the night session. In the course of his remarks he declared that it was evident from the tone of President Roosevelt's Memorial Day address that the cry of lynchings in the south was to be the administration's defense of the outrages in the Philippines.

MUST GO WITHOUT MEAT.

Strike of Chicago Teamsters Causes a Famine.

Chicago, June 1.—At midnight the situation throughout the city was estimated to be as follows:

Proprietors of 40 per cent of 1,000 meat markets in the city have entirely exhausted their supplies. Of the 955 restaurants in the city it is said that 70 per cent of them will be without meat for their customers by Sunday night. All the meat markets conducted by Jews, where kosher is sold, closed down tonight and no attempt will be made to open them while the strike shall last. This leaves 85,000 Jews in Chicago without their regular meat supply.

The large hotels are supplied for a few days, but some of them will be in trouble by Tuesday night if there is no change in the present conditions.

Business Agent George F. Gelder of the teamsters union announced he would notify the drivers of all factories supplying the packers with boxes that they were not to handle the products of the factories if the strike continued. President James H. Payne of the United Order of Box Makers promised if this was done he would call out the 500 union box makers if any attempt were made to supply the trade with boxes through the non-union drivers.

THE PRES... AT ARLINGTON

Thousands of Veterans in Attendance to Hear His Address.

TALKS OF THE PHILIPPINES

Their Future Can Be Determined Upon Only After They Have Shown Their Capacity and Power for Self Government—Knows Not When That Day Will Come.

Washington, May 31.—Decoration Day was observed here yesterday perhaps more generally than ever before. The announcement that President Roosevelt would deliver the oration at Arlington brought to that historic city of the dead a vast concourse of people, among whom were numbered thousands of veterans who journeyed into the cemetery to honor the memory of their comrades who had died in their country's cause. or who, having survived the struggle of 1861 and 1898, had passed since into the great beyond. The local arrangements were in charge of the department of the Potomac, and included a parade of all the G. A. R., and other patriotic organizations, the decoration of monuments and graves and addresses by men prominent in the affairs of the government.

Following are extracts from the address delivered by the president:

Must Care for the West.

"While fully acknowledging our duties to others, need we forget our duty to our own country?

"The Pacific seaboard is as much to us as the Atlantic; as we grow in power and prosperity so our interests will grow in that farthest west which is the immemorial east.

"This should no more be a party question than the war for the Union should have been a party question."

Cruelty Was The Cause.

"These younger comrades of yours have fought under terrible provocation from a very cruel and treacherous enemy. Under the strain of these provocations I deeply deplore to say that some among them have so far forgotten themselves as to counsel and commit, in retaliation, acts of cruelty. The fact that for every guilty act committed by one of our troops, a hundred acts of far greater atrocity have been committed by the hostile natives upon our troops, or upon the peaceable and law abiding natives who are friendly to us, can not be held to excuse any wrongdoer on our side. Determined and unswerving effort must be made, and is being made, to find out every instance of barbarity on the part of our troops, to punish those guilty of it, and to take, if possible, even stronger measures than have already been taken to minimize or prevent the occurence of all such instances in the future."

Lynchings Not Noticed.

"From time to time there occur in our country to the deep and lasting shame of our people, lynchings carried on under circumstances of inhuman cruelty and barbarity—a cruelty infinitely worse than any that has been committed by our troops in the Philippines; worse to the victims, and far more brutalizing to those guilty of it. The men who fail to condemn these lynchings, and yet clamor about what has been done in the Philippines, are indeed guilty of neglecting the beam in their own eye while taunting the brother about the mote in his.

"Understand me. These lynchings afford us no excuse for failure to stop cruelty in the Philippines. Every effort is being made, and will be made, to minimize the chances of cruelty occurring.

"Keep in mind, cruelties in the Philippines have been wholly exceptional, and have been shamelessly exaggerated."

Under That Same Order.

"The rules of warfare which have been promulgated by the war department and accepted as the basis of conduct by our troops in the field, are the rules laid down by Abraham Lincoln when you, my hearers, were fighting for the Union. These rules provide, of course, for the just severity necessary in war. The most destructive of all forms of cruelty would be to show weakness where sternness is demanded by iron need. But all cruelty is forbidden, and all harshness beyond what is called for by need. Our enemies in the Philippines have not merely violated every rule of war, but have made of these violations their own method of carrying on the war. We would have been justified by Abraham Lincoln's rules of war in infinitely greater severity than has been shown. The fact really is that our warfare in the Philippines has been carried on with singular humanity. For every act of cruelty by our men there have been innumerable acts of forbearance."

Future of Philippines.

"We believe that we can rapidly teach the people of the Philippine islands not only how to enjoy but how to make good use of their freedom; and with their growing knowledge their growth in self-government shall keep steady pace. When they have thus shown their capacity for real freedom, then, and not until then, will it be possible to decide whether they are to exist independently of us or be knit to us by ties of common friendship and interest. When that day will come it is not in human wisdom now to foretell."

...mings, at the ti... President Ha... occupied the white house, went there one morning to see him. Major Halford, after the New York member had been waiting an hour, went over to him and said: "I am awful sorry, but you can't see the president." By this time Mr. Cummings was at a white heat for having been kept waiting so long, and when Major Halford had concluded, he dramatically exclaimed: "Great God! Is he as small as all that?"

In August of 1899, when colonel of the gallant Seventeenth, General J. H. Smith occupied and held the town of Angeles against a superior force, General Otis became nervous and telegraphed General MacArthur several times for Smith's opinion as to whether or not he could hold Angeles. To the first dispatch Smith is said to have replied that he thought he could; to the second, he was sure he could; to the third: "I am prepared to hold the town till hell freezes over, and then I'll stay on the ice!"

We find the following anecdote in a Naples paper: "At the postoffice yesterday, amid the large crowd gathered around the window, was a young English lady, handsome, well dressed, and accompanied by her maid. The young lady had just purchased some stamps, and was about to affix them to a number of letters, which she held in her hand. Delicately tearing off a stamp, she said to her maid: 'Pull (sic) out your tongue.' And the maid, with English impassivity, thrust forth her tongue, while the mistress passed over it a postage stamp, which she subsequently stuck on a letter. She went through the entire package of letters, and for each one the obedient waiting maid thrust out her tongue for the mistress to moisten the stamp. Curious manners these English people have."

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

KLEMME WINS IN A GOOD GAME

The Meservey Sluggers Came Loaded, But Were Defeated, score 6 to 4.

Tuesday afternoon on the home diamond, the Klemme Midgets defeated the Meservey Sluggers by a score of 6 to 4. It was a close and exciting game throughout, notwithstanding the fact that the ground was muddy and rain fell during the last inning. The Klemme team was weakened by the absence of three of their regular players, but the substitutes did good work.

Meservey led out strong getting one score in each of the first two innings, and shutting out the Midgets. In the sixth, however, our boys showed their colors and got in some good work with the potato masher, batting out 4 runs, which proved to be a great plenty. There was the usual kicking on the umpire, but that is to be expected.

Flint, Kluckhohn and Schoper officiated as battery for Klemme and Russell, Brower and Ell for Meservey. The rooters were out in full force and Meservey was well represented. Chris Lau was the umpire.

Score by innings:

| | | | | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Klemme | 0 | 0 | 1 | 1 | 0 | 4 | 0 | 0 | *—6 |

NOTES OF THE GAME

Fourteen Meserveyites fanned the damp atmosphere.

Geo. Schoper played his first game behind the bat this season and he played in good form.

John Braund moved in from center field to second base, and put up his usual good game. He batted like a house afire.

The Meservey boys put up a good artical of ball.

The ninth inning was played in a beautiful downfall of rain-water, but our boys wanted to give the visitors all that was coming to them.

Ready to Yield.

THE KIDS PLAY BALL.

Monday afternoon at Klemme the Goodell and Klemme kid ball teams crossed bats, our home boys winning by a score of 45 to 15, which was surely a record breaker as far as scores were concerned. Our boys say they would have made more had they not got out of wind running bases. Both teams had the rooters out in full force. Following is the score by innings:

| | | | | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Klemme | 2 | 6 | 10 | 8 | 6 | 5 | 1 | 4 | 3—45 |
| Goodell | 2 | 4 | 1 | 1 | 0 | 4 | 0 | 1 | 2—15 |

Spring Fever.

Spring fever is another name for billiousness. It is more serious than most people think. A torpid liver and inactive bowels mean a poisoned system. If neglected, serious illness may follow such symptoms. DeWitt's Little Early Risers remove all danger by stimulating the liver, opening the bowels and cleansing the system of impurities. Safe pills. Never gripe. "I have taken DeWitt's Little Early Risers for torpid liver every spring for years," writes R. M. Everly, Moundsville, W. Va. "They do me more good than anything I have ever tried." J. L. Harr.

THE NEWS IN IOWA.

The body of Frank Robinson, of Nevada, who shot his sweetheart and his accepted rival at Kansas City a few days ago, is disowned by his father and will be buried in the potter's field.

A case that will go on record of death from an operation for appendicitis owing to extreme youth, is that of John Schaarts, who died at Dubuque a few days ago. The patient was only 13 years old.

Over half of the 100 employes of the button factory at Dubuque struck a few days ago because the manager refused to recognize a union organized several days ago. Unions exist, they say, in Davenport and Muscatine. The clam shell button factory was established only a few months ago.

As a result of a fire which started in Baum's drug store at Center Junction a half dozen buildings in the business section of that town were destroyed by fire and property to the extent of several thousand dollars was destroyed. The following stores were destroyed: Baum's drug store, James C. Smith's grocery, O. Watson's barber shop and confectionery, a meat market and a vacant store building.

Farnhamville was swept by a disastrous fire a few nights ago. The total loss exceeds $20,000, partly covered by insurance. The postoffice, general stores of C. B. Rhinehart and H. J. Cook, and the harness shop of L. Luthlan, were destroyed, and the restaurant of M. L. Picht and the barber shop of C. L. Clearwater were badly damaged before the flames were extinguished through the efforts of the volunteer bucket brigade. The fire originated in the real estate office over Rhinehart's general store, from an unknown cause. Several Farnhamville citizens were badly burned while fighting the fire.

T. J. Gannon, ticket agent for the Rock Island at the depot at Council Bluffs since March 1, has been absent from his home and the city since the 2d, and since his departure it has been discovered that he is short approximately $1,000, though it is impossible to tell the exact amount at present. He is a young man about 28 years old and had a good record with the company before going to Council Bluffs. He was formerly located at Guthrie Center and his parents live near Marshalltown. He served during the Philippine war in the signal service and has an honorable discharge. He was married April 23 and left his wife in Council Bluffs. His downfall is charged to gambling.

Herbert Warren, the 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Warren of Murray, is suffering with a very painful flesh wound in the leg, the result of the action of an enraged carpenter who was working for his parents. According to the story of the mother of the boy, F. L. Andrews, a carpenter who was working for them, apparently became enraged at the actions of the boy, who was playing around where he was working, and threw a lathing hatchet at the little fellow, which struck him in the leg and knocked him down. It is further alleged that he went to the boy and kicked him after he had fallen, which badly bruised him besides the wound in the leg where the hatchet struck. There has been no legal action taken in the matter as yet, and it will be looked into to ascertain if the facts as alleged are correct.

Cal. C. Beird, on trial at Keokuk for the murder of Capt. Dundley of Navoo, Ill., was found guilty of manslaughter, after the jury had been out eight hours. This was his second trial, the jury having disagreed in the first trial. Beird was accused of the murder of Capt. Dundley, captain of the ferry boat plying the Mississippi river between Navoo, Ill., and Keokuk, Iowa. Dundley was in Keokuk one night last fall and was drinking with Beird. Both men had drunk more than was good for them and becoming quarrelsome, they engaged in a fight at the corner of Ninth and Main streets and in the fracas Dundey was shot, it is claimed, by the revolver which Beird had been in the habit of carrying with him for several years. Beird was arrested, indicted and tried twice, with the result that he was convicted of manslaughter. Beird is a printer.

A serious dispute has arisen between the construction gangs of the Iowa Central and the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy roads regarding a new crossing over the Central's tracks in the south part of the Iowa Central yards at Oskaloosa by the Burlington and Western, which is operated by the "Q" system. The Burlington stole a march on the Rock Island right of way with a large construction gang and laid a track to the Iowa Central. Roadmaster Terry of the latter road sought to prevent the opposition gang from going across the Central tracks by building a spur across the proposed route and dumping cars from the end. The Central desires that the "Q" road shall sign a crossing agreement or else go beneath the Central tracks. At last accounts the crossing was guarded by a large force of Iowa Central men. The dispute is likely to be carried into the courts in the form of an application for an injunction. The "Q" road desires to reach the coal mines southwest of Oskaloosa and to build an extension to Tracey for its new Des Moines-Burlington connection.

Earl Garman, who on April 13 attempted to kill his father, L. M. Garman, a grain dealer of Glenwood, pleaded guilty to the charge of attempted murder and was sentenced by Judge Thornell to serve five years in the penitentiary at Fort Madison. The shooting was a result of a quarrel between the father and son over some property.

The store of Allen Grossman, the furrier of Clinton, was the scene of a wholesale robbery. Thieves entered the building, gaining an entrance through the front door by means of a skeleton key, and carried away goods which in the aggregate will reach the value of $8,000. The robbery was one of the boldest that has ever been carried out in Clinton.

Judge Shiras of the federal court at Dubuque handed down an opinion in a bankruptcy case that establishes a precedent. The case is that of Wm. C. Green, bankrupt. The court holds that the individual creditors and creditors of the firm to which he belonged have equal rights to the assets. This is a new ruling, and it will attract wide attention.

Mrs. Hossack, who was brought back to Indianola a few weeks ago from Anamosa by getting a reversal in the supreme court, was taken quite sick and at the present time is no better. Dr. DaShield, the county physician, and Dr. Surber are the attending physicians. While not in any immediate danger she is quite sick. The sickness coming when it does will in all probability not have any immediate effect upon her trial unless she should take a sudden change for the worse or fail to recover as rapidly as she should.

A fatal shooting affray took place in a drug store at Garden Grove. The victim, whose name is Duff, is a prominent business man of that city. His slayer is a well known young farmer named Clark. Clark, who is under arrest, claims Duff had alienated the affections of his wife. Mr. and Mrs. Clark came to town early on the afternoon of the tragedy. Clark left Mrs. Clark in the drug store. Duff was also there. Clark then went to a hardware store and borrowed a double-barreled shotgun. Returning to the drug store with the loaded gun he fired both loads at Duff. The shots took effect in the left side, part of them entering the heart. Duff died almost instantly. Clark was arrested. He claims he did the shooting to defend the sanctity of his home. Excitement over the tragedy is intense. Public opinion is divided. There is no talk of violence.

The people of the village of Ellsworth, eighteen miles east of Fort Dodge, are panic stricken with fear of a hydrophobia epidemic. One man is dead and eight others are receiving treatment in the Pasteur hospital in Chicago as the result of bites received from one small pet canine. The dog that caused the widespread trouble was a village pet. About two weeks ago it was bitten by a hound that later developed unmistakable symptoms of hydrophobia. The hound and dog were killed, but not until the dog had bitten twelve or fourteen persons and several other canines. Recently John Olsen, one of the first victims, developed symptoms of rabies. He was taken to the Pasteur institute in Chicago, where he died in great agony. When the news of his death reached Ellsworth it created consternation and the next train to Chicago carried eight people who were bitten, among them Mrs. George Pearson and daughter, H. Severson and Andrew Igon. Every dog in Ellsworth has been killed by special order of the city council.

The city of Des Moines is not liable for actions of members of its police force, according to the opinion of City Solicitor William H. Bremner, which decision he backs up by supreme court decisions in Iowa and other states. The particular decision upon which the decision is based (and Mr. Bremner states that the decision is but one of a line of similar findings by the court of highest resort in the state), is that rendered by the supreme court of Iowa in the case of Caldwell vs. the city of Boone. The opinion is rendered by Justice J. Adams. It supports the contention of the solicitor that Mayor James M. Brenton, Chief of Police Fred A. Brackett and Chief of Detectives W. T. Maitland did not cause the city to be liable for $20,000 damages to McClurg of Valley Junction when they, in their official capacity, chased bloodhounds over the trail of alleged chicken thieves from the farm of Charles Davis, near Valley Junction, and that the city of Des Moines is not liable to Mr. Porter, of Seventeenth and Crocker streets, because of the action of Officer August Becker in shooting a stallion belonging to aforesaid Porter.

[illegible] commissions announced

Des Moines June, 9.—Two [illegible]nt commissions were announced [illegible]overnor Cummins Saturday. One is the capitol improvement commission of three members and the other the Lookout Mountain monument commission.

The capitol improvement commission consists of Abraham B. Funk of Spirit Lake, Prof. Charles A Cumming of Des Moines and Edward P. Schoentgen of Council Bluffs. It will have full superintendence of the completion of the capitol and the repairs to the building as provided for in the act of the last general assembly appropriating a quarter of a million for that purpose. The members of the new commission, with the exception of Mr. Schoentgen, are well known. Ex-Senator Funk is one of the leading politicians of the state, is prominently mentioned for the governorship to succeed Governor Cummins and is also one of the leading newspaper men of Iowa and a business man of ability. Professor Cumming is at the head of the Cumming art school in this city. He was a member of the commission appointed by Governor Shaw. That commission, aside from Mr. Cumming, consisted of Peter A. Dey of Iowa City and H. S. Josselyn of Cedar Rapids. Edward P. Schoentgen of Council Bluffs is the democratic member of the commission. He is still a young man, but it is thought he will prove a valuable member of the commission. He graduated from the Boston School of Polytecnics in 1895 and then took a post graduate course of three years in Paris and Italy.

It is expected in view of the great work that devolves upon the capitol commission, that an early meeting will be held for organization and the mapping out of plans. The terms of the measure provide that not more than a fourth of the appropriation shall be expended prior to July 1, 1903, the end of this biennial period. Another quarter will be available each year up to July 1, 1906.

The members of the Lookout Mountain commission include Senator John Alexander Young of Washington, Joseph D. Fagen of Clinton, Alexander J. Miller of Oxford, Representative Mahlon Head of Jefferson, Col. Alonzo Abernathy of Osage, Thomas C. Alexander of Oakland, Solomon D. Humbert of Cedar Falls, Samuel H. Watkins of Libertyville, F. P. Spencer of Randolph, Elias B. Bascom of Waukon and Elliott Frazier of Morning Sun.

The Lookout Mountain commission will have charge of the expenditure of $[illegible].000 for three monuments to Iowa soldiers, one on Lookout mountain and one on each end of Missionary ridge. But $5,000 will be available before the next biennial period and hence nothing but preliminary work can be done for the present.

BALLIET IS FOUND GUILTY.

The Convention Is on All Five Points in Indictment.

Des Moines, June 6.—Letson Balliet was found guilty of using the United States mails to defraud in connection with the promotion of the White Swan gold mine. by a jury in the federal court yesterday afternoon. The indictment was on five counts, which were consolidated, however, so that the extreme punishment for the crime would be eighteen months in the penitentiary and a fine of $500. The jury went out at 10 o'clock and came in at 3, not having any serious disagreement in securing a verdict.

Sentence will not be pronounced at present. His attorneys, Judge Charles Bishop, of Des Moines, and Col. Emmert Callahan, of Baker City, Oregon, gave notice at once of a motion for a new trial. They have until June 26 to file this motion. It will be passed upon some time during July or early in August. If refused sentence will then be pronounced, and if the defense sees fit an appeal will then be taken to the United States circuit court of appeals at St. Louis. The case could be carried up from that court to the United States supreme court on certiorari proceedings. While not willing to state what will be their action until after the motion for a new trial is passed upon it seems to be the intention of Balliet and his attorneys to fight the matter out to the end. Pending the decision of the court on motion for new trial Balliet will be at large under the same bond as since he was indicted.

Des Moines, June 7.—When Letson Balliet, who was convicted of using the United States mails with intent to defraud, returns to San Francisco, he will find his mail again in the possession of the federal authorities. Five minutes after a verdict of guilty was read to the court a telegram was sent to Washington notifying the department of what had occurred. The federal statues empowers the government, in case of a conviction of this character, to issue what is known as a "fraud order" which is plainly an order holding up all mail addressed to the party convicted and thereby preventing the operation of the alleged fraud.

Mrs. Curl Divorced.

Fort Dodge, June 5.—Mrs. George Curl, the Fort Dodge girl whose husband sued James L. Kirk, the soap manufacturer of Chicago, for $50,000, for the alienation of his wife's affections, is no longer Mrs. Curl. She is now free to sign herself Miss Lulu Dunsmore, the name she bore before she became the wife of Curl.

Governor Cummins has appointed H. P. Keyhoe of Ottumwa as boat inspector for that district of the state. Mr. Keyhoe is president of the Union Iron works of Ottumwa. The other boat inspectors have already been appointed.

TES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, June 9, 1902.

The supreme court holds that the Edison Light company must pay the estate of Charles Downs, a young man employed by the Mutual Telephone company as lineman, $7,500 for causing his death. Downs was engaged in repairing a wire on a pole jointly occupied by the street railway, the Mutual and the Edison companies. The telephone wire lay across the Edison wire. The repair was being made at nine o'clock a. m., an hour when the Edison was not expected to turn on the street lights. It nevertheless turned on the power without warning and Downs was electrocuted. The jury awarded a verdict of $15,000. The Edison company asked for a new trial on the ground that the verdict was exorbitant. Judge Holmes gave the estate the privilege of accepting $7,500 or a new trial. The administrator accepted the $7,500. The Edison company appeals from the judge's decision and loses.

The state board of control has just let the contract for the tobacco supply for the state institutions. There was about $1,100 worth. The Amana society at South Amana secured the contract for Spear Head chewing, and Sprague-Warner company of Chicago the contract for smoking tobacco. There are 2,800 pounds of chewing and 600 pounds of smoking tobacco. The board tried to stop the tobacco habit in the institutions, but concluded that it was subversive of discipline.

The state treasurer has received $228 in checks from Dr. A. M. Linn, president of the state board of health, this being the product of the sale of the residue of blankets left after supplying the Tama Indians out of the appropriation made by the last general by the state amounted to $7,000.

Superintendent Barrett is sending out to various firms the suggestive list o. books for school libraries, as prepared by the state board of educational examiners. The object is to obtain proposals from book concerns as to the lowest figure for which they will furnish these books to school libraries. Firms will be given until June 26 to bid. There are about 500 books adopted by the examiners to supplement the old list of suitable books.

In the district court Judge A. H. McVey rendered a decision in the case of Muller, administrator, vs. the National Life Insurance company of Minnesota, which if sustained by the supreme court, will be of vast importance to the insurance interests and those carrying life insurance. Muller, who was a chemist and lived in Valley Junction, committed suicide about two years ago. Some years before his death he took out a policy for $5,000 on his life in the Federal Life Insurance company of Davenport. This policy, unlike most life insurance policies, did not contain a clause relieving the insurance company of liability in the event that the insured took his own life. Later the Federal went out of business and reinsured all its business with the National. The policies of the National contain a suicide clause. When Muller's administrator made application for payment of the policy, the insurance company refused to pay, claiming that the insured had violated the suicide clause. The administrator claimed that in reinsuring the business of the Federal, the National had placed itself in the position of the Federal and was bound to carry out all promises made to Federal policy holders, and sued. The court held that by reinsurance the National could not escape the liability of the Federal; that it assumed all promises of the Federal, and ordered that judgment be entered for the full amount of the policy.

CHAPTER IV.

And the Professor, Too.

Perhaps it was a rash resolve—possibly Charlie Stuart should have accepted the baron's well-meant warning for its full value, and have left Antwerp by the first train. But it was only the word of the baron against his own powers of perspicacity, and Charlie did not see why he should yield so easily.

In other words, he was not ready to believe in the story the wonderful baron had related, without more abundant proof.

Perhaps he might even doubt it until the action of Arline Brand convinced him of her guilt, or her own sweet lips confessed it.

That was Charlie's idea of friendship.

With the disappearance of the baron from the scene, Charlie supposed the show was over for the morning.

He was mistaken.

While he stood there on the curb, a prey to distracting thoughts, he was being closely watched by a man who had been lounging just inside the entrance of the Steen courtyard.

When Stuart started to move away, the gentleman appeared to lose the last vestige of control which he possessed.

He ran after the retreating figure.

The patter of footsteps just behind him natuarlly caused Charlie to half turn; perhaps he thought it might be the baron, with yet another choice bit of information with which to add to his stock of cheerfulness, or mayhap Artemus desirous of overtaking him.

He was immediately undeceived.

A florid-faced gentleman, who looked as though he might have been dallying with the wine too long, but with hot passion glowing in his eyes, was close upon him.

Even as Charlie stepped back a pace, thinking the man was drunk, or in a great hurry to catch a train, to his intense surprise the stranger slapped into Charlie's face a pair of kid gloves he carried.

Luckily, Stuart had a cool head for one of his race, or they would have had it out then and there in the respectable street of the Steen.

He saw that the man had a grievance, though utterly in the dark as to what its nature might be.

"See here! Who are you?" asked Charlie.

"Aha! I am Herr Professor Richter of Dresden."

Charlie shook his head.

"Still I am groping in the dark. To my knowledge I never had the pleasure of meeting you, professor."

The German scowled angrily.

"Which is one good thing for you, [illegible]; and now that you have met me, shall give me the satisfaction of ntleman. To-morrow morning it t be, with pistols—or do you prefer ords? Blood alone can wipe out the insult."

uppose you tell me, Herr Profes- ow I have offended you. Surely, d not be a matter serious enough for a duel."

Then card sh dress at et two had only read

"Hotel de Dresden."

Well, there it was.

In black and white he saw the miserable evidence before his eyes.

Still he was grimly determined to keep his engagement for that evening, come what might.

Oh! sublime faith! It would require mountains to crush a positive belief in the conviction of his own eyes and his own intuition.

Dinner came next.

He could amuse himself with a thousand and one theories bearing upon the case.

Charlie was enjoying his dinner with a fair amount of satisfaction, considering what a load he carried upon his mind, when Artemus, who had been given his address, made his appearance.

Stuart immediately decided to make a full disclosure.

An opportunity came in good time whereby they could converse without being overheard.

Then Charlie let loose.

He fairly staggered his companion with his first volley, containing the account of the famous baron and his charge that Arline Brand was the most dangerous as well as notorious adventurer in all Europe.

While Artemus was yet gasping from the effect of this hot shot, Charlie poured in grape and cannister. He sketched the dramatic advent of the professor on the scene, the challenge to a duel he had flung at the supposed disturber of his family peace, Charlie's amazed questions concerning yellow hair and blue eyes, and finally the solemn agreement that had been reached between them.

Charlie, having exhausted his repertoire, now turned the tables.

"What became of you, my dear boy?" he asked.

"I waved you farewell," Artemus said.

"Then you were not in the second coach?"

"Ay, ay. You see, the fair lady neglected to favor me with one of her cards, and I was compelled to adopt measures of my own in order to discover her residence. She went to the hotel in the Rue de Mennisters."

"That's the De la Paix," with a frown, remembering the card he held.

"Yes, my boy, the same. I was satisfied that I had found out just where she put up but curiosity induced me to waylay the doorkeeper, he who opened the carriages and exercised the functions of factotum. So, putting a bit of silver in his hand, I asked him who the lady might be—she with the veil over her face. He scratched his head as though a bit puzzled himself, and then suddenly answered, as though at random:

"'Mlle. Brand.'"

Charlie had been listening eagerly.

He gave vent to an exclamation of satisfaction.

"Artemus, you are a brick!"

"So," continued the other, with a grim smile, as though he could scent something that had not yet become visible to the naked eye, "I came to the conclusion the young lady had given us her true name, after all, though she hinted at possessing another."

"Yes; why did she say that?" mused Charlie. "But one thing seems clear—there is an Arline Brand, after all; and to-night I am bound to discover what relation, if any, connects her with this bold, intriguing countess, or the runaway wife of the Herr Professor—either that, or to-morrow I am booked for a duel."

Charlie Stuart saw the shades of night close in upon the old city of Antwerp with a sigh of deep satisfaction.

Reaching the hotel he boldly asked to see Madam Sophie Richter.

Some time elapsed while he waited.

He was on needles and pins—hung up, as it were, on tenter-hooks by suspense.

"The lady awaits meinherr in the little parlor over yonder," at last came the message.

Charlie drew in a long breath and entered.

He felt a sensation of tremendous relief.

"I am a stranger to you, lady—an Englishman, Stuart by name. Through some misadventure I have become, much against my will, I assure you, mixed up in your domestic arrangements, and I have come here to throw myself upon your mercy and beg your gentle indulgence as an intercessor."

The lady looked astonished.

"Sir, explain. Who seeks to do you harm, and of whom am I to beg indulgence?" she asked.

"Madam, there is at large in Antwerp a man who has sworn to have the life of the wretch who has robbed his quiet home of its one bright jewel—who prowls hither and yon, regardless of his personal appearance, breathing vengeance, and ready to sacrifice all he has on earth if he can revenge his honor."

really mean that the professor in Antwerp?"

last he has left his musty

"Very much in evidence, I assure you."

"Then our strategem worked," she laughed.

"Pardon my ignorance, madam, but I am inclined to think it worked only too well, since I, an entirely innocent man, am booked to meet the professor in a duel to-morrow at sunrise, because, forsooth, he chanced to see me place a lady in a cab—a lady who had golden locks, and whom the old—I mean the jealous professor—chose to fancy was the wife of his bosom."

The lady laughed aloud.

"In a duel! He fight for me! Oh, charming! It is too good! What will Cousin Hildegarde say?"

"I'm sure I don't know; but I'm anxious to convince this old fire-eater that he has gotten hold of the wrong man, and I am certain you will assist me to prove my innocence."

"Oh, sir, most certainly; especially as there is no man in the matter at all, and the object of our little escapade has been accomplished. Since you have been put to more or less inconvenience in the premises, it would be only fair for me to explain."

The story was nothing new, though its sequel gave evidence of considerable originality, thanks to the appearance of the bright-witted Hildegarde on the scene.

Madam and the professor had not been the happiest couple in the world.

He was wedded to his books, and neglected his pretty wife. Long had she suffered, and doubtless would have continued to do so, only that his cousin took the bull by the horns and suggested a strategem whereby the student should be aroused and made to realize how dear to his heart this wife of his really might be.

It was the old principle over again—of not missing the water until the well ran dry.

And one day, when the learned man found his blue-eyed spouse gone, and a few lines simply signed H. begging her by her love to meet the writer in Antwerp, which note she had apparently dropped in the haste of her departure, the professor threw his books to the winds and started in pursuit.

"To think—he would even fight, and for me!" she said, almost incredulously.

"Indeed, he is distracted enough to defy Fate itself. But, madam, you may do me a favor," boldly.

"You have but to name it, sir."

"This lady whom I had the pleasure of serving—this lady whom your furious husband saw me put into a carriage—gave me a card and invited me to call upon her here at the hotel to-night."

"Ah! yes," with a bright smile.

"She gave me a card. I did not look at it just then, but after the ridiculous encounter with your husband, in which he accused me of stealing his wife, and threatened me with death on the field of honor, I took occasion to investigate, and found—this."

He handed the card to her.

One glance, and the professor's wife laughed.

"Yes, it is my carte-de-visite; but, on my honor, Meinherr Stuart, I did not give it to you."

"That I know very well. What I wish to discover is, who did? There is a young lady, also with such golden hair and blue eyes as you yourself possess; she is stopping at this hotel. Now, you must have at some time exchanged cards with her. Can you not remember the circumstance?"

The professor's wife nodded eagerly.

"Well do I remember; it was only yesterday. She quite charmed me with her naivete and her flattery. I had never before met one so fascinating."

"It was the Countess Isolde Brabant."

GENERAL MILES UNDER SUSPICION

Did He Give Philippine Correspondence to Senator Culbertson?

PRESIDENT WILL INVESTIGATE

The Charges Made Against Lieutenant Arnold Seem to Be the Principal Feature in the Controversy—Root in a Bad Light.

Washington, June 7.—General Miles is suspected by officials of the war department of giving the correspondence to Senator Culbertson upon which the charges of cruelty against Lieutenant T. F. Arnold are based. The official records of the war department have been laid before the senate and the heads of the departments do not know how possession of them was gained. A searching investigation has been instituted and if the suspicion in the official mind is confirmed by the investigation, General Miles' summary retirement is certain. Both Secretary Root and General Miles are out of the city. There are four bureaus where the leak may have occurred, the adjutant general's office, the office of the judge advocate and the immediate office of the secretary of war. Wherever the leak occurred the guilty will be punished if proof can be established.

Mr. Sanger, the assistant secretary of the war, avers that in no way did the papers go out of the secretary's office. Adjutant General Corbin says that they could not have possibly leaked out of his office, and General Davis, judge advocate general, is equally certain that his office is not the place to be suspected. The president has conferred with General Corbin and Mr. Sanger. There is no doubt as to the disingenuousness of Senator Culbertson's denial of the insinuation of the fact that he got the charges from General Miles. Mr. Culbertson, when pressed by Senator Beveridge, as to whether he had obtained the papers from the war department, replied that he had not. Mr. Beveridge, asking directly, if General Miles had given them to him, the Texas senator made no answer and Mr. Beveridge drew the inference that the refusal to answer was equivalent to admitting the affirmative. Later Mr. Culbertson arose to make an explanation, in which he said that a gentleman not at all connected with the army, furnished him the papers, and they had not come to him directly, nor, as far as he knew, indirectly from General Miles.

It is the belief around the war department that some clerk or typewriter connected with the department must have copied the charges made against Lieutenant Arnold and held the copy until it could be used to advantage. It is fully six months since the papers passed through General Miles' office. The majority senators of the Philippine committee take the matter hard. They have rested on Secretary Root's statement that he had been perfectly frank with the senate and furnished all the cases of alleged cruelty that were in the possession of the department.

The democrats on the committee, not satisfied with Secretary Root's word, have tried to have a resolution reported from the committee calling for all such papers on file in the war department. The majority of the committee has always replied that the word of Secretary Root was enough, and refused to assist in getting the desired data from the department.

DISORDERS ARE EXPECTED.

One Miner Shot on First Day of West Virginia Strike.

Keystone, W. Va., June 9.—At the Crane creek mines James Dewees, a bank boss, was shot and killed while walking up the mountain toward the pit with twenty or more non-union Italian miners. More trouble is expected.

Wheeling, W. Va., June 9.—The strike ordered by the United Mine Workers' of America to take effect in West Virginia Saturday was much more complete in some districts than expected and less effective in others. The incomplete reports are conflicting, but on the whole several thousand more men went out than was anticipated. The strike affects not only the industries of this state, but also the railways' and river navigation. All of the local coal roads will suffer. Among the trunk lines the Norfolk & Western suffered most but many miners were also idle along the Baltimore & Ohio and the Chesapeake & Ohio. In a few places the striking miners were served with notice to vacate the houses belonging to the coal companies.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 9.—There was absolutely no change in the anthracite coal miners' strike, which has now rounded its fourth week. Miners and operators had nothing to say, and altogether it was a dull day throughout this valley. Here and there, however, men who were on their way to or from work were assaulted, but none of them was seriously hurt.

Considerable interest was manifested in the strike of the West Virginia soft coal miners, which was inaugurated today. The anthracite mine workers hope the strike in that state will eventually have some good effect in their own struggle. President Mitchell, who is directing the soft coal suspension from here, had nothing to give out regarding the West Virginia trouble.

ROASTED BRITISH OFFICERS.

Official Report Condemns Army Leaders for Their Inefficiency.

London, June 9.—The report of the committee on military education and training, just issued, furnishes the strongest official corroboration of the inefficiency of the officers of the British army. The committee's report, which is based on the evidence of the officers themselves, from the commander-in-chief down, fills forty-eight printed pages, with caustic criticisms of the existing system. The witnesses were unanimous in saying that the junior officers were lamentably deficient in military knowledge and in zeal. The committee finds that the young officers will not work unless compelled to do so, that "keenness is out of fashion," and that "it is not correct form." The committee declares that many officers do not possess an elementary education, and plaintively protests that officers ought "at least to be able to express themselves clearly and concisely in their own language." The report condemns the systems of both Woolwich and Sandhurst, where education is "far from satisfactory—the instructors have no inducements to teach the cadets, much less to work."

With the view of diminishing the expenses of officers belonging to the cavalry regiments, the report recommends that polo tournaments, regimental coaches and the keeping of hounds be forbidden.

Perhaps the penultimate paragraph is the most complete of all. "So long as mediocrity is permitted to pass muster," says the committee, "and signal ability meets with no substantial recognition, it is useless to hope for any valuable results from verbal amendments to the regulations. Nothbut inducements in the shape of certain reward for good work, either in peace or war, can raise the standard of knowledge through the commissioned ranks."

The committee, therefore, recommends "an honest system of promotion by merit, following upon tests honestly conducted and honestly reported on."

The report plainly hints that officers can hardly be expected to work so long as the present system of advancement through social influence is in vogue, or so long as efficiency has nothing to do with the selection of officers for desirable appointments.

The committee recommends among other things, that more commissions be offered to the colonies and that officers be compelled to know either French or German.

ONE THOUSAND LIVES

WIPED OUT BY ERUPTION OF VOLCANO IN GUATEMALA.

Mont Pelee in State of Eruption and Black Cloud Hangs Over Lesser Antilles.

San Francisco, June 7.—Upwards of one thousand lives have been lost and half of the city of Ratalhulen, Guatemala, has been destroyed by the eruption of Tacana volcano, according to advices received here yesterday by the Chilean steamer Palena, from Valparaiso and way ports.

Ratalhulen lay several miles back from Champeriso, on the coast, and it was at the latter city that news of the disaster was secured. Earthquakes, it was said, had continued at short intervals every day since the disturbance of April 18, when the city of Quezaltenango was destroyed.

The shocks have been of sufficient strength to keep the residents of the entire region in a state of terror, and little has been done to repair the damage done by them and the volcanic eruptions. Pumice stone and ashes thrown from the crater of Tacana have spread a thin coating over the territory surrounding Champeriso.

Fort de France, June 7.—Mont Pelee is still in violent eruption. Yesterday morning an enormous cloud of black smoke rose from the volcano to a height estimated at four miles, and then spread rapidly into a mushroom shaped cloud, which appeared to have a diameter of forty miles. The spectacle was most impressive, but there was no detonation and no showers of ashes. Fort de France has been shrouded in intense gloom, like that which accompanies a total eclipse of the sun.

The most notable phenomenon of the day was that the sea rose nearly three feet, then fell to below its normal level, and then returned to its normal level. The cause of this rise and fall of the sea is unexplainable. The eruption today was absolutely not accompanied by earthquake. The sky is now clear, but a heavy surf is beating the coast.

Reports of damage have been received. It is probable that the area of activity and destruction is the same as that of previous outbursts. This area is now completely abandoned.

Prof. Angelo Heilprin, president of the Philadelphia Geographical society, and George Kennan noticed a great outburst of yellow vapor from the volcano Thursday when they were at Le Precheur.

The explosion was expected and watched for. There was consequently very slight panic among the people here and quite was soon restored.

EXILED BOERS OUT.

Hamilton, Bermuda, June 7.—The Boer officers who have been living in prison camps on the islands near here, have been allowed the liberty on parole. Several of them came ashore today and were interviewed. Generals Cronje, Wessels, Botha and others were extremely reticent, but they said they were glad the war was over and would be delighted to get back to their homes. It is understood that the rank and file of the Boers will be landed ashore in batches of ten. They have been invited to [illegible] the government hou[illegible]

I suffered from dyspepsia and indigestion for fifteen years," says W. Hurdevant, of Merry Oaks, N. C. "After I had tried many doctors and medicines and to no avail one of my friends persuaded me to try Kodol. I found immediate relief. I can eat anything I want now and my health good. I cheerfully recommend Kodol." Don't try to cure indigestible by dieting. That only weakens the system. Kodol is wholesome, strengthening and enables you to assimilate your meat by digesting it with the stomach's aid. J. L Harr.

Dogs Lead the Blind.

A new field of usefulness has been opened for especially intelligent dogs by the keeper of a kennel in England. The animals are trained to lead the blind, and, with this object in view, they are taught to walk in a straight line and at a steady pace. To accomplish this result with a frisky young puppy requires about two months of constant daily practice. The dogs are also taught to avoid carts on the street, and their sense of locality is developed to a high degree. It takes about five months to train the dog in all branches of his work, and when he has thoroughly mastered his profession he is sold for $10 or $15.

Salt Stopped Paris Electric Cars.

One result of the slight fall of snow was that several electric tramways in Paris stopped running. It would appear that snow itself has no hindrance, but that the coarse salt thrown on it to make it melt, in accordance with the instructions of the municipal authorities, acted as an insulating medium on the plots where the trolley system is not in use. The companies in question have asked that salt may no longer be scattered and have offered to clear away the snow themselves.

Some Remarkable Facts Regarding the Human System.

The framework of the house in which we live is made up of 206 bones.

In a normal head of hair there are 250,000 hairs.

The brain and spinal cord have 3,000,000,000 nerve cells.

In the average man there are 32,500,000,000 red blood cells and 53,000,000 white cells.

A German writer says, according to the New York World, there are all told 26,500,000,000,000 cells in the adult human body.

The heart dispenses blessings to the bones, nerves, muscles and organs through nearly 1,000 arteries. The arterioles and capillaries are innumerable.

Life is action. The nervous system makes action possible. The nerves are the avenues to the soul. There are more than 600 nerves engaged in carrying messages to or from the brain and spinal cord. Thousands of sympathetic nerves are kept busy at the same work.

There are 2,500,000 sweat glands in the skin. These glands empty their secretions upon the skin through a spiral channel.

In the palm of the hand there are 2,500 pores to the square inch. If these pores were united end to end they would make a sewer nearly five miles long.

The breathing surface of the lungs spread out flat would cover 2,000 square feet, or an area equal to that of a piece of land 50 feet long and 40 feet wide.

The lungs are composed of lobes, the lobes of lobules, and the lobules of 1,700,000,000 are air cells.

There are 10,000,000 villi in the small intestines. These villi are the little structures in the mucous membrane that absorb the food after it has entered the small intestine.

The retina is made up of ten layers. The ninth layer is composed of rods and cones standing like bricks placed on end. It is estimated that there are 3,000,000 of these cones, and the rods are still more numerous.

The most interesting part of the ear is the organ of Corti, found in the spiral portion of the internal ear. It is especially concerned in receiving and transmitting sound. It consists of two rows of rods united at their upper ends, but each rests upon a broad case, with a space between them, called a tunnel. From a side view it looks like a harp, seen from above it is strikingly like the keyboard of a piano.

The inner row of the organ of Corti contains 10,000 cells, the outer part 16,000 cells. These cells rest upon a membrane made up of 24,000 fibres.

A Tardy Recognition.

Although it is some ten years since the city of East Saginaw, Mich., ceased to exist, the United States government has persisted in calling the customs station there the "port of East Saginaw," the protests of the people of the united Saginaws notwithstanding. At last, however, an official order has been issued changing the name of the port to correspond with that of the city.

RAISING SNAILS FOR FOOD

Snail raising for profit is the unique occupation of a California man, and his snail ranch at Los Angeles is supposed to be the only place in the United States where snails are bred and raised as an article of food. This odd industry is little more than a fad in this country, but in France the succulent escargot is in high favor with the gourmet, 800 tons of them being consumed last year in the city of Paris alone.

A few years ago Mr. A. V. Pernot of Los Angeles, a native of France, imported two dozen of the variety known as "escargot Bourgogne," and attempted to found a colony of the slimy and repulsive appearing creatures. He knew their food value, and he also knew that "sirup d'escargots" is esteemed of benefit in the treatment of throat and lung affections. The variety imported is carnivorous and they lived but a short time on the vegetable diet to which they were subjected.

Later Mr. Pernot received a consignment of the variety "escargot Bordelaise," which is herbivorous, and the success of his experiment has been phenomenal. The colony has increased so rapidly that in breeding season the services of one man are required constantly in the care of the thousands of snails that crowd the confines of their pens.

Snail raising is beset with few difficulties. All that is needed is a small enclosure in a moist place, so protected that the crawling gasteropod cannot stray away with its shell house on its back.

In the Los Angeles snailery the pens are built under a large windmill tank, where water is plentiful. Several long boxes, two feet wide and one and one-half feet in height, are arranged about an open space, and the tops are covered with wire netting fitted with hinges. Inside the boxes are numerous lengths of drain tile, in and upon which the snails cling in great numbers and in all stages of development.

The eggs of the snail, tiny in size and whitish gray in color, are laid in May or June, when large numbers of the creatures gather in sunny places. When about to lay the snail burrows into the damp soil, sheltered from the sun's rays, and deposits from thirty to fifty eggs that look like small pills. Three or four similar deposits are made and abandoned in a season.

Ordinarily the young snail gnaws its way out of the shell and to the surface within twenty or thirty days, but instances have been noted of eggs that have been dried and kept for many years and then returned to a moist place, where they hatched in the usual period.

The snails are liveliest in the early morning. This is their feeding time, and they come out in myriads to receive a shower bath from a garden hose and to feast on the cabbage, lettuce and grape vine leaves that compose their diet. They are voracious eaters, and when several thousands of them are eating the noise they make with their horny jaws and cartilaginous tongue is not unlike the champing of a horse on its bit.

In their native haunts the snails are great pests, resembling grasshoppers in their destructivity, and instances are cited where entire gardens of cabbage and strawberries have been devastated in a single night.

The snails raised on the California ranch vary in size from that of a pinhead at the time of hatching to the dimensions of half a dollar when full grown and inclosed in the shell. The animal's body is translucent and of a light brown hue. As the snail crawls on a log all that can be seen is the square head, bearing two long and two short horns with a muscular base tapering behind. Extending under the surface of the body is a tough corrugated disk on which the animal creeps. This is the last part of the body to be drawn into the shell, and to it is attached a horny valve that just fits the opening, completely covering it when the snail is inside.

In preparing the creatures for food they are kept for about four weeks in wine-soaked bran, where they fatten rapidly and are freed from all extraneous and slimy matter. When this preparation is not possible the snails are taken from their shells and washed many times in salt and water or vinegar and salt. Then they are placed in a stewpan and cooked in salt and water or boiled in milk. Another method is to place them in a vessel, shells and all, and to boil them with herbs, cloves and whole peppers until they fall from the shells. Then the tails are clipped off, the shells scrubbed, and a paste made of parsley, butter, bread crumbs and white wine. The meat is replaced in the shells with this paste, and then the mass is placed in a baking dish and browned in a hot oven.

Ordinarily they are fried in a pan with the shells on, and they taste not unlike a clam or mussel, although they lack the fishy flavor of the bivalve. Like the oyster, they are best in the month of which the letter "r" appears.

Forty or fifty snails constitute a meal for a hearty eater.

In addition to the food value snails are thought to be efficacious in the treatment of pulmonary troubles, and the water that comes from the creatures by distillation is considered an effective "beauty wash." The belles of two centuries ago ascribed beautifying properties to "eau d'escargots," claiming it made their complexions white and fresh.

Acres of Foliage.

The beauty of the Cryptomeria as seen in Japan has often been described by travelers both when seen wild, forming large forests on the mountain sides, and also under cultivation, the Japanese having used it to a great extent for avenues along the sides of the public roads, says the Garden. One of the finest of these avenues is recorded as leading from the town of Namada to Nikko, a distance of fifty miles, every tree being a perfect speciment, quite straight, averaging from 130 feet to 150 feet in hight and 12 feet to 15 feet in circumference. In this country it has proved, on the whole, a disappointing tree, fine specimens being extremely rare. The species, or one of its numerous varieties, is said to have been first introduced into England by Fortune in 1844, who sent it from Shanghai. Although usually spoken of as a Japanese tree, it is also found widely distributed in many of the mountainous parts of China.

U. S. Area 3,690,822 Miles.

The area of the United States, according to the twelfth census, is 3,690,822 square miles, including the "outlying districts" of Alaska, Hawaii, Porto Rico, the Philippine islands, Guam and Samoa.

Of the total area just given, 2,970,230 square miles lies within "continental United States" and the balance in the sections named, which range from 590,884 for Alaska to 201 for Samoa, and 81 for the Isle of Pines, not mentioned separately above.

The areas for continental United States include land surface, only, but for the outlying districts they include both land and water surface.

THINGS OF INTEREST TO THE WOMEN OF THE HOUSEHOLD.

Parasols of the Season Are Elaborate Affairs—Two Handsome Costumes—Mrs. Roosevelt Wearing "The Latest Thing in Coats"—Some Little Tips.

Latest in Parasols.

If there is a thing dear to a woman's heart and enhancing to her beauty it is a lovely parasol. This season the designers seem to have tried themselves in bringing this artistic creation up to the requirements of feminine taste.

There is a parasol for every style of woman from the one who buys a Duchesse lace affair behandled with ivory and snugly cased in a long pale green straw box adorned with lilies of the valley and "choux" of white ribbon, to the one who buys a simple linen sunshade. For the conservative woman it is a joy to find the color and form she likes the best—the quiet fawn-colored parasol. For the pretty, fresh girl, or her more wilted sister in a soft linen gown, this modish parasol is the thing par excellence. It has a silk spun lining in pink or blue, or any preferred color, and a lace insertion on the outside, showing the colored lining.

Then there are the exquisitely fine embroidered grass linens, with ruffles sheer and shimmering. "Persian" fawn silks come next; these are nothing more than "chene" silks on which blurred roses and poppies of various colors are designed.

The Latest Thing in Coats.

The newest modification of the Eton or bolero jacket is a jaunty little affair termed the "coffee coat" or "Monte Carlo coat," the attractive features of which have already won the favor of the "First Lady of the Land," Mrs. Roosevelt, who has appeared on several occasions wearing a wrap of this type. Taffeta silk is best adapted to the garment, though it is also made up in moire, soft woolens, etc.

Pretty Cloth Gown.

with same silk. Belt of red silk. Skirt, bias ruffle trimmed with band of red and white silk.

Childless Mothers.

The wife who has passed her many years of married life in childless motherhood, has lost from out that life a greatness and pleasure that she may not have realized at first, but that is brought home to her with redoubled force and meaning when she has passed the zenith and is coming to understand that life is not perpetual youth.

Keen anxiety and sorrow she may have missed also. Yet it is also true that "it were better to have loved and lost than neved to have loved at all."

[illegible] shoes and bliss. Neither [illegible] known the anguish of the [illegible] death, when her fondest hopes have been laid low. She has escaped great care and responsibility, but she has lost from her life in unalloyed joy more than she has escaped of sorrow. —The American Mother.

Blouse of Crepe de China.

Pretty blouse of dull green crepe de chine, trimmed with fagoting done with silk of the same shade. The plastron and close-fitting undersleeves are of white luxeuil lace, and over the former is a pretty draped fichu of mousseline de soie, which passes through eyelet holes in the fronts of the blouse, and is knotted on the bust. The girdle is of the crepe de chine fastened in front with an old gold buckle.—Wiener Chic.

The Fashionable Blouse.

Nearly all the newest corsages have a tiny basque in the back; sometimes it is formed by the ribbons of the ceinture, but it is always a basque, nondescript as it may be.

For the street during shopping hours a great many blouses will be worn, much trimmed with the fashionable English embroideries, lace and tucking. The marked change in their cut is noticeable in the sleeve, which is more ample than last season, and in the shoulders, which show less inclination to sloping.

Her Honest Self.

It will not do to preach to little folks and practice the opposite; children are keenly observant of inconsistencies; they are perfectly literal; to make them otherwise is to first teach them to say what they do not mean; then they are punished for lying, when the fact is, they have heard you do as much many a time, with no one to punish you for it. So the mistress of her home and her children, to say nothing of her maids and, perhaps, men, will do well to cultivate assiduously a broad, kindly, large way of looking at and criticising the faults and failings of all humanity, that she may not be horror-stricken some time at a chance remark of one of her wee tots, in which she can, if she be quite honest with herself, see the logical result of her practices; not her preachings.

Easy to Get.

Have you a real smart all-over lace jacket?

If you haven't, and want one, and cannot pay the price in the shops—make one for yourself.

Get an eton pattern and cut and fit it. Finish with a lace or beribboned edge. Use your skill with the needle and your good taste and—presto! you become the possessor of about the same thing on exhibit in the shops.

You see, time and art and needlecraft and design must be counted in the price of the garment you admire in the shop.

Little Tips.

The juice of a lemon taken in hot water on awakening in the morning is an excellent liver corrective and is better than any anti-fat medicine invented.

The finest of manicure acids is made by putting a teaspoonful of lemon juice in a cupful of warm water. This removes most stains from the fingers and nails.

The speediest telegrapher in country is Harry V. Emanuel, of adelphia. In a recent test at Atlan in the Kimball house, in thirty minutes he received fifty and one-half ten word messages, breaking the world's record —which, by the way, he already held— by six messages.

Morris Flynn of Harmonyville, N. Y., is the chapmion pancake-eater. For a wager, he recently ate 97 buckwheat cakes. There were about twenty-five contestants, but most of them had dropped out after eating thirty or forty cakes. The three who came closest to the champion ate respectively 95, 91 and 59.

Mrs. Mary Elvira Gillespie, at the age of 84, has just been admitted to a hospital in Denver. She is the mother of thirty-seven children, among them being fifteen sets of twins. Strange to say, all of her children have drifted away from her, and she knows not the address of any of them.

The prairie dogs of Kansas are doomed. The agricultural college of that state sends out each month $1,300 worth of poison for the extermination of prairie-dogs. Two quarts are sufficient to clear out an entire quarter section, and the dogs seem to like it, until it causes them to stiffen and die.

After Twenty Years

Lusks Springs, Ind., June 9th.—It would be hard to find a happier man than Mr. William Catterson of this place has been for the last few weeks. For twenty years his wife has been an invalid with a complication of diseases. Neuralgia, Rheumatism and generally broken down constitution.

Mr. Catterson had done everything that loving care could suggest, but in vain—his wife only grew worse.

Recently, however, he heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills and determined to give them a trial, and was overjoyed at the splendid result.

From the very beginning of the treatment she commenced to improve till now she is nearly well and Mr. Catterson is rejoicing. He says: "Nothing ever did her so much good. We will always praise Dodd's Kidney Pills for the good work they have done for us."

"This is dead easy," remarked the poet as he received a commission to write an epitaph.

AN INTERESTING PAPER.

Out in Montana there is a Co-operative Company whose principal business is raising cattle and sheep belonging to its shareholders. The company is said to have proven a success from the start and now has over 150 shareholders scattered all over the United States, nearly forty of whom are ladies.

The company is just issuing an illustrated paper showing pictures of the ranches and explaining how money is made in raising cattle and sheep in Montana. It is an interesting paper and may be had by any one by addressing the Montana Co-operative Ranch Company, Great Falls, Montana, mentioning this paper.

PHILIPPINE BILL HAS PASSED

Hoar, Mason and Wellington, Republicans, Vote Against It, While McLaurin, Democrat, Voted for It—Amendments by Minority Were All Voted Down.

Washington, June 3.—Senate.—Shortly after 5 o'clock this afternoon the senate passed the Lodge Philippine government bill by a vote of 42 to 30. Three republicans, Hoar of Massachusetts, Mason of Illinois, and Wellington of Maryland, voted against the measure, and one democrat, McLaurin, of South Carolina, voted for it All amendments offered by the minority were rejected. The debate on the measure has been in progress seven weeks and two days. Lodge, of Massachusetts, chairman of the Philippine committee, who has been unremitting of his advocacy of the measure, was the recipient of many cordial congratulations on his successful conduct of the bill. Just at the close of the discussion today a sharp exchange ocurred between Dietrich, of Nebraska, and Patterson, of Colorado, in the course of which the former reflected caustically upon the Colorado senator. He was called to order, his remarks were read and he was declared to have been out of order in uttering them. He withdrew his statement, thus ending the controversy. During much of the time today the senate was in recess, no senator caring to discuss the measure. After the passage of the Philippine bill the Nicaragua canal bill was made the unfinished business and its consideration will begin tomorrow.

House.—The house today adopted the conference report upon the river and harbor bill. The bill goes now to the president. The house then began consideration of the anti-anarchy bill. The hourse committee reported a substitute for the senate measure. Ray, of New York, chairman of the judiciary committee, who is in charge of the bill, explained the difference between the senate bill and the house substitute. The purpose of the house bill was to protect the president, vice president and those in the line of the presidential succession, and also to prevent the entry into the United States or the naturalization of persons who preach anarchy or forcible destruction of governments. The imperative reason for the passage of the bill was the non-uniformity of state laws for the punishment of homicide. The senate bill, Ray contended, was unconstitutional because it provided the death penalty for killing the president, the vice-president and the cabinet officers in line of succession, without regard to whether at the time they were engaged in the performance of their official duties.

Washington, June 4.—Senate.—Discussion of the project of constructing an isthmian canal was begun by the senate today. Morgan, of Alabama, chairman of the committee on interoceanic canals, opened the debate, speaking nearly three hours. A considerable portion of his speech was devoted to an examination of a recently reported danger to the Nicaraguan canal route by seismic desturbances. This danger, he concluded, after a careful review of many authorities, existed only in the imagination of those who desired to defeat any canal project. His study of the situation had convinced him that really there was no greater damage from volcano and earthquake disturbances to the Panama route than to the Nicaragua route, but he was satisfied that little danger to either was to be anticipated. Morgan also reviewed at length the political conditions in Columbia, finding in them a grave of menace to the United States in the construction of a canal by the Panama route. He presented, also, the present phases of the diplomatic negotiations looking to the building of a canal by both the Nicaragua route and by the Panama route. He closed with a strong appeal for the passage of the Nicaragua bill. The bill authorizing the promotion and retirement of the present senior major of the army, Major General John R. Brooke, was passed. A bill was also passed providing that the postmaster general may extend free delivery to cities of 5,000 inhabitants or $0,000 gross income, instead of 10,000 inhabitants as at present.

House.—The debate on the anti-anarchy bill continued all day in the house. It was without sensational features, being confined almost entirely to the legal and constitutional phases of the question.

Washington, June 5.—In further consideration of the isthmian canal project, the senate heard today two speeches, neither of which was completed. Mr. Hanna of Ohio, spoke in favor of the Spooner amendment, conferring on the president authority to purchase the rights of the Panama Canal company, if a valid title could be obtained, otherwise he shall decide upon the Nicaragua route. Mitchell supported the Hepburn bill for the consideration of the canal by the Nicaragua route. Seldom has a senator been accorded a more attentive hearing than that given Hanna. The Panama route he considered much to be preferred to the Nicaragua route, as it provided an interoceanic waterway much shorter and one that could at less expense than the route. He maintained that the United States was to build the canal to accommodate the commerce of the world, and said that fact must be taken into account.

Mitchell urged that unless the Nicaragua route was determined upon definitely by congress, it would mean the indefinite postponement and perhaps the ultimate defeat of any canal legislation. He insisted that the Nicaragua route was entirely feasible and practicable, while the Panama route involved difficulties which were scarcely to be surmounted.

House.—The general debate on the anti-anarchy bill was ended today except for two speeches, which will be made tomorrow. Mr. Littlefield, of Maine, will make the closing argument in support of the measure. The debate today, like that of yesterday, was devoted to legal arguments, the speakers today being Sibley of Pennsylvania, DeArmond of Missouri, Williams of Mississippi, Wooten of Texas, McDermott of New Jersey, Loud of California, Crumpacker of Indiana Maddox of Georgia, Ball of Texas and Clark of Missouri.

Washington, June 6.—Senate.—After transacting some routine business today, the senate resumed consideration of the isthmian canal bill, Hanna, of Ohio, continuing his arguments in support of the Panama canal. The Ohio senator declared that no political considerations were involved in the canal problem. He presented the opinions of eighty-three ship masters and pilots in favor of the Panama route as against the Nicaragua route, for many reasons which they cited. He urged that the construction of the Nicaragua canal was beset with difficulties, while the construction of the Panama canal was an "open book." He laid particular stress on the danger to the Nicaragua route from volcanoes, and urged that it was not good business policy to ignore these dangers in a project involving an expenditure of $200,000,000. In conclusion Hanna appealed to the senate to consider the matter as a business proposition, and with some feeling repudiated the suggestion that those favoring the Panama route were not in favor of any canal. Morgan, chairman of the committee on interoceanic canals, presented a letter from Secretary of State Hay, enclosing copies of letters received by the state department regarding earthquakes and riots in the department of Panama.

House.—General debate on the anti-anarchy bill closed today. The incident of the day was a speech by Richardson, an Alabama democrat, condemning the president in severe terms for references in his memorial day oration at Arlington to the epithets applied to Lincoln and Grant during the civil war and for his allusions to lynching. He declared that the president's remarks violated the proprieties of the occasion. Littlefield made an argument of an hour and a half in closing the debate on the anti-anarchy bill. The section of the senate bill providing a body guard for the president was stricken from the senate bill as a precaution in case the house substitute failed. An effort was made to strike from the first section of the substitute the words limiting the crime of killing the president to the president in his official capacity, but the motion was lost, 63 to 89. Only one section had been disposed of when the house adjourned.

Washington, June 9.—Senate.—After transhacting some routine business and discussin the bill to relieve shippers from the London dock charges, the senate resumed consideration today of the isthmian canal project. Mr. Mitchell, of Oregon, continued his speech begun on Tnursday in opposition to the Panama route. After considering the engineering difficulties of the route, which he regarded as very serious, he entered upon a denunciation of the methods of the Panama Canal Company. Mitchell handled without gloves the proposition to build the canal by the Panama route, and incidentally the Spooner amendment. By the addition of this proposition, he said, "the United States would be tacking onto one of the greatest frauds and pieces of corruption known since the world began." He could not believe, he said, that the senate proposed "to consider seriously a proposition which will involve the United States in a legal controversy for a hundred years. I want the senate to know the facts and to determine whether we really shall take up this rotten concern across the sea." Mr. Mitchell expressed the opinion that the enactment of the Spooner amendment would result in the postponement of the beginning of the canal project, as the president ostensibly would have to make an important investigation of the subject before he reached a decision.

House.—The house spent the entire day voting upon amendments to the anti-anarchy bill but all failed except one proposed by McCall, of Massachusetts, to strike from the anarchist section the word "assault" where it is coupled with "killing" in the inhibition against conspiring for the killing of the chief magistrate of a foreign country. After the bill had reached the last parliamentary stage before passage De Armond, of Missouri, moved to re-commit. The quorum failed at this point and the house was compelled to adjourn without final action.

Bryan Won't Be Governor.

Lincoln, Neb., June 9.—In a statement given out this evening W. J. Bryan says he is not a candidate and under no circumstances will he be a candidate for governor of Nebraska this fall. The statement is in answer to an interview with former Senator Allen, in which he declared Mr. Bryan should be the fusion nominee.

A JUDGE'S WIFE CURED OF PELVIC CATARRH

MRS. JUDGE McALLISTER.

She Suffered for Years and Felt Her Case Was Hopeless—Cured by Peruna.

Mrs. Judge McAllister writes from 1217 West 33rd St., Minneapolis, Minn., as follows:

"I suffered for years with a pain in the small of my back and right side. It interfered often with my domestic and social duties and I never supposed that I would be cured, as the doctor's medicine did not seem to help me any.

"Fortunately a member of our Order advised me to try Peruna and gave it such high praise that I decided to try it. Although I started in with little faith, I felt so much better in a week that I felt encouraged.

"I took it faithfully for seven weeks and am happy indeed to be able to say that I am entirely cured. Words fail to express my gratitude. Perfect health once more is the best thing I could wish for, and thanks to Peruna I enjoy that now,"—Minnie E. McAllister.

The great popularity of Peruna as a catarrh remedy has tempted many people to imitate Peruna. A great many so-called catarrh remedies and catarrhal tonics are to be found in many drug-stores. These remedies can be procured by the druggist much cheaper than Peruna. Peruna can only be obtained at a uniform price, and no druggist can get it a cent cheaper.

Thus it is that druggists are tempted to substitute the cheap imitations of Peruna for Peruna. It is done every day without a doubt.

We would caution all people against accepting substitutes for Peruna. Insist upon having Peruna. There is no other internal remedy for catarrh that will take the place of Peruna. Allow no one to persuade you to the contrary.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1902.

Gentlemen: — Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

MIDGETS TOO MUCH FOR BANKERS.

Tuesday afternoon the sand train going north was flagged at Klemme, and about twenty-five ball players and rooters boarded it. This train had the honor of carrying the Klemme ball team to Garner where they unmercifully scooped the Garner fellows to the tune of 11 to 4, amidst the deafening howling of the rooters.

Herman Schneider, the regular twirler for the Bankers, was laid up, and Boardman and Bell did the tossing. The Midgets batted Boardman out of the box in the fourth, making six runs. Bell proved to be just as easy for our boys, but we batted them in the fielder's hands nearly every hit, which kept the score down. A high wind was blowing from the south, and this was all that prevented Klemme from making half a hundred more scores, as it was impossible to bat a ball any distance. The Bankers were able to get only four hits outside the diamond.

The two runs made by the Bankers in the first inning were not earned, being made through errors, but after that our boys steadied down and Gaaner just simply wasn't in the game at any stage thereafter.

Score by innings:

| | | | | | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Garner— | 2 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 1 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 1 | — 4 |

Batteries — Klemme, Flint, Kluckhohn and Nissen; Garner, Boardman, Bell and Cassill. Umpires, H. Schneider and C. Lau. Time of game, 2 hours.

DIAMOND DUST.

C. Cassill, Garner's hard hitter, fanned four times.

Morrison and Rheinhart did some nice fielding for the bankers and shut off several scores by nipping flies.

Joe Nissen was injured in the leg in the first inning of the game but played through the game and did some good work.

Frank Cassill was on first for the Bankers. He played like a professional.

John Baumgartener was suffering with an ulcerated tooth but that did not prevent his playing his usual snappy game on the initial bag.

Eleven to four, and Garner is sore.

ROOSEVELT SENDS MESSAGE ON CUBA

Reaffirms His Attitude on the Duty of the Republican Party.

SOME ACTION IS NECESSARY

The President's Action Was Influenced by the Broad Question of the Duty of the United States to Cuba and of Fairness to the Republic.

Washington, June 14.—After talking with a number of the leaders in congress regarding Cuban reciprocity, President Roosevelt yesterday determined to send a message to congress reaffirming his attitude on the situation. The president has earnestly considered the matter for several days and it is stated that the action of the anti-reciprocity republican senators Thursday in deciding to hold out against the policy advocated by the majority of the party did not influence the president in the least in deciding to transmit his message to congress yesterday.

The president's action, it may be stated from sources close to him, was influenced by the broad question of the duty of the United States to Cuba and of fairness to the new republic.

It has been pointed out to the president that warmest political support is in the section of the country where there is the greatest opposition to reciprocity, the west and northwest, and that he should remain content with the stand he has taken without accentuating his views in a special mesage. It is known, however, that the president had no hesitancy in arriving at the conclusion that he would not let his political prospects interfere with what he regarded as his plain duty. It is further known that he told his friends that it was a source of great regret to him to take a position hostile to the wishes of his warmest supporters, but that he felt it would be in keeping with his own nature and his position of chief executive to remain longer silent and thus give opportunity for a false speculation as to his attitude.

The president was further led to conclude that the relations of the United States and Cuba must necessarily grow closer, and that the United States should not at the outset, after its declared purposes toward the island assume a position contrary thereto and thus arouse the suspicions of the Cuban government as to our real intentions toward it.

It is stated that the president's positive declaration in his message as to the duty toward Cuba will tend to settle the reciprocity question.

THE MESSAGE IN FULL.

The president sent the following message to congress:

"To the senate and house: I deem it important before the adjournment of the present session of congress to call attention to the following expressions in the message which in the discharge of duty imposed upon me by the constitution, I sent to congress on the first Tuesday of December last: 'Elswere I have discussed the question of reciprocity. In the case of Cuba, however, there are weighty reasons of morality and of national interest why the policy should be held to have a peculiar application and I most earnestly ask your attention to the wisdom, indeed to the vital need of providing for a substantial reduction in the tariff duties on Cuban imports into the United States. Cuba has in her constitution affirmed what we desired, that she should stand, in international matters, in closer and more friendly relations with us than any other power; and we are bound by every consideration of honor and expediency to pass commercial measures in the interest of her well-being."

"This recommendation was merely giving practical effect to President McKinly's words, when, in his message of December 5, 1899, he wrote: 'It is important that our relations with this people (of Cuba) shall be of the most friendly character and our commercial relations close and reciprocal. We have accepted a trust, the fulfillment of which calls for the strongest integrity of purpose and the exercise of the highest wisdom. The new Cuba yet to arise from the ashes of the past must needs be bound to us by ties of singular intimacy and strength if its enduring welfare is to be assured. The greatest blessing which can come to Cuba is the restoration of her agricultural and industrial prosperity.

"Yesterday, June 12, I received by cable from the American minister in Cuba an earnest appeal from President Palma for 'legislative action before it is too late, and his country financially ruined.' The granting of a reciprocity with Cuba is a proposition which stands entirely alone. The reasons, for it outweigh those for granting reciprocity with any other nation, and are entirely consistent with preserving intact the protective system under which this country has thriven so marvelous-

T The present tariff law was designed to promote the adoption of such a reciprocity treaty, and provided for a reduction to exced 20 per cent upon goods coming from a particular coun-, leaving the tariff rates on the same des unchanged as regards all other ing nations. Objection has been made Satur granting of the reduction on ound that the substantial ben- month. ould not go to the agricultural M. Ellis er of sugar, but would inure to herican sugar refiners. In my nt, provision can, and should, e which will guarantee us against this possibility, without having recourse to a measure of doubtful policy such as a bounty in the form of a rebate.

"The question as to which if any of the different schedules of the tariff ought not properly to be revised does not enter into this matter in any way or shape. It is concerned with getting a friendly reciprocal arrangement with Cuba. The arrangement applies to all the articles that Cuba grows or produces. It is not in our power to determine what these articles shall be, and any discussion of the tariff as it affects special schedules, or countries other than Cuba, is wholly aside from the subject matter to which I call your attention.

"Some of our citizens oppose the lowering of the tariff on Cuban products, just as three years ago, they opposed the admission of the Hawaiian Islands, lest free trade with them might ruin certain of our interests here. In the actual event these fears proved baseless as regard Hiwaii, and their apprehensions as to the damage to any industry of our own because of the proposed reciprocity is baseless. In my judgment, no American industries will be hurt and many American industries will be benefited by the proposed action. It is to our advantage as a nation that a growing Cuban market should be controlled by American producers.

"The events following the war with Spain and the prospective building of the isthmian canal, render it certain that we must take in the future a far greater interest than hitherto in what happens throughout the West Indies, Central America, and the adjacent coasts and waters. We expect Cuba to treat us on an exceptional footing politically, and we should put her in the same exceptional position economically. The proposed action is in line with the course we have pursued as regards all the islands with which we have been brought into relations of varying intimacy by the Spanish war. Porto Rico and Hawaii have been included within our tariff laws, to their great benefit as well as ours, and without any of the detriment to our interests. The Philippines, which stand in a different relation, have been granted substantial tariff concessions.

"Cuba is an independent republic, but a republic which has assumed certain special obligation as regards her international position in compliance with our request. I ask for her certain special economic concessions to benefit us as well as her.

"On her behalf we waged a war of which the spring was generous indignation against oppression and we have kept faith absolutely. It is earnestly to be hoped that we will complete in the same spirit, the record so well begun, and show in our dealings to Cuba that steady continuity of policy which is essential for our nation to establish in foreign affairs, we desire to play our part as a world-power.

"We are a wealthy and a powerful nation, Cuba is a young republic still weak, who owes to us her independence, whose whole future, whose very life must be dependent on our attitude towards her. I ask that we help her as she struggles upwards along the painful and difficult road of self-governing independence. I ask this aid for her because she is weak, because she needs it, because we have aided. I ask that open-handed help, of a kind which a self-respecting people can accept, be given to Cuba, for the very reason that we have given her such help in the past. Our soldiers fought to give her freedom; and for three years our representatives, civil and military, have toiled unceasingly, facing disease of a peculiarly sinister and fatal type with patience and uncomplaining fortitude, to teach her how to use her freedom aright.

"Never in history, has any alien country been thus administered, with such high integrity of purpose such wise judgment and such a single-handed devotion to the country's interests. 'Now I ask that the Cubans be given all possible chance to use to the best advantage the freedom of which Americans have such right to be proud, and for which so many American lives have been sacrificed.—Theodore Roosevelt, White house, June 13, 1902."

AFTER GEN. WOOD NOW

AN INQUIRY CERTAIN REGARDING CUBAN EXPENDITURES.

Every Item, Some as Unusual as the Conditions Existing, Will Be Dragged Before the Public.

Washington, June 14.—However opinions may differ regarding the effect the disclosures before the Cuban relations committee will have on the reciprocity bill there is but one opinion regarding the sugar trust's policy. It has made stupendous blunders from which it cannot escape. General Wood nas also placed himself and his friends in an embarrassing position. Even before it was known that he had used Cuban funds to conduct a political propaganda he had been severely criticized for some of his expenditures. On account of the delicate task he had to perform in Cuba it was necessary to give General Wood the widest possible latitude. The Cubans were accustomed to the grandeur of Spanish official life. Large sums of money were placed at General Wood's disposal and the government of the United States relied upon his discretion in the expenditure. Some of the items of expenses have already been printed in unfriendly newspapers. They were unusual, but so were the conditions.

Mrs. Jacob Spooner of Kerr's Corners, N. Y., during the absence of her son and husband, went into a corn crib. The door closed with a spring lock, making her a prisoner. When the son and husband returned, late in the evening, they found her frozen to death.

WEEK'S DOINGS IN CONGRESS

Business Transacted by the House and Senate in the National Capital.

SENATE CONSIDERS CANAL

The House Passes the Irrigation Bill—Corliss Pacific Cable Bill Is Defeated—Elkins Wants to Admit Cuba to Statehood.

Washington, June 10.—Senate.—Another of the big supply bills of the government was disposed of by the senate today, the naval bill, carrying more than $78,000,000, being passed. It includes provisions for two first class battleships, two first class armored cruisers and two gunboats, but strikes out the house provision that each one shall be built at government yards. When consideration was resumed of the isthmian canal question, Turner delivered an extended argument in support of the Nicaragua route. He maintained that the new Panama company could not pass a clear title to the Panama Canal Company's rights, franchises and property to the United States, and that if this government purchased it it would be with all incumbrances. Carmack, of Tennessee, offered a resolution directing the committee on civil service and retrenchment to investigate the case of Rebecca J. Taylor, a clerk in the war department, who was discharged for the alleged reason of criticizing the administration's Philippine policy in a communication to the press. The committee was directed to investigate the reasons for his discharge. The resolution went over under the rule.

House.—The house today defeated the bill to transfer certain forest reserves to the agricultural department and to authorize the president to establish game and fish preserves. Its death was accomplished by striking out the enacting clause. The motion was made by Cannon and was carried by 100 to 70. He claimed that the bill would greatly increase the cost of administering forest reserves and declared that the estimated receipts of the next fiscal year already were exceeded by the appropriations up to the present time by over $51,000,000. The house then adopted a special order for the consideration of the Corliss Pacific cable bill, by a vote of 108 to 73, and for the remainder of the afternoon listened to the author of the measure in favor of its passage.

Washington, June 11.—Senate.—Just before adjournment today the senate agreed to vote finally on the Nicaragua canal bill and all pending amendments on June 19, the voting to begin at 2 o'clock. Before consideration of the canal question was resumed today the motion of Wellington, of Maryland, to discharge the committee on privileges and elections from further consideration of the resolution providing for the submission of an amendment to the constitution for the election of senators by the people was defeated, 21 to 35 after a sharp debate. Fairbanks, of Indiana, in a carefully considered speech, favored construction of the isthmian canal by the Panama route. Originally, he said, he had favored the Nicaragua route, but an investigation of the subject, coupled with the determination of the isthmian commission, had induced him to change his mind in favor of the Panama route. His predilections and opinions, founded upon fragmentary and unsatisfactory information, he said, had been entirely in favor of the Nicaragua route, but if weight was to be given to the opinion of our own impartial commissioners, men of experience and capacity, he declared, we must discard the Nicaragua and select the Panama route.

House.—The house today dispatched the Corliss Pacific cable bill by the same method it adopted yesterday in the case of the forest reserve. It struck out the enacting clause of the measure by a vote of 116 to 77, thus giving no opportunity to test the strength of the Dalzell substitute, which authorized the president to contract with a private company for laying of a cable. The speakers today were Shackleford of Missouri, Mann of Illinois, Morrell of Pennsylvania, and Tompkins of Ohio, for the bill, and Richardson of Alabama, Newlands of Nevada, Loud of California, and Cannon of Illinois, against it.

Washington, June 12.—Senate.—After considering the London dock charges bill for an hour and a half today without completing it, the senate resumed consideration of the isthmian canal question. Morgan, of Alabama, occupied the floor for three hours and a half discussing the diplomatic phases of the question. From this point he was diverted by an amendment introduced by Fairbanks, of Indiana, providing for the issue of bonds for the construction of the canal. Morgan vigorously attacked the amendment. Incidentally Morgan again opposed the Panama route and assailed the ability of the new Panama company to dispose of the concession held from the old company. A resolution introduced by Carmack, of Tennessee, directing the committee on civil service and retrenchment to investigate the charge from the war department of Miss Rebecca J. Taylor, a clerk of the department was called up. On motion of Platt, of Connecticut, the resolution was referred to the committee on civil service. The resolution introduced by Culberson, of Texas, directing the secretary of war to send to the senate an itemized statement of the expenditures made from the Cuban funds from the time of the American occupation to May 1 of this year was taken up. Platt of Connecticut explained that the information was being compiled in the war department, and the resolution was sent to the calendar.

House.—The house today adopted a special rule for the consideration of the irrigation bill which passed the senate some time ago, and devoted the day to general debate on the measure. Tomorrow the bill will be read for amendment under the five minute rule. Mondell of Wyoming, Tongue of Oregon, Terrell of Massachusetts, and Shallenbarger of Nebraska, spoke today in favor of the bill. Ray, chairman of the judiciary committee, made a long argument against it. Olmstead of Pennsylvania, enlivened the proceedings with a humorous speech in reply to Cuchman's recent attack on the committee on rules.

Washington, June 13.—Senate.—The vote by which the resolution respecting the discharge of Miss Rebecca J. Taylor from the war department was referred to the committee on civil service and retrenchment at the instance of Platt, of Conneticut, was reconsidered, and the resolution was made subject to the call of Carmack, of Tennessee. A resolution was offered by Mitchell, of Oregon, directing the committee on Pacific islands and Porto Rico to inquire into the general condition of Hawaii, the administration of affairs there, the quality, condition and value of the publis lands in Hawaii; the crown lands and the title of the former queen therein, with power to sit during the recess and by sub-committee to visit the islands if necessary, and to report at the beginning of the next session. Was referred to the committee on Pacific islands.

House.—The house today passed the irrigation bill by a vote of 146 to 55. Many amendments were offered, but only one, except those offered by the committee, was adopted. It was of a minor character. The bill had already passed the senate. The friends of the measure greeted the announcement of its passage with a round of applause. The bill as passed creates a reclamation fund from the sale of public lands in Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Kansas, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah, Washington, and Wyoming, less the amount paid to local land officers and 5 per cent due the state under existing laws for educational purposes, the reclamation fund to be used for the construction and maintenance of irrigation works in the states and territories enumerated. Provision is made for the payment out of the treasury of any deficiencies in the allowances to agricultural colleges, owing to this disposition of the public lands. The secretary of the interior is authorized to examine, survey and construct the irrigation works and report the cost thereof to congress at each session.

Washington, June 14.—Senate.—The Nicaragua canal bill was before the senate for a short time today, Morgan, of Alabama, continuing his speech in support of the measurt and in criticism of the Panama project. The District of Columbia appropriation bill was passed and a large number of private pension bills were disposed of. The day closed with eulogies on the late Representative Stokes, of South Carolina. Elkins, of West Vergina, introduced a joint resolution providing for the annexation of Cuba and its admission as a state, of the Union. The resolution was not referred to a committee, but was, at Elkins' suggestion allowed to lie on the table. The senate agreed to the house amendments to the irrigation bill. This passes the measure and sends the bill to the president.

House.—The feature of the session of the house today was the attempt of Hay, of Virginia, to secure the adoption of a resolution calling upon the secretary of war for information as to the cost from all sources of the war in the Philippines. The resolution had been referred to the committee on insular affairs and not had been acted upon within the time prescribed by the rules because of leged. When Hay called it up Crumpacker, of Indiana, moved to lay it on the table and his motion prevailed by a party vote of 91 to 66. The latter part of the session was devoted to private pension legislation, 100 bills being passed.

PRAY FOR AN INVESTIGATION.

Petition for Commission to Look Into Philippine Conditions.

Washington, June 13.—Representative McCall, of Massachusetts, presented to the house a memorial, signed by Charles Francis Adams, Andrew Carnegie, Carl Schurz, Edwin Burritt Smith and Herbert Welch, asking that a congressional committee of investigation be appointed to go to the Philippines to inquire into and report upon conditions existing there. Mr. Carnegie's signature was authorized by cable. The memorial is dated at Boston, and states that the signers are a committee appointed at the recently held meeting of persons, irrespective of party, in the interest of the policy pursued by the United States toward the Philippines.

A leather wallet, containing $150, which Farmer Densmore of Vestch, N. Y., was about to pay on a mortgage, was accidentally dropped in his barn lot. He had reason to believe that one of his calves made a meal of the wallet and its contents, and he killed and opened the animal. In its stomach he found the wallet and the money, the latter almost a mass of pulp. The fragments of $110 were in a condition to be recognized, and were sent to the United States treasury for redemption.

A well known judge on a Virginia circuit was recently reminded very forcibly of his approaching baldness by one of his rural acquintances. "Jedge," drawled the farmer, "it won't be very long 'fo' you'll hev to tie a string around yer head to tell how fer up to wash yer face."

William Black was once a victim of an amusing typographical error. In one of his books the heroine died of a dose of opium; but the compositor got in his fine work on the passage, and when the novel appeared the first edition stated that she died of "a dose of opinion."

General Horace Porter, the American minister to France, says that when he departed for his post five years ago, his parting words to Mark Twain, as he was about to board the steamer for the other side, were: "Mark, may the Lord be with you." "Yes," the humorist replied, with a slight cough, "and I hope He may occasionally find a leisure moment to pay some attention to you also."

An incident of the ceremonies at the unveiling of the Rochambeau statue in Washington, D. C., last week, went far to prove that the American flag "stay put." When the Countess Rochambeau pulled the halyard which caused the flags draping the statue to drop, every vestige of the covering fell but one corner of the American flag, which persistently clung to a part of the work surrounding the statue. "The flag stays put," remarked Secretary Hay to the president. The President, remembering his words, smiled broadly. The French flag readily gave way the moment the rope was pulled, and there were a number of spectators who were inclined to take the incident as an omen.

INSIST ON GETTING IT.

Some grocers say they don't keep Defiance Starch. This is because they have a stock on hand of other brands containing only 12 oz. in a package, which they won't be able to sell first, because Defiance contains 16 oz. for the same money. Do you want 16 oz. instead of 12 oz. for same money? Then buy Defiance Starch. Requires no cooking.

10,225 BOERS CURRENDER.

All Bitterness Seems to Have Been Wiped Out.

Pretoria, June 13.—In all 10,225 Boers have surrendered up to date. Many are youngsters of 11 years and upwards. The majority of them are under 30, though some of the Burghers who have surrendered are septugenarians. Reports from all the districts say that the Burghers are increasingly friendly. The only bitterness observable among the leading Boers here is against France and Germany. They declare the war was protracted unnecessarily owing to hopes held out by the French and German press. Some of the Boers are so incensed that they have expressed the hope that some day they will get on the side of Britain against one of these powers. The anticipated friction between the surrendered Boers and their former comrades of the national scouts has not materialized to any extent.

General DeWet says the youngsters were his best fighters and frequently held positions after the older Burghers had cleared out.

The Boers of the Orange River co[lony] are handing in only a small p[er]centage of their ammunition. Th[ey] explain that they used most of it hun[ting] game since the peace agreeme[nt] was signed.

Addressing the surrendered Boers at Kronstadt, Orange River colony, General Elliott said the only wish of King Edward, the government and the British people was to help the Burghers and get them back to their farms as soon as possible. The king, the general added, had telegraphed congratulations to the Burghers on the good stand they had made. This announcement was greeted with lusty cheers for the king and for Lord Kitchener.

STATE OF CUBA PROPOSED

ELKINS OFFERS RESOLUTION FOR ADMISSION OF ISLAND.

Constitution of the Proposed State to be Submitted to Congress Before January 1st, 1904.

Washington, June 16.—Senator Elkins introduced a joint resolution in the senate providing for the annexation of Cuba and for its admission as a state of the Union. The resolution grants the consent of congress to the erection of the republic of Cuba as a state of the Union, to be called the state of Cuba, with a republican form of government. A condition is specified that the constitution of the proposed state shall be submitted to congress not later than Jan. 1, 1904. There is also a provision that the debts of Cuba shall not become a charge on the general government. There is also an alternative provision, which gives the president power to proceed in a more direct way for Cuba's admission as a state. The provision permits the the admission under the terms of the resolution itself, "instead of proceeding to submit the resolution to Cuba as an overture on the part of the United States."

If this latter course is to be pursued, a state is to be formed "out of the present republic of Cuba, with a republican form of government and with representatives in congress, and to be admitted into the Union by this act on an equal footing with the existing states as soon as the terms and conditions of such admission shall be agreed upon by the governments of the republic of Cuba and the United States."

The resolution provides for the appropriation of $100,000 to carry its provisions into effect.

Senator Elkins, speaking of the resolution introduced for the annexation of Cuba, said that Texas was admitted under precisely the same terms as this resolution provided for Cuba. He said he preferred the admission of Cuba in preference to granting $6,000,000 a year on her account out of the revenues, without knowing where it would go. By providing for the admission of Cuba, there would be no more differences in the republican party on the subject of tariff relations with the island.

MILLIONAIRE AND KING MEET.

Morgan Takes up Half an Hour of Edward's Time.

London, June 13.—A crowd of several hundred persons, including a number of American sight-seers, had gathered outside the house of the American embassador, Joseph H. Choate, on Carlton House terrace, when King Edward and Queen Alexandra arrived there at 8:45 p. m. to attend the dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Choate.

Among those present at the dinner besides the king and queen were Princess Victoria, the Duke of Norfolk, Duke and Duchess of Portland, Lord Rosebery, Earl and Countess of Pembrouse, Earl and Countess Spencer, Sir William and Lady Vernon Harcourt, A. J. Balfour, first lord of the treasury, and Miss Balfour; The Earl of Derby, Lady Alice Stanley, the Russian embassador, Baron de Stahl; J. Pierpont Morgan, Whitelaw and Mrs. Reid and Mrs. W. S. Cowles, sister of President Roosevelt.

Mr. Choate walked over to J. P. Morgan and brought him up to King Edward, and for the next half hour the American millionaire and the king talked earnestly together. Lord Lansdown, Mr. Choate, Lord Rosebery and others equally known to fame respectfully sat aloof while the master of empire and the master of millions thrashed out their respective ideas. After supper was over their majesties chatted with various guests. Escorted by the entire embassy and followed by all Mrs. Choate's guests, King Edward and Queen Alexandra then went out and entered the royal carriage, after a night which foreign diplomats characterize as the greatest triumph ever won for American prestige in England.

"Uncle Williams, are you troubled about the hereafter?" "No, suh; it's de wharfo' er de herein what keeps me guessin'!"

Breed, Wis., Dec. 10th.—Charles F. Peterson of this place, Justice of the Peace for Oconto County, tells the following story:

"For years I had an aching pain in my back which troubled me very much especially in the morning.

"I was almost unable to straighten my back and the pain was unbearable.

"I did not know what it was, but seeing an advertisement of Dodd's Kidney Pills I concluded to try a box.

"I can only say that that one box alone has done me more good than anything else ever did.

"I feel as well now as ever I was.

"I have recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills to several others, who are using them with good results."

HEALTH AND ALL ITS BLESSINGS

Health will come with all its blessings to those who know the way, and it is mainly a question of right-living, with all the term implies, but the efforts which strengthen the system, the games which refresh and the foods which nourish are important, each in a way, while it is also advantageous to have knowledge of the best methods of promoting freedom from unsanitary conditions. To assist nature, when nature needs assistance, it is all important that the medicinal agents used should be of the best quality and of known value, and the one remedy which acts most beneficially and pleasantly, as a laxative, is—Syrup of Figs—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co.

With a proper understanding of the fact that many physical ills are of a transient character and yield promptly to the gentle action of Syrup of Figs, gladness and comfort come to the heart, and if one would remove the torpor and strain and congestion attendant upon a constipated condition of the system, take Syrup of Figs and enjoy freedom from the aches and pains, the colds and headaches and the depression due to inactivity of the bowels. In case of any organic trouble it is well to consult a competent physician, but when a laxative is required remember that the most permanently gratifying results will follow personal cooperation with the beneficial effects of Syrup of Figs. It is for sale by all reliable druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

The excellence of Syrup of Figs comes from the beneficial effects of the plants used in the combination and also from the method of manufacture which ensures that perfect purity and uniformity of product essential in a perfect family laxative. All the members of the family from the youngest to the most advanced in years may use it whenever a laxative is needed and share alike in its beneficial effects. We do not claim that Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of known value, but it possesses this great advantage over all other laxatives that it acts gently and pleasantly without disturbing natural functions, in any way, as it is free from every objectionable quality or substance. To get its beneficial effects it is always necessary to buy the genuine and the full name of the Co.—California Fig Syrup Co.—is printed on the front of every package.

Irrigation Bill Is Defeated
Cuba to Admit Cuba to State

[illegible] ston, June 10.—Senate.—All the big supply bills of the [illegible]nt was disposed of by the [illegible]day, the naval bill, carrying [illegible]n $78,000,000, being passed. [illegible]ludes provisions for two first [illegible] battleships, two first class armored cruisers and two gunboats, but strikes out the house provision that each one shall be built at government yards. When consideration was resumed of the isthmian canal question, Turner delivered an extended argument in support of the Nicaragua [illegible] last Friday [illegible] could not [illegible] church, and a large audience listened to a program which was instructive and entertaining.

The first number was an overture by the band, this being followed by a chorus. Both were well delivered.

"The Quaker Poet" by Miss Emma Krunkelfeld was the next and Miss Krunkelfeld delivered it in a pleasing manner. B. N. Kaste then sang a fine solo and received hearty applause.

The recitation, "The Lay of De-Courcy" was given in an admirable manner by Miss Anna C. Gibbs. and this selection received merited applause. Miss Ella Arnold and Mrs. Gibbs then favored the audience with an instrumental duet.

Miss Amelia M. Lenz held the attention of every one of her hearers with a very fine oration on the subject "The Choice of a Profession," which subject the speaker handled in a very able manner.

Miss Clarice Gibbs sang a very pretty solo. J. J. Suckow gave an appropriate address, followed by an instrumental solo by Miss Blanche Peitzke. Then followed an able address by Rev. E. A. Phelps.

Prof. F. S. Grawe presented the class of 1902 with their well-earned diplomas, at the same time delivering a fitting address to the audience and class.

The exercises were a grand success and each number much enjoyed by the hearers. The instructors, the members of the school board and the scholars, deserve much credit for the good work that has been accomplished during the school year.

Virulent Cancer Cured

Startling proof of a wonderful advance in medicine is given by druggist G. W. Roberts of Elizabeth, W. Va. An old man there had long suffered with what good doctors pronounced incurable cancer. They believed his case hopeless till he used Electric Bitters and applied Bucklen's Arnica Salve, which treatment completely cured him. When Electric Bitters are used to expel billious, kidney and microbe poisons at the same time this salve exerts its matchless healing power, blood diseases, skin eruptions, ulcers and sores vanish. Bitters 50c, Salve 25c, at Harr's.

Pianos at a Great Reduction.

Chicago's leading music house, Lyon & Healy, has just bought for a fraction of their usual cost, the surplus stock of several Eastern piano manufacturers. These splendid pianos will be offered with out reserve until all are sold. Also they offer a wareroom full of slightly-used and second-hand pianos, including insturments of the following well-known makes: Sterling Huntington, Chase, Vose, Fischer, Weber, Chickering, Steinway, Knabe, Hardman, Kurtzman, New England, etc. In square pianos there are fine toned instruments of all the leading makes at $25, 40, 60 and upwards. In Upright pianos neat instruments at $100, 120, 140, 150, 165, 190, 200 and upwards. In Parlor and Concert Grands some nice specimens at $250, and upwards. Nearly all these pianos were intended to sell for much more than these sale prices. This is an opportunity that will not occur again. Immediate attention is therefore necessary. Lyon & Healy will send a list and full particulars upon application. Any piano not proving entirely satisfactory may be returned at their expense. Address simply, Lyon & Healy, Chicago. Distance is no obstacle in taking advantage of this remarkable chance to obtain a piano, for, in proportion to the saving to be made, the freight charges are insignificant. Write today.

HOW THEY DISAPPEAR.

Many Immigrants Annually Escape Vigilance of Uncle Sam.

The story of the disappearance of Isidoro Termini, an aged Italian immigrant, at the barge office, which came to light a few days ago, calls attention to a curious phase of immigrant affairs, says the New York Evening Post. Every year from one too two dozen steerage passengers in the custody of the United States authorities disappear some time between the date of their arrival at the steamship docks and what should be the date of their departure. A considerable number also drop out of sight at the docks while still in the charge of the steamship company. When this occurs the transportation company must locate the missing passenger or pay a fine of $1,000. The case of Termini is peculiar only in the fact that there is some mystery attached to it. In the majority of instances the immigrant merely takes French leave in order to escape the tedium of waiting for his vouchers or the uncertainty of an appearance before the board of inquiry.

A great many have every reason for dodging out of sight as soon as the steamer touches land, and it is curious that so few attempt to escape. America opens up a vast field of promise to the average immigrant. When he finds himself exposed to the rigors of a strict medical examination, a search into his past records and his pecuniary affairs, terror seizes him. He finds himself a quasi-prisoner under about as strict guard as may be maintained without military or police discipline His mind travels fast to the conclusion that there is danger of his being turned back. Fear quickens his wits, and he sets to work to devise means for getting away; and getting away is ridiculously easy, partly on account of inadequate accommodations, and partly because he cannot be kept a very strict prisoner.

Curiously enough, it is not the healthy young men and boys who elude the officers, but more often old people, men, women and children. The young and robust immigrants usually pass inspection, and, consequently there is no reason for them to escape.

The hospital is on Ellis island, and offers good opportunities for making off, because the discipline has to be more lax there. When a soldier deserts, he does so at the risk of his life; but when an immigrant once gets away, he can snap his fingers at authority. Attempts are always made to locate them and to bulldoze them into coming back for examination, but there is actually no penalty which can be enforced for smuggling one's self into the country. Not in one case in a hundred is any report or inquiry made by relatives or friends of an immigrant who slips through the barge office. Detectives from the barge office who try to locate the runaways are usually told that they have not been seen, and that their relatives are in mourning. Italians show most skill, perhaps, in smuggling themselves ashore.

Will Soon Have Several ... mies.

Arrangements have just been completed whereby the National museum will come into possession of several Peruvian mummies. They were collected by Mr. George Kiefer during his travels in Peru some 15 years ago for the purpose of gathering a collection of Inca antiquities. One of the packages contains two or three specimens. Through a seam in the wrappings some well-preserved cocoa leaves and cotton have been extracted. This bundle of dried humanity was exhumed from a mound on the plantation of Candiville, midway between Lima and Chancay railroad. It is believed that the bodies have been buried nearly 400 years—certainly before the conquest of Peru, for since that time all burials have been required to be in accordance with the ritual of the Roman Catholic church. The preservation of the clothing, robes, etc., is understood to be due to the character of the soil, which is rich in nitrates. Another specimen when exhumed, was found to have had two gourds, one on its breast and one lying at its side, and some domestic implements buried with it, such as tools for weaving. Dried beans were also found, and a third gourd rested on the lower part of the body. This specimen is provided with artificial eyes, believed to be composed of the crystalline lenses of the eyes of the cuttle fish. Yet another one is wrapped in a robe of guanaco, with a bright colored border, and a woven headdress of cotton. These specimens will be placed in the care of Mr. William H. Holmes, the curator of the anthropological department, who is much pleased at the thought of acquiring these interesting additions to the mummy collection.—Washington Star.

HE WENT MAD.

Fate of the Man Who Did Not Appreciate His Wife

"Beautiful scenery here, is it not?" asked the young man of a solitary traveler whom he found pacing along the sea shore.

"Well, no," replied the stranger. "I can't agree with you. I think the ocean is too small. It is no such ocean as my mother used to have."

"Your mother's ocean was superior, then?"

"Oh, yes, vastly superior. What tumbling breakers! What a magnificent sweep of view! What amplitude of distance! What fishing there was in my mother's ocean!"

"But the sky is magnificent here, is it not, sir?"

"Too low and too narrow across the top," replied the stranger.

"I haven't noticed it," said the young man.

"Yes," said the stranger; "it is too low, and there isn't air enough in it, either. Besides, it doesn't sit plumb over the earth; it is wider from north to south than it is from west to east. I call it a pretty poor sky. It is no such sky as my mother used to have."

"Pardon me, but did your mother have a special sky and ocean of her own?"

But here an old resident came up and drew the young man aside.

"Don't talk to him," said the old resident. "He is a hopeless lunatic. He is a man who always used to tell his wife about 'the biscuits my mother used to make,' 'my mother's pies,' 'my mother's puddings,' and 'my mother's coffee.' The habit grew on him so much that he became a confirmed bore."—London Tit-Bits.

ABOUT NEW CABINET OFFICE.

Chairman Hepburn and Sub-Committee Confer With President.

Washington, June 16.—Representative Hepburn, chairman of the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce, together with the members of the sub-committee appointed to confer with the president in regard to the new department of commerce bill, now before the committee, conferred with the president Saturday on that subject. The president told them that he had not given the matter sufficient attention to warrant him expressing any opinion at to what bureaus should be included in the new department, and it was decided that he should recommend to the several cabinet officers the selection by them of someone in each department competent to confer with the committee as to what bureaus should be detached from the several departments and included in the new department.

After the conference Mr. Hepburn stated that there would not be time for this contemplated action at the present session of congress and it was practically settled that the measure would go over until the next session.

DEWEY ORDERED OUT AGAIN.

Will Actively Command the Greatest Fleet Uncle Sam Ever Owned.

Washington, June 16. — Admiral Dewey will go to sea again, flying his flag with the four stars in command of the greatest fleet in numbers the United States has gotten together since the days of the civil war, and far more powerful in offense and defense than any of these war fleets. Secretary Moody has conceived the idea and after consulting the pleasure of Admiral Dewey, it has been arranged that he shall be placed in supreme command of the fleet (comprising the North Atlantic, the European, and the South Atlantic Spuadrons), which is to assemble near the Culebra Island in the West Indies next December for the winter maneuvers. Secretary Moody himself desires to witness these maneuvers and it is even possible that the president may find time to make a voyage to the south to see the big ironclads in war movements.

ISSUE WILL BE PRESSED

SUPPORTERS OF RECIPROCITY WILL NOT BROOK DELAY.

Republican Members of Committee on Cuban Reciprocity Will Present a Bill.

Washington, June 16.—The present plans of the senatorial supporters of of the Cuban reciprocity are to press the question to an issue this week. This was the result of the confenence held Saturday.

According to the program as now arranged, the republican members on the committee on Cuban relations will meet and finally agree upon the exact terms of the bill to be reported as a substitute for the house bill. The measure thus agreed upon will be reported to a republican caucus, and if the caucus endorses the measure, it then will be brought before a meeting of the full committee on Cuban relations and reported to the senate. The desire is to have all this done by the time the isthmian canal bill is disposed of on Thursday, so that the reciprocity bill may be given the first place in the order of business. The reciprocity advocates still profess the utmost confidence in their ability to pass through the senate any bill that may be recommended by the committee and caucus. They count mainly upon the unwillingness of republicans to allign themselves strictly with the opposition against a bill that has been made a party measure by the president's message, and there are indications that in at least some instances this prognostication will prove sound.

The critical point will come up on the acceptance of the house bill with its amendment for the removal of the differential duty on refined sugar. The beet sugar republicans are all protectionists, and there has been from the beginning a division as to the expediency of adopting a policy looking to the abolition of this duty. The opposition found evidence in the beet sugar caucus Thursday, but the decision to stand by the house bill unamended was secured largely upon the understanding that such a course would inevitably result in the defeat of all legislation. Recent developments lead to the conclusion that if any considerable number of republicans should adhere to the determination to vote with the democrats to support the house bill, it would pass the senate.

There would then be no chance for a conference, and the bill would go to the president, who, it is expected, would attach his signature, and thus make a law of the bill with the Morris amendment included. This provision would, of course, effect the beet sugar interests equally with the trust, in proportion to the extent of their refining industry, and is not desired. The beet sugar refiners say that they would lose about $50,000 annually, while the cane sugar refiners would lose $6,000,000, but they argue that the cane sugar refiners would still have an advantage in the reduction on Cuban raw sugar. They also hesitate to violate the principles of protection. None of the beet sugar republicans has gone so far as to announce his non-adherence to Thursday's argument, but their discussion of the phase of the question has given hope to the reciprocity advocates and lends color to their claim that in the end they will secure the republican vote sufficiently large for their purposes.

THE NEWS IN IOWA.

The body of Frank Robinson, of Nevada, who shot his sweetheart and his accepted rival at Kansas City a few days ago, is disowned by his father and will be buried in the potter's field.

Connie Genseir, residing with his brother in Dubuque, drank carbolic acid and died shortly after in terrible agony. No cause is known for the act, as he was in prosperous circumstances. His age was 24.

The canvas of the Harris Nickel Plate railway show was torn from its moorings by high winds at Sigourney a few days ago and between fifty and sixty persons were injured in the rush to get from under the falling tent. People were knocked down and trampled upon and about 700 men, women and children were left bruised and shaken up in the pouring rain. The screams and groans by the frightened and injured were distressing to hear. Several were half smothered in the folds of the canvas. Miss Clara Campbell was hurt about the back and may not recover. Samuel Utterback was seriously hurt in the head. The injuries of the others were slight. The tent was crowded at the time of the accident.

Pell, of Drake University, admitted before the intercollegiate games committee that he had run in an open race in Perry, in 1898. Under the admission the committee was forced to declare him not an amateur and not entitled to participate in the track events of the college association. The vote was 4 to 1, Drake's representative voting with him despite his admission. Young, of Grinnell, was sustained by a vote of 3 to 2. He was charged with having participated in open contests in Angus, Perry and Carroll in 1898. The charges were not sustained by sufficient evidence to warrant his conviction. He retains his position as an amateur. Throwing Pell out does not change the result of the recent intercollegiate field meet in any way, although it reduces Drake's points and increases those of other colleges. But the order remains the same, and Drake is still the winner by long odds.

One of the worst storms experienced for years struck Dubuque a few days ago. The wind blew with frightful velocity and rain came in torrents. Several plate glass fronts were blown in, trees, fences and outhouses were prostrated and crops were washed out. A man named Donahue was struck by lightning and taken to the hospital. Physicians say he will die. At Maquoketa, a few miles south of Dubuque, the steamer Ravenna was caught in a cyclone and overturned, and now lies bottomside up in the river. The crew consisted of about twenty-one men. The captain, clerk and two other men were drowned, the balance of the crew being rescued by the steamer Teal as they were clinging to the bottom of the boat. The Teal had great difficulty in reaching the wrecked boat, owing to the frightful wind.

A suit involving the validity of the title of Waterloo to Lincoln park land worth fully $75,000, was settled a few days ago for $1,000. The park formed a portion of the estate of B. M. Cooley, who died nearly forty years ago. A year ago J. L. Cooley, for the heirs, discovered the property had not been legally transferred to the city, and though the municipality had been in undisputed possession of the grounds all these years, he brought suit to recover it into the estate. In investigating the case many surprising discoveries were made of the slipshod manner of doing business by the early day courts. The records show that the park property was once offered for tax sale as part of the Cooley estate, but the sale was postponed for ninety days. But there the record ends. It was also found that executors of the estate had never been discharged although appointed in 1862. They are J. H. Leavitt and J. L. Cooley. Both are living in Waterloo and were formally discharged on the day of settlement. The living heirs of Cooley signed a quit claim deed to the city and a legal decree is made recognizing the transfers.

The class of 1902, Washington High school, were caught in a fearful wind and rain storm while on their way home from a picnic at Coppock. One of the carriage loads sought refuge in a new brick school house at Eureka. Before they could force an entrance the school house blew down, burying seven girls and two boys under tons of brick and mortar. Eight of the party were pinned down so that they were helpless. The ninth, A. H. Harmeier, though badly bruised, managed to get out of the wreckage and crawl to a neighboring farmhouse and summon aid, but it was more than an hour before all the victims were released. Eight physicians dressed the wounds of the most seriously injured. Two are severely hurt, and may die. The list of the injured is as follows: Mildred McAtlin, face cut and bruised; internal injuries. Her condition is considered critical. Charley Chance, right collarbone broken, right elbow dislocated, bruised about the head, with contusion of brain; may die. Blanche Stewart, head cut, right shoulder dislocated; serious. Myrtle Shields, cut and bruised. Jessie Klein, back and right thigh injured; serious. Mary B. Jarrard, back injured and right ankle sprained; serious. Gertie Reeves, stunned and slightly bruised. Myrtle Stewart, bruised.

Captain Bronson, one of the owners of the Ravenna, sunk in a recent storm, arrived at Dubuque a few days ago and will at once proceed to raise the boat. Divers are at work to recover the bodies imprisoned under the boat. There is about $1,000 in the safe, and to right the boat and put her in repair will cost $3,000 more. The storm was most severe at Ashbury, three miles west of Dubuque. Barns, windmills and fences were swept away, and several people were injured, but only one is thought to be fatally hurt.

Albert Hefley, a driver employed by the White Line Transfer company at Des Moines, was stabbed, probably fatally, at his home, two blocks west of the Greenwood park street car station, by Robert Morris, a cook. Morris disappeared after the stabbing and has not been apprehended. Hefley, who was cut in both arms and in the breast, is very low. Dr. Linn expressed the opinion that he has about one chance in twenty-five to live. The trouble between the two men arose over a third party, Samuel Wellington, who had trouble with Morris earlier in the evening concerning a girl. Morris went to Hefley's home to find Wellington, and the fatal quarrel followed Hefley's order to Morris to leave the premises.

In a desperate fight in a hovel on the Missouri river bank at Sioux City, Calvin R. Anderson, generally known as Sandy Anderson, shot and killed Andrew Lovgren. The shooting occurred in Anderson's hut. Anderson had been fighting with an old man in the neighborhood, and Lovgren interfered. Lovgren followed Anderson into his house and commenced the fighting. Anderson got hold of a revolver and shot Lovgren through the heart. Anderson is an old soldier, having served in the Eighth Iowa infantry regiment in the civil war. He has been a ragpicker for eighteen years and is known to almost every one in the city. Lovgren is a young man who worked in the Omaha railroad shops.

Edward Chapman, one of the old time farmers of West Des Moines township, Mahaska county, was instantly killed a few days ago about three-fourths of a mile east of Lakonta. He was walking along the right of way of the Northwestern, which runs through his place, and when half way across a bridge that spans a tributary of Bluff creek he was met by a coal train. No one but the fireman saw Mr. Chapman, and before the train could be stopped it had gone 100 rods past the bridge. The trainmen went back at once and found the lifeless remains of the old gentleman half buried in the bed of the creek. When seen by the fireman he was standing on the outer edge of the ties. A younger man might have climbed down to one of the cross timbers and have saved his life. Mr. Chapman, however, was feeble, and a little hard of hearing, and it is supposed became so frightened when he saw the approaching danger that he could not move. The cylinder of the engine struck him on the right side, breaking his arm in three places and crushing his ribs into the abdomen. He was knocked about forty feet horizontally, and fell twenty-eight feet. Death was instantaneous, as either the injuries or the fall would have been sufficient to kill him. After viewing the scene and canvassing the situation it was decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

The fifty-first anniversary of Iowa college, at Grinnell, was celebrated from June 6 to 12. A class of over fifty graduated; two candidates were made Masters of Art, and two, Doctors of Divinity. Many alumni were present and great enthusiasm prevailed. Among distinguished guests were Professor J. Irving Manatt, of Brown University; Dean Tufts, of the University of Chicago; Bishop Morrison, and Professor Josiah Royce, of Harvard Uuniversity. Professor Royce gave a magnificent address upon "Certain Limitations of the Thoughtful Public in America." It was keenly critical of the ineffective idealism of American life, but genuinely sympathetic and optimistic. Two fine concerts were given by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, the Grinnell Oratorio society, and such noted soloists as Mrs. Furbeck, Holmes Cowper and Miss Buckley. The senior class presented "A Midsummer Night's Dream," with special excellence of stage effect, in the new Colonial theater, of which Grinnell people are justly proud. The chief special events of the occasion were the inauguration of Professor J. H. T. Main to the newly established office of dean, and of Rev. Dan F. Bradley, D. D., to the presidency. All friends of the college are rejoicing in the new administration and are full of hope for the immediate rapid progress of the institution. Steps toward a great enlargement of the endowment are being taken. Several gifts of importance were announced, among them a new pipe organ for the chapel to cost over $2,000. It is thought by many that the famous Andover Theological Seminary, of Massachusetts, will accept the invitation to move to Grinnell. Such an event would be of great significance in the educational history of the state. The prospects for the new year, which begins September 17, are very bright.

JUDGE HUBBARD IS DEAD

RECEIVES FATAL INJURIES IN A RUNAWAY ACCIDENT.

Well Known Throughout the State as Politician—Accident Occurred While Driving Out to His Farm.

Cedar Rapids, June 13.—Judge N. M. Hubbard died at his home in this city yesterday as a result of injuries received in a runaway early this week.

Judge Hubbard was injured at the Coldstream farm near Cedar Rapids. He was driving a team attached to a wagon with dump boards on, and as the wagon rattled, the team started suddenly and ran away. The sudden jerk of the wagon precipitated Judge Hubbard to the ground, where one of the hind wheels of the wagon passed over him, breaking four ribs and otherwise badly bruising him. Manager Nye of the Coldstream farm was riding in a buggy behind the wagon and the judge was carried into the farm house near by and was cared for through the night. The next morning the city ambulance was sent to the country and he was removed to his home in this city. His injuries, although of a serious nature, were not considered likely to prove fatal up to yesterday morning.

Judge Hubbard was considered to be one of the most influential politicians in the state and for years was considered the dictator. He has generally been credited with having brought Governor Shaw to the front as a gubernatorial candidate and to have brought about much of his future preferment.

He was one of the early settlers of this city and had achieved considerable wealth and great distinction as an attorney. For years he has been chief counsel for the Northwestern railway in Iowa. He achieved distinction in the civil war as an officer and could have held some of the highest offices in the state had he desired to enter public life.

Nathaniel Mead Hubbard was born in Oswego, N. Y., September 24, 1829, the son of a Methodist minister and farmer of New England ancestry. He graduated from the law school at Alfred, New York, in 1853, and located at Marion, Iowa, in 1854. He continued in the practice of law until the breaking out of the civil war. He entered the service as captain of Co. F., of the 20th Iowa Volunteers.

He served faithfully and was made a provo marshal and later was advanced to judge advocate of the Army of the Frontier on the staff of Gen. Herron. He was transferred to the 13th Army Corps and resigned from the army in 1865 but was breveted major two years later.

Judge Hubbard was a member of the Loyal Legion and was president of the Society of the Army of the Frontier. He was made a district judge in November 1864, and served one year, but left the bench to go into the service of the C. & N. W. railroads, moving to Cedar Rapids in 1870.

He was prominent in many of the most important railroad litigations that company ever had, and was also engaged in many corporation and private hearings, being considered one of the ablest lawyers in the west. He was also active in many of the state political campaigns.

Judge Hubbard twice was married, and leaves two daughters, Jennie and Fanny by his first wife, and one son, Nathaniel M. Jr., by the second. His first wife died in 1857 and he married the second two years later.

The lifeless body of Ed Hale, the murderer of Miss Zoe Donahue at Cantril on Decoration day, was found hanging from the iron lattice work of his cell at Keosauqua. Hale had suicided by making a rope out of the bed clothing and hanging himself to the side of the cell. Hale was a young farm hand who had lately come to Van Buren county and had become infatuated with Miss Donahue, the daughter of his employer. The shooting occurred on the streets of Cantril, in the presence of a number of persons.

An important decision on the taxing laws of the state was given by Judge Franklin C. Platt at Waterloo. The decision was brought out by an effort to collect taxes on moneys and credits omitted from assessment in 1906. The tax ferrets who have been working in Black Hawk county uncovered $22,035 in the estate of Calib Jewett which was not listed that year. The back taxes on this sum with interest to the total amount of $7,345 was certified up to the county treasurer last April and notice served on the executors of the will of Jewett for its collection. The executors took an appeal to the district court, and in his ruling Judge Platt holds that the present taxation laws will not permit of the collection of the sum because more than five years have elapsed since the property was omitted from the assessment rolls. The judge enters into a thorough discussion of the subject, and upholds his decision with liberal quotations from the code. In closing his decision Judge Platt says whether these views are in harmony with one's personal opinion as to what the law ought to be is immaterial. The question is, what is the proper construction to place on the laws above referred to. The court is of the opinion that upon considerations of public policy the legislature intended to limit the collection of omitted taxes to the period of five years, after the date on which the assessment should have been made. It may be added that in the opinion of the court this assessment could not be sustained on the ground that it was made by the auditor instead of the treasurer, but owing to the importance of the questions involved the opinion goes to the merits of the case as well as to the technical point referred to.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, June 16, 1902.

M. A. Raney, of Marengo, is encouraged in his belief that President Roosevelt will visit Des Moines during the meeting of the Sovereign Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., September 15 to 20. Many organizations have figured on the presence of the president, but the date set by the Odd Fellows apparently best fits the president's personal plans relating to a western trip. George B. Cortelyou, secretary to the president, says he thinks the itinerary will embrace arrival in Des Moines between the dates named.

The detectives have thoroughly investigated the case of Pat Carter, a negro arrested at Albia, suspected of having some connection with the Peterson murder, and announced that there is nothing whatever against him in that connection. Carter, it appears, is a preacher, who at the time of the murder was in Minnesota. He came to Des Moines shortly after the murder and remained here three weeks. All that he learned concerning the murder, he learned while here, during the three weeks he was in the city after the murder. The man, it is thought, is crazy.

The penny savings system which was inaugurated October 29th, last year, has proven a good thing for the pupils of the public schools and other children. The state savings bank made a report of the standing June 7, which shows that $6,386.80 had been deposited, of which $4,935.15 was from sales of penny savings stamps, and $1,571.75 was cash. Amount withdrawn $1,120.10. There were 1,343 depositors. The table of schools in which the system has been introduced and the amounts reported are:

Irving, $342.65; Crocker, $577.42; Lincoln, $461.87; Washington, $226.90; Grant, $300.78; Hawthorne, $399.85; Franklin, $220.04; Bird, $411.67; Oakland, $328.62; Summit, $176.69; Elmwood, $234.63; Cooper, $185.88; Forest Home, $192.13; Garfield, $337.58; Howe, $184.26; North High, $93.21; Lake Park, $129.58; Kirkwood, $115.83; Greenwood, $116.01; Total, $4,935.15.

John F. Carter, the ex-policeman, found guilty recently in the district court on the charge of extorting $4 in money from Edith Carlson, a roomer at the Goldstone hotel, was fined $200 and costs by Judge Church of Jefferson, who tried the case, in the district court. Incidentally Judge Church read Carter a lecture he will not soon forget, concerning the serious nature of his offense. The judge called attention to the fact that when Carter committed the offense he was a peace officer and entrusted with the duty of maintaining the law. His offense for this reason was the more serious.

The Rock Island fee of $15,000 for filing the amendments to its articles of incorporation with the secretary of state was the largest yet received. Under the old law it would have cost the company but $2,000. This law relative to the cost of filing articles of incorporation with the secretary of state has been a matter of rapid growth. Eight years ago it would have cost the Rock Island but $3.50 to file its articles increasing its capital stock to $15,000,000. That is all it cost any corporation. Under the present law the Burlington, if it filed its articles of incorporation as it did about a year ago, would have to pay $100,000 for the privilege; then it paid but $2,000. It is believed that the law will result in a considerable addition to the income of the state. Another source of income which is constantly growing is the collateral inheritance tax. The receipts of the past year will show $10,000 over the receipts for the average of each of the two years of the last biennial period. These incomes, coupled with insurance taxes and fees, and other fees, would be missed from the state revenue if they were lopped off. Their constant growth leads students of economics to believe that the time is not far distant when all the state expenses will be paid by corporation taxes, instead of general taxation. For instance, the railroad tax alone would be about a third of the whole of the state expenditures, if paid into the state instead of local treasuries.

The board of control has announced the reappointment of Superintendent T. F. McCune of the hospital for the blind at Vinton. His new term will begin July 1.

The board of control of state institutions announces the appointment of Dr. W. P. Crumpacker of Athens, Ohio, as the successor to Dr. G. H. Hill in the office of superintendent of the state hospital at Independence. Dr. Crumpacker will assume charge of the institution July 1. Dr. Hill's resignation was communicated to the board of control several months ago. He announced at that time his intention of coming to Des Moines and establishing himself in practice here as a specialist in the treatment of nervous diseases.

CHAPTER V.

The Game Grows Warmer.

Out of the frying pan into the fire. Charlie had just taken leave of the professor's wife, and had not made two turns from the little parlor ere he ran directly up against the enemy.

There stood the professor, glaring at him like a wild beast.

"Will you again deny the truth, villain?" he said, endeavoring to calm himself lest he lose his voice.

Charlie surveyed him with amusement.

"Yes; this time, I confess, it was your charming wife whom I have just left. Do you know that two women, your wife and her cousin, Hildegarde, have played a very neat little game upon you?"

"What? She and Hildegarde—upon me? Pray, with what object?"

"To arouse your jealousy; to make you realize how dear to your heart this same wife is; to take you out of your musty books and induce you to devote a fair part of your time to the woman who has given up her life to you."

The professor seemed stunned. "Man, can this be true?" he gasped.

"As heaven itself. She is in yonder. Go and learn for yourself. You will receive a warm welcome. Forgive as you wish to be forgiven, professor."

"Sir, a thousand pardons. I shall take your kind advice. Our duel, then, is off. Oh, what an ass I have been!"

And Charlie quite agreed with him.

"So ends the scene in the drama. Now for another which may not have quite so pleasant a finis," muttered Stuart. Again he bore down upon the functionary who kept watch and ward over the books. When he had cornered the clerk he made his request known, and a messenger was sent to find the countess and request her presence in a nearby bijou parlor.

Minutes passed. Still no one came to summon him.

Tired of waiting he walked directly to the door of the little parlor and stepped inside.

Involuntarily a groan welled up from his heart. He had entered this room to meet the countess, that charmer of men, who played with ambassadors and princes as though they were pawns upon a chessboard, and now he had found—Arline Brand!

There she stood before him, more beautiful than even his ardent recollection had painted her, a smile of welcome dimpling her cheeks, the azure eyes glowing with pleasure.

Yes, it was Arline Brand.

Ye gods! if she and the countess were indeed one, he could readly comprehend how men were ready to give up honor and fortune for the hope of her love and favor.

Almost a minute they stood thus, each evidently busy with a train of thought.

Arline was the first to recover.

She dropped the curtains and advanced toward him. "Ah! you have come, Mr. Stuart," she said.

He took her hand and pressed it. Boldness was returning it seemed.

"Yes, I promised, you know; and, though I daresay I have legions of faults, at least my word is as good as my bond. Pray, be seated," offering her a chair.

He was quite himself now, and that meant a wide-awake, ingenious young man, ready to meet and wrestle with difficulties as they arose.

Just opposite to her he sat down.

It was, at least, a rare pleasure to be so near her in this confidential mood. The delicate, violet odor that permeated her rustling garments was like a breath of spring, and the magnetism of her presence almost intoxicated him.

"You have been wondering what astonishing chain of circumstances brought a girl like me into such a miserable place as that underground dungeon?" turning toward the door with a glance that did not escape the eye of Charlie Stuart.

"Well, yes, to some extent; but it was not alone the desire to hear your promised story that brought me here, in spite of warnings from the baron."

He watched, but by no telltale pallor or start did she betray the fact that she knew to whom he referred by "the baron."

"What other reason could influence you?" she asked, a little eagerly.

"The natural desire to meet you again. That wasn't wrong—you don't blame me, do you?"

"Perhaps I should not—you have already been so good a friend; but if acquaintance with me is to bring disaster or even danger to you, it might be better if you forgot me."

He detected a plaintive little note in this, and his chivalrous spirit was up in arms at once.

"I am not in the habit of deserting any one who is my friend because, perhaps, it may mean trouble or even danger to me to continue my acquaintance."

She seemed deeply affected by his words.

"You overwhelm me with kindness, Mr. Stuart."

"Nonsense. The favor is just the other way. It is a rare pleasure for me to serve you."

"And yet I can hardly refuse, for, Heaven knows, I am in great trouble, and need a friend, if ever a young woman did."

"Compose yourself, I beg; and begin, please."

Charlie believed he was about to hear some new [illegible] than ordinary importance. In imagination he could picture the remarkable young widow who created such a furore all over Europe. She might resemble Arline in many ways, but surely such a charmer of men could not possibly assume the air of innocence which this young woman carried with her.

At the same time he felt impelled to relate the adventure he had experienced with the professor, and even mention that he had been solemnly warned by the baron.

When she heard that Peterhoff believed her to be the celebrated adventuress, she hung her head.

Charlie was overcome with confusion.

"I have distressed you; and yet I beg you to believe I meant it all kindly. It was a silly thing for Peterhoff to do, but even the shrewdest of men of his stamp make absurd blunders sometimes. His last famous one cost Russia her Czar. Remember, I never for once took any stock in his ridiculous idea. It was all a mistake."

Then the maid looked up.

Her eyes were sparkling with real tears, but Charlie's haste to assure her of his positive belief in her innocence of the charge had brought a smile to her face.

"It is dreadful, even to be taken for such a notorious woman, don't you think? But perhaps I should look at it reasonably, and believe the baron has made an excusable blunder. Really, some of the garcons here in the hotel have addressed me as countess, and I have been puzzled to account for it until now, so we must look alike—I a demure little English lassie, and she a clever, designing Russian diplomat."

Charlie nodded, eagerly.

What she said seemed so very reasonable, and she took it much better than he expected.

But he could easily discover that Arline was not wholly at her ease.

This fact had come to his attention some time back; but Charlie did not find the least reason to suspect that the baron had aught to do with it.

She seemed to hesitate, perhaps hardly knowing just how to begin her story.

"Allow me to remark, in the beginning," said Charlie, "that, while I am ready and anxious to serve you, and stand ready to do all that may become a man—if there is any reason why you should wish to keep these things secret, I will try to help you, even while groping in complete ignorance."

"Oh, no," she answered quickly; "it is not that. You are entitled to the fullest confidence. I was only endeavoring to collect my thoughts so that I might know just how to begin. And, besides, I have a natural feeling of shame, because the person who has, I sadly fear, been plotting in secret against me, is one who should be my best friend upon earth—my father!"

Young though she was, this beautiful girl had known what it was to sup with poverty, to be left alone and friendless in the world and to meet with the most unexpected and glorious fortune.

Her story, even when briefly told, was a series of dramatic surprises, such as are well fitted for the stage, yet occur so seldom in real life.

She barely mentioned her earlier years, save to tell how her father, a sea captain, had been lost as it was believed, at sea; and with her mother she had fought the grim wolf in London, sewing, as such people of refinement reduced to poverty must do in order to earn bread.

Then came her mother's death, followed by her bitter fight against the world, and especially the persecution of a dashing gentleman, who seemed determined that she should marry him, no matter if dislike and disgust took the part of love in her breast.

Then the wonderful freak of fortune that brought Arline in contact with an eccentric old aunt who was exceedingly wealthy.

It was the old story—Arline's mother had married beneath her, and from that hour had been as dead to her relatives; but when a kind Providence threw the forlorn young girl under the high-stepping carriage horses of the dowager Lady Wallis, and she later on discovered that this lovely creature was her own flesh and blood, a sudden love for the girl sprang up in her withered old heart, which resulted in her adopting this niece as her sole heiress.

Two years later Arline was bereft of her eccentric, but kind relative, and found herself once more alone in the world, this time possessed of a most bountiful fortune.

Then it was, with the abruptness of a cannon shot, Captain Brand appeared upon the scene.

He had a thrilling story to tell of his vessel's foundering in a gale off the African coast, his narrow escape from drowning, of being cast ashore, found by wandering Arabs, taken into captivity, sold some years later to a tribe of the Great Sahara, so that he finally drifted to Dahomey where, through the assistance of the faithful woman he had been forced to marry, he eventually made a bold and successful escape, though his companion gave up her life in throwing herself in front of a spear that was meant for him.

Arline accepted it all as gospel truth, and would have at the time believed even a much more miraculous series of adventures could such have been by any means invented by this modern Munchausen.

This was before she knew Captain Brand so well.

She spent money with a liberal hand. He was enabled to indulge his love for fine clothes to its full bent. He smoked the finest cigars, drank the most expensive liquors, and she feared he frequently indulged in gaming.

Thus a year went by.

Captain Brand had ceased to beg for money. He demanded it as his right, and in sums so large that Arline was growing alarmed.

He had tried to influence her to make her will leaving all her wealth to him; something might happen to her, though Heaven forbid, and she would not like to think of the great property going to strangers while her poor papa was left unprovided for.

Arline refused to do as he requested, something within warning her against it.

Some time after the dreadful suspicion had flashed into her brain that Captain Brand was having a will forged to suit his ideas governing the case.

Even then she had not realized what this might portend. How should an innocent trusting young girl desirous of bestowing all reasonable benefits upon the man she had come to believe was her father—how should she suspect that this ungrateful man could conspire with unprincipled confederates to actually take her life, yet by such means as would make it seem a cruel accident?

While in Antwerp he had professed a keen desire to visit the dungeons of the Steen, and yet always made it appear as though she were the one most interested in the abode of ghostly memories.

An expedition was accordingly planned.

Arline never could tell just how it came about. She remembered Captain Brand's enthusiasm in leading her deeper into the recesses, and how he suddenly disappeared while she was examining some object of interest; how she waited for him to reappear, until, growing alarmed by the diminishing size of her candle, she had endeavored to find her way back to the party; how she tripped and fell, losing her light. Then she cried out in terror as the awful darkness closed around her, but no answer came.

Then she realized that the others had gone; that this cruel-hearted man she called father, had deserted her, pretending to believe, no doubt, that she had gone above with a portion of the party upon whom the horrors of the dungeon soon palled.

He could also take it for granted she had gone away with her new-found friends, and not show any alarm for hours.

It was a cleverly concocted and diabolical scheme, which had for its ultimate outcome the dethronement of her reason.

Doubtless Captain Brand had arranged it so that in such a case he would be appointed the natural protector and guardian of his afflicted child, and thus, of course, have the handling of her fortune.

Charlie was aghast.

He had never heard so terrible a thing in all his life. He almost doubted his senses.

"I have made up my mind regarding one thing, Miss Brand," he said, positively, "which is to the effect that I do not believe this man to be your father!"

HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours.

From the Hustler.

Prof. Monlux left this week for a visit with his brother in Dakota. From there he goes to Newton, to visit another brother.

The flour mill has been idle for the past week, owing to the wind storm having demolished the smoke stack.

J. B. Deibler returned from a very pleasant visit with relatives in Pennsylvania. He reports the weather very dry back there, so dry that it has seriously effected all vegetation. He says the clover crop is so short that the bees have to get down on their knees to extract the honey from the blossoms.

As we close up our columns, Thursday noon, the Epworth League delegates have arrived in force. The session promises to be one of large attendance and great interest.

"Good Heavens! was that his name?"

"Certainly not. That's what these all all heavy tragedians of the barnstorming variety. Let me see," placing a finger alongside his nose, a la [illegible]ying, "now I have it—bend your head lower, for that fellow has keen ears—it was Frederick Davenport Mawley."

"Indeed! Very suggestive, considering his occupation in life. What [illegible]an he is, to be sure; capable of having so many names, and filling such various stations in life. Why, when I knew him, four or five years ago, he was called Captain Nathaniel Kedge."

"What! you knew him, then?"

"I saw him—that is, I am almost dead certain it is the same man; and expect to prove it presently."

"Where was this?"

"In South America."

"In Valparaiso?"

"Come, what makes you ask that? a surprise.

"I remember him talking of being concerned in a little war scare that occurred down there—he has always been the same boaster, you know."

"Well, that seems to prove the identity. I never in all my life heard [illegible] stupendous a rascal."

"Say what was he doing down [illegible]antiago, or was it Valparaiso?"

"The latter, on the coast, the most [illegible]nterprising city along the Pacific [illegible]outh of San Francisco. What was [illegible]oing? Well, about the last I saw [illegible]m, he was dancing a Scottish hornpe."

"Yes, he has his merry moments [illegible]hen the liquor is in."

"But this was a unique affair—before [illegible] audience that must have numbered [illegible]ousands."

"God! that would spur even [illegible]or an actor to do his best."

"And Captain Nathaniel did his [illegible]st. If, as you say, he has been [illegible]tor, as well as a miner, sea captain, [illegible]ffee planter, speculator, and Heaven knows what not, he certainly had [illegible]ance of his life to bring out brains. [illegible]owever, I don't think he took [illegible] much interest in the affair as some [illegible] the rest of us did."

"He didn't, eh? I never knew [illegible]as acquainted with modesty. How [illegible]as that?" asked Artemus, eagerly.

"Well," said Charlie, dryly, "you [illegible] was being hung!"

Spring fever is another name for biliousness. It is more serious than most people think. A torpid liver and inactive bowels mean a poisoned system. Essay on "The Mouth."

An exchange tells of a school boy who was compelled by his teacher to write an essay on the mouth, and this is what he wrote. "The mouth is the front door to the face; it is the aperture of the cold storage of our anatomy. The mouth is the hot-bed of toothache and the bung-hole of oratory. The mouth is the crimson aisle to the liver; it is the fountain of patriotism and the tool chest for pie. Without the mouth the politician would be a wanderer on the face of the earth and go down to a dishonored grave. It is the grocer's friend, the orator's pride, the dentist's hope. It is temptation's lunch counter when attached to a maiden, and tobacco's friend when attached to a man. It puts some men on the rostrum and some in jail. It is the home of that unruly member, the tongue. Without it married life would be a summer dream and the dude would lose half his attractions."

We are dismayed by the action of a jury who recently decided that a hug was worth only a cent. Besides the fact that it was a lie it is an awful cheapening of a valuable asset. Just think of it. One hundred for a dollar. A man could go out this beautiful bright weather and hug his collar bones loose for fifty cents. Everybody knows a hug is worth more than a cent. Most of us would willingly pay as high as a dime. But now here comes a jury and awards a woman who has been hugged one cent. If this is fixed by law as the ruling price, there won't be any other work done this year.

Virulent Cancer Cured

Startling proof of a wonderful advance in medicine is given by druggist G. W. Roberts of Elizabeth, W. Va. An old man there had long suffered with what good doctors pronounced incurable cancer. They believed his case hopeless till he used Electric Bitters and applied Bucklen's Arnica Salve, which treatment completely cured him. When Electric Bitters are used to expel bilious, kidney and microbe poisons at the same time this salve exerts its matchless healing power, blood diseases, skin eruptions, ulcers and sores vanish. # NEWS FROM THE HAWKEYE STATE

What Has Happened in Iowa During the Past Week.

CHEROKEE HOSPITAL DELAYED

Board of Control Announces That It Cannot Be Gotten in Readiness by July 1—Awful Murder at Jefferson and Its Result.

Des Moines, June 21.—The board of control will not be able to open Cherokee hospital for inmates July 1. While the board has made no authorized announcement to this effect, it is learned there is little prospect of the institution being opened before the latter part of July or the first of August.

The board is urging the work of completion of the hospital forward with the utmost speed. It has all along been predicted the hospital would be opened by July 1 and perhaps before that time. When asked as to the situation yesterday, Judge Robinson admitted there was little hope of getting everything in shape for the reception of inmates by July 1. The buildings are practically done, but there are delays in the arrival of machinery and the putting of it in place. There is a great deal of pipe to be put in and numerous connections to be made. Work of this kind is likely to require several weeks more for completion.

The board has not yet decided whether formal exercises will be arranged on the completion and opening of the hospital. It has been practically settled that inmates will be transferred. There are now 1,100 inmates at the hospital at Independence, more than ever before. The board plans to remove 300 of these to Cherokee. Seventy-five patients will be removed from Mt. Pleasant to Independence, so that the net decrease for Independence will be 25. From 130 to 140 patients will be removed from Mt. Pleasant to Clarinda. Two hundred or more will be removed from Clarinda to Cherokee. These figures are approximate and the number transferred to Cherokee may be slightly exceeded, so that there will be from 500 to 550 patients in the Cherokee hospital at the outset. It is likely the closing of several county institutions and the transfer of their patients will be necessary and this may shortly swell the number of inmates at Cherokee.

MARSHAL'S SLAYER MOBBED.

Jefferson the Scene of a Murder Followed by Quick Retribution.

Jefferson, June 3.—One of the worst shooting affairs ever witnessed in this part of Iowa took place Saturday, resulting from an attempt to arrest Horace Shipman on a peace warrant.

For some breach of the peace Friday evening a warrant was sworn out for Shipman and placed in the hands of Marshal John Swearingen for service. Dr. G. H. Grimmell, Shipman's family physician, went ahead of the marshal to attempt to have Shipman surrender peaceably. Shipman agreed to this, but when Swearingen and Deputy Sheriff Fred Kendall appeared at the door he warned them not to come in under penalty of death. Swearingen, undaunted, started to pull his revolver for the purpose of entering, and Shipman fired a load of shot, striking the marshal in the lower part of the face and killing him instantly. Dr. Grimmell and deputy beat a retreat, leaving the body of the marshal upon the porch.

Sheriff Anderson immediately went to the scene of the shooting, deputizing a dozen citizens to assist him. Hundreds of people gathered near Shipman's home and for four hours watched the battle. Five hundred shots were poured into the large two-story house, Shipman replying from windows, cellarway and door. The fire company was called and James May volunteered to stick a hose in the cellar and drown him out. May accomplished his work, but Shipman fired upon him from the cellar, causing him to retreat.

About 11 o'clock Shipman's shadowy form was seen in one of the lower rooms and several guns spoke at once and a heavy fall was heard. It was not thought best to approach, however for some time, when S. C. Judy, a local real estate man, braved a possible shooting and marched across the street to look in. He saw the dead body of Shipman upon the floor and the house was immediately taken possession of. Shipman was found to have been shot in fifty places and almost mutilated by lead. His body is now in the hands of the coroner.

The dead marshal will be greatly mourned in Jefferson. He was a brave official, courageous in every way and his untimely death calls for an outpouring of sympathy for his family that is unequaled in its intensity. The miserable assassin who has gone to atone for his misdeeds, has conducted a butter and egg and poultry business here for many years. Informations against him have been filed numerous times and he has always been under bonds to keep the peace. It is thought he might have shot many of the crowd, as his house was full of guns, but he was evidently waiting for an opportunity to kill Sheriff Anderson, for whom he has always had great dislike.

Zimmerman Bound Over.

St. Louis, June 20.—Charles Zimmerman, the man who shot and killed Belden Cook here Saturday night, had a preliminary trial yesterday, lasting from 10 a. m. to 3:30 p. m. The evidence given at the hearing was enough to bind him over to the next term of the district court under bond of $10,000. He acknowledged that he shot Cook, but claims that it was done in self defense, and it is known that one of the balls entering the abdomen ranged upward about 35 or 40 degrees, coming out of the back, and that alone is very strong evidence that Zimmerman must have been down or falling when that shot supposed to be the first shot—was fired.

Little and Wright Indicted.

Clinton, June 21.—The grand jury in Carroll county, Ill., has returned an indictment against Dr. Luther W. Little, of Preston, Iowa, and Ed Wright of Savanna, Ill., on the charge of having performed a criminal operation upon a young lady of Savanna. It is alleged Wright, who was responsible for the condition of the young woman employed Dr. Little to perform the operation. Wright, being unable to furnish bail was remanded to jail, while Dr. Little was released his father-in-law, Henry Harnish, signed his bonds.

...IFERS BRING BIG ...MONEY.

Newton, June 20.—The E. S. Donahey sale of fine Scotch cattle was well attended by stock men from several states and the prices paid indicate that the fine stock business is still on the boom. Fifty head of Shorthorn Scotch cattle were sold, aggregating about $40,000. Forty-one heifers brought $36,960, an average of $754.28. The highest price paid was for Butterfly Second of Wildwood, sold to J. Steele of Ireland, Iowa, for $1,750. Several others brought over $1,000. The bulls brought the sum of $1,475 an average of $368.75. Col. Woods was the auctioneer, and the sale was held in the stock pavilion belonging to the Jasper County Breeders which has recently been erected upon the fair grounds. Mr. Donahey commenced the stock business less than five years ago on a very limited capital and after the sale, so Mr. Woods stated to the crowd, has his 260 acre farm paid for and is worth $75,000, which goes to show the result of his few years' labor in breeding, importing and selling cattle.

PROCLAIMS BISHOP JU...

FORMAL ANNOUNCEMENT OF ...POINTMENT IS MADE.

Governor Cummins Finally I... Proclamation, Following Prese... tion of Petition.

Des Moines, June 23.—Governor Cummins issued a proclamation yesterday attaining the appointment of Judge Charles A. Bishop of Des Moines as judge of the supreme court to succeed Judge C. M. Waterman of Davenport, who resigned several days ago to engage in the practice of law in ex-Congressman Lane.

The following is the governor's proclamation:

"To All to Whom These Presents May Come—Greeting: I have received the resignation of C. M. Waterman as one of the judges of the supreme court of the state of Iowa, to take effect on the 30th day of June, 1902. In pursuance of the authority vested in me by the laws of the state I accept said resignation; and in further performance of my official duty, I hereby appoint Charles A. Bishop of Polk county, Iowa, to hold the said office made vacant by the said resignation until the next general election and until a successor be elected and qualified.

"In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the great seal of the state to be affixed. Done at Des Moines this ... day of June, 1902.

"Albert B. Cummins."

The cause of the governor's delay in making the formal announcement of the appointment was made known Saturday. In the course of the day a paper was presented to the governor amounting to a petiton for the appointment of Judge Bishop. This petition was signed by all but a few of the ninety-nine members of the Polk county delegation to the state convention. Several of the delegates did not sign out of regard to Captain Amos Brandt and some of the delegates, by reason of the close personal relations between Captain Brandt, were not asked to sign. Friends of Judge Bishop circulated the paper.

SALOON ROW AT CRESTON.

John Wombold Stabbed Five Ti... and Will Die.

Creston, June 20.—John Wombold was stabbed five times in a saloon fight here. He is in the hospital and will die, as one lung was penetrated by a knife. Joe Turner and Jim Jones are in jail and will be held to answer a charge of murder if Wombold's injuries prove fatal. Turner did the cutting. Jones was arrested as an accomplice. The two men ran to a livery barn and hired a team after the fight, but were apprehended by the officers just as they were leaving the barn. All three are laboring men, and the quarrel started over some old trouble which existed between the parties.

Farmer Finds Child.

Aurelia, June 21.—Ed. Damm, living just west of town, found a babe in his barn. The child, a boy, was apparently three or four months old and was neatly dressed. Who left the child is a question that perps will take time to determine. Meanwhile the babe will find a good home with the farmer into whose care it was left by some unfortunate mother who, it is thought, was traveling through the country.

Proprietor Shot Him Dead.

Ottumwa, June 21.—James Wham, a well known traveling man of Ahlson, Kan., was accidentally shot and killed in a restaurant last night by Lou Betrick, the proprietor.

...for removing Miss Tayor, a ... the war department, for criti... Philippine policy, and for ... General Wood's expression fo... promotion of reciprocity legislation. Cannon, chairman of the appropriation committee, in a brief reply to both speeches, said he was ready to go to the country on the record of the republican party. He caused much merriment on his side of the house by describing the republican party as pulling the wagon while the democrats stood off and found fault. Bartlett, democrat, offered an amendment to the deficiency bill to reimburse the Cuban revenues for the salary allowed by Secretary Root to Governor General Wood out of the island revenues. In the course of some remarks early in the session Cannon declared that if he could have his way congress would adjourn sine die before July 4. The deficiency appropriation bill, the last of the supply bills, was passed.

Washington, June 19.—House.—The opening day of the week's debate on the Philippine government bill in the house was signalized by a remarkably strong and exhaustive speech by Cooper of Wisconsin, chairman of the committee on insular affairs. He spoke for almost three hours and was given close attention by both sides of the house. Much of the speech was a general defense of the policy pursued by the administration and drew repeated applause from his side of the house. He contended that the problem of the Philippines should not be a party question, that both political parties brought on the war with Spain and the votes of members of both parties ratified the treaty which made the islands American territory. The most telling portion of his speech was the parallel he drew between the present attitude of the opposition and the attitude of the opposition during and immediately succeeding the civil war. Jones of Virginia, the ranking member of the minority of the committee, made an able presentation of the democratic position, but he yielded the floor after speaking about an hour and will resume tomorrow morning.

Washington, June 20.—Senate.—No business of importance was transacted by the senate today in open session, except to agree to a conference report finally disposing of the military academy appropriation bill. Soon after the disposition of routine business, the senate went into executive session, and at 5:10 p. m. adjourned until Monday.

House.—Debate on the Philippine civil government bill continued today in the house from 11 a. m. to 5 p. m., and at a session held tonight. The speakers were given close attention, each side enthusiastically applauding its respective orators. Jones, of Virginia, the ranking minority member of the insular affairs committee, concluded his speech, begun yesterday. The other speakers were Hamilton of Michigan, and Kahn of California, for the bill, and Patterson of Tennessee, against it. Kahn's speech was largely an interesting narrative of his experience in the Philippines last summer. The isthmian canal bill was sent to conference after the senate amendment had been non-concurred in. The house conferees are Hepburn of Iowa, Fletcher of Minnesota, and Davey of Louisiana. The house reiterated the position it had taken on the army appropriation bill by ignoring the action of the senate and sending the bill back to the senate, after voting to adhere to its disagreement to the objectionable army post amendments.

Washington, June 21.—House.—Debate upon the Philippine civil government bill lagged in the house today. There were six speakers, Reeves, of Illinois, and Bromwell, of Ohio, for the bill, and Maddox, of Georgia, Dinsmore, of Arkansas, and Thayer, of Massachusetts, against it. Mr. McClellan, of New York, a son of the late George B. McClellan, delivered a short but eloquent defense of the army. Earlier in the day the conference reports on the military academy, and civil appropriation bills were adopted.

SAY MULES WERE INOCULATED.

Story to Account for Diseases Raging Among Stock in South Africa.

New Orleans, June 23.—It has developed about the boarding houses where the sailors and muleteers were recruited for the British during the South African war, according to a story printed here today in the State, that the diseases now raging in South Africa among the live stock there are due to inoculations made in this port by Boer sympathizers and disgruntled muleteers playing even with the British. It is said that the virus used was secured from a Philadelphia chemist, and that it consisted mostly of charbon and glanders. It is also stated now that the British suspected that this crime was being constantly committed, and for that reason removed their headquarters from this city to Montreal. The inoculations, it is stated, were also made in Lathrop, Mo., so it was necessary to break up that camp as well. The British are now retaliating, so it is intimated, by refusing entrance of Louisana cattle in South Africa.

Seventy-five operators of the Iowa and Mutual telephone exchange went out on a strike Saturday morning. They want an increase of about 30 per cent in wages and recognition for the union, which was organized recently. The managers refuse to grant either request. The service is badly crippled.

MITCHELL CALLS A MEETING.

Miners of Bituminous Coal May be Asked to Strike.

Wilksbarre, Pa., June 19.—The long expected call for a special national convention of United Mine Workers was issued yesterday by National President Mitchell at strike headquarters to be held at Indianapolis at the earliest possible date. The date of the convention will be fixed by W. B. Wilson, national secretary at Indianapolis, who has charge of the machinery by which a convention is arranged.

The convention will be held for the purpose of discussing the advisability of involving all the soft coal miners in the United States in the struggle now going on in the anthracite coal fields.

Under the constitution of the union, five districts must request action before the national president can issue a call for national convention. The five districts that applied for this convention were the three anthracite districts, the Michigan district and the West Virginia district where a strike is now on. President Mitchell has had the consent of the five districts for some time, but for some reason did not see fit to issue a call until yesterday. The request for the convention was made at Hazelton four weeks ago last Friday.

President Mitchell was extremely uncommunicative as to what the action of the convention might be. If delegates should decide to inaugurate a national suspension of coal ... everybody at strike headquarters believe it would have a disastrous effect on the industries of the country. The supply of coal would become so short that large and small industrial establishments would be compelled to suspend operations and many railroads would also seriously suffer.

There are approximately about 450,000 coal miners in the United States. Of these about 350,000, Mr. Mitchell says are affiliated with the union and an additional 40,0... comply with the legislation of the miners' organization.

BOERS' LOSSES WERE LIGHT.

Commandant Kemp Tells How His Men Fared.

Kimberly, Griqualand, June 19.—Commandant Kemp, General Delarey's lieutenant, who surrendered at Mafeking, June 11, has arrived here. In an interview he gave some interesting figures regarding the war. He said that about 50,000 Boers were in the field at the outset, and that only 1,500 out of 5,000 available fought at Colenso, where the Boer losses were not heavy. At Spion Kop, where the British suffered so much, the Boers had only 50 men killed. In one of the fights outside of Ladysmith the Boers had 56 men killed and over 100 wounded. Their losses were heavier at Branspruit and Vlakenfontein. The Boers were often worried by the British shrapnel and lyddite fire, but when entrenched they did not fear the shells. Members of the Boer forces often managed to get into Johannesburg, Krugersdorp and Pretoria, securing valuable information, and frequently crosed the blockhouse lines at night. Commandant Kemp did not allow the Boers of his command to wear khaki, the British uniform.

THE BRITISH ARE ALARMED.

French Buy a Commanding Chunk of Land Near Hong Kong.

Chicago, June 20.—Telegrams received at Yokohama, just before the Victoria sailed, report that the French have purchased the promontory of Katai, near Macao, a Portuguese settlement, in the vicinity of Hong Kong, says a special to the Chronicle from Tacoma, Washington. The point was secured for $120,000 for the ostensible purpose of establishing a naval hospital for the use of the French fleet in Oriental waters. This promontory commands the approach to Linten bay and part of Hong Kong harbor.

Herr Most To Serve A Year.

New York, June 21.—Johanna Most, who was convicted on a charge that he printed an incendiary article in a newspaper conducted by him, was sentenced yesterday to serve one year in the penitentiary. The articles were printed at the time President McKinley was shot. The case was carried to the court of appeals which confirmed the judgment of the lower court.

Mount Pelee Belching Slime.

Fort De France, Island of Martinique, June 20.—A column of slime one hundred metres high has been ejected from the volcano of Mont Pelee and has fallen on Bazze Pointe, enveloping the town portion and completely razing 22 houses. No loss has been reported.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITA...

Des Moines, June 23, 190...

The State Register announces ... sale of the property and plant of ... paper to George E. Roberts of ... Dodge, director of the United Sta... mint. The reason for the change ... the failing health of R. P. Clarkson, ... present editor and proprietor. ... price is not stated, but the transa... tion, which has been pending for ... eral weeks past, is believed to invo... a sum of money between $125,000 a... $150,000.

Chairman John Cownie of the board of control has returned from Council Bluffs, where he and Judge Kinsman opened the bids on the temporary buildings and made awards. Peterson & Rasmussen of Council Bluffs received the award for the building, the price being $13,590. There were five other bidders. J. C. Bixby & Son of Council Bluffs will be given the contract for plumbing and steam heating, the price being $4,300. The total price of the different contracts runs up to $17,000. The board of control has already been advised by the executive council that it can have $25,000 out of the providential contingent fund. This is practically all the money available for the board to make the proposed improvements at Council Bluffs. Taking out the sum of the contracts awarded at Council Bluffs, leaves $7,100 available for furniture and equipments. The temporary buildings that will be erected comprise a new school building, a new dining room constructed with the use of some of the walls of the main building not destroyed by fire, a storage room or ware house, a new industrial building, an office for the superintendent, a toilet annex to the old industrial building and the fitting up of two rooms in the old industrial building for dormitory purposes.

The board of control has received advises from Warden Jones of Fort Madison to the effect that he is having trouble in disciplining Matt Hunter, who was recently convicted and sent up from Ringgold county for the crime of killing Homer Holland. Hunter is proving extremely refractory. He refuses to work and says he was not sent to prison to work and he refuses to exert himself. Warden Jones has put Hunter in solitary confinement and is feeding him on bread and water.

Warden Hunter of Anamosa says Wesley Elkins is getting along well. He is still at the home of Professor James E. Harlan and is finding plenty of employment. He may enter Cornell college in the fall. Warden Hunter says Elkins was extremely reticent at first, but he has been kindly treated and has been invited to the societies of the college and other gatherings and is gradually losing his shyness.

The board of control has bought fifty-five acres of land just east of the building at the Glenwood institution for feeble minded, for $5,400, of P. A. Goyer. He asked $6,500. It was decided to erect the two cottages for which the legislature appropriated recently, on the east side of the plat dedicated to buildings for the institution. It was found that to do this it would be necessary to secure additional land. Therefore, the purchase. The legislature appropriated $25,000 for land at this place and more will be purchased. The additional cottages are to be built this year. They are necessary to wholly separate the girls and the boys in the institution and this is absolutely essential in a state asylum. Up to date the institution has on hand 535,000 brick, made by the inmates, at a minimum cost, and as one of the industrial features of the employment of the feeble-minded people. This represents a value of about $40,000. The brick will be used in the construction of the cottages referred to, the contractors taking the contracts on condition that the state furnishes the bricks on the ground. The enormous saving to the state is at once apparent.

The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy company has commenced the purchase of right of way for a new line between Oskaloosa and Tracy and will commence the work of construction at once. Tracy is located on the Des Moines and Albia division of the Burlington road thirty-eight miles south of Des Moines. The new line will be a little over twelve miles long and will include a bridge across the Des Moines river at a point three miles east of Tracy. The new road will connect up the Burlington & Northwestern road extending from Burlington to Oskaloosa and recently acquired by the Burlington company and will afford an air line between Des Moines and Burlington. The Burlington & Northwestern is a narrow gauge road, but arrangements have been made for changing it to standard gauge one week from today. Material has been distributed for this work and one rail along the entire distance will be moved over to standard gauge on that day. June 30 the operation of the road as standard gauge will be commenced. With the completion of the twelve miles of road from Oskaloosa to Tra... the line between Des Moines and Burlington will be operated as the Des Moines and Burlington division of the Burlington road.

IRONING A SHIRT WAIST.

Not infrequently a young woman finds it necessary to launder a shirt waist at home for some emergency when the laundryman or home service cannot do it. Hence these directions for ironing the waist: To iron gummer shirt waists so that they will look like new it is needful to have them starched evenly with Defiance starch, then made perfectly smooth and rolled tight in a damp cloth, to be laid away two or three hours. When ironing have a bowl of water and a clean piece of muslin beside the ironing board. Have your iron hot, but not sufficiently so to scorch, and absolutely clean. Begin by ironing the back, then the front, sides and the sleeves, followed by the neckband and the cuffs. When wrinkles appear apply the damp cloth and remove them. Always iron from the top of the waist to the bottom. If there are plaits in the front iron them downward, after first raising each one with a blunt knife, and with the edge of the iron follow every line of stitching to give it distinctness. After the shirt waist is ironed it should be well aired by the fire or in the sun before it is folded and put away, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

CHAPTER VI.

Captain Brand, of the Hespasia.

The young girl heard her companion make this declaration with an interest she did not attempt to conceal.

"Many times that thought has come to me, but I dismissed it as unworthy. He brought several things my father had with him when he went away, and he resembled the only picture I had of my father—that is, in a general way. You could not expect very much after his cruel years of hardship in the desert. Besides, he knew all about our family matters, the quarrel with mamma's people on account of her marriage, and many little things connected with the past."

"I shall devote myself to the task of discovering the truth. Heaven alone knows who he is, or how he came into possession of the facts he has used to such advantage; but I intend to satisfy my curiosity in that respect, at any cost."

"Something tells me you will succeed," she said eagerly, so that Charlie flushed with pleasure.

"Thanks for your faith in me. It will go a great way toward assisting me. Of course, you would be gratified should I find the means to expose him as an imposter?"

"So long as I still believe him to be what he claims, I cannot find it in my heart to turn against him. He has told me so many awful stories of the cruelties practiced upon them that I sometimes feel as though possibly his mind had been a little affected, and that he could hardly be held accountable for his actions."

Charlie seized upon a slender clue, quick as a flash to discover a vulnerable point.

"Ah!" he said, eagerly; "you speak of their suffering among the Arabs! Then he had a companion in exile, I imagine."

"Oh, yes—three at first; but later on there was only one left."

"And the name—do you remember?"

"Yes. It was his mate, Ben Hazen."

"Ah! that is a substantial point from which to work. Our friend, if an imposter, may be very cunning; but I doubt if he has been able to cover his tracks so that we may not learn something of Ben Hazen's past: Shipping books and shipping masters may tell the story of identification if all else fails. By the way, what does he say became of Ben Hazen?"

"He was shot while defending a wretched woman slave against her inhuman master, and died of his wounds."

"Well, the incident may be true enough; but the chances are that it was your own father who gave up his life in this chivalrous fashion, and that what papers he had hidden on his person he confided to his fellow prisoner in the hope that at some day he might escape and carry the news to those he loved in old England."

Arline heard him with both wonder and delight.

Her confidence had apparently gone out to him in the start, and now she felt it growing he was so earnest, so positive that his logic seemed to have the faculty of convincing others.

"There is one thing I meant to ask; you gave me the wrong card by a singular accident, but at the same time intimated that you were known by another name than Arline Brand at the hotel."

"Yes; I should have explained. When my aunt adopted me I assumed her name of Wallis; and as her title was hereditary, and could descend to the next of kin after her demise, I became Lady Arline Wallis. As such I have been sometimes known."

Charlie cringed somehow, at this.

It seemed to raise a wall between them—wealth and title. What few ordinary young Englishmen dare aspire to win a bride from behind such ramparts?

Never before had Charlie Stuart wished for fame and fortune as now; nothing could be too grand to lay at the feet of such a royal princess.

And while he was thus battling with his thoughts, she suddenly caught his arm.

"He is out yonder! I heard his laugh! Now, come to the door, Mr. Stuart, and take your first look at Captain Brand of the Hespasia, before you meet him face to face."

Nothing loth Charlie followed her to the door, whence they could look into the office of the hotel.

Several men were in sight; but almost instinctively his gaze settled upon one who seemed to command general attention; and no sooner had Charlie clapped his eyes on this remarkable individual than he uttered a little ejaculation of surprise and pleasure.

Possibly he had seen this same loquacious Captain Brand of the Hespasia under other and more exciting circumstances.

"Tell me," he said quietly, to the girl who was hovering over his shoulder, "have you given him any particulars as to how you chanced to escape from the Steen dungeons?"

"Only that just in the nick of time I was discovered by some tourists who had come down to see the awful place for themselves."

"My name was not mentioned?"

"To the best of my recollection, not at all."

"Good! Then, if I meet the ogre, you can introduce me as one of your friends."

"I trust such is only the truth," shyly.

"An old, old friend, let us say, for whom you have always entertained feelings of profound respect."

"It shall be as you say. I am sure you have some motive in this action."

"I certainly have. Truth to tell, I believe I have seen this gentleman before, under other conditions. I shall know to a certainty after I have been in his society a while. At any rate, there is reason to hope for the best."

"Shall we go out and meet him?" asked Arline.

"Yes, indeed. The Fates have decided that Captain Brand and I shall come together for a trial of strength, and it might just as well take place now as later. I am ready."

So they went out.

The ex-sailor quickly sighted them and "bore down with all sails set," as he would have nautically expressed it.

Charlie played his part well.

He met the captain in a bluff, friendly manner, just as a young man might wish to receive the father of a lovely girl he admired.

Plainly Captain Brand found no especial reason for alarm.

He set out to be even more jovial and debonair than usual, with the idea of creating a good impression on his daughter's old friend, whom he wished to study at close range.

When he set out to entertain, Captain Brand of the Hespasia was a howling success, relating the most astonishing incidents connected with his long captivity in the desert, his perils on the sea, and the deep fountain of love for wife and child that had sustained him through all his trials.

Charlie was no mean actor himself, thanks to the splendid control which he was able to exercise over his facial muscles.

Although he now had not the least doubt as to the fellow being a fraud of the first water, Charlie felt that he owed it to Arline's respect for filial affection to prove this fact.

This was the task he cut out for himself.

He laid his little trap.

Captain Brand was so much engaged with his flow of oratory and the charming of this friend of the family that he did not notice the pit so deftly dug.

Thus, almost without an effort, Charlie had him admit that he knew considerable about Valparaiso, in Chili, and had been there, in the course of his wanderings, many years ago.

In Charlie's mind this settled the matter. He was confident he knew with whom he had to deal, and when the time came he would be ready to dare all in defying the adventurer.

While they sat thus, speaking of the sights of Antwerp, there came a messenger from the hotel office inquiring for Mr. Charlie Stuart, whom a gentleman outside desired to see.

As he went, directed by the clerk, to the spot where he would find the gentleman who had asked for an immediate interview on serious business, he was making up his mind to tell Peterhoff the whole story and enlist his favorable consideration for Arline, so that when the denoument came the doughty captain could be taken care of.

Judge of his surprise, then, when, upon coming upon the party who wished to see him, he found it was no other than Artemus Barnaby, with his honest face clouded with an air of the darkest mystery.

It did not require much prophetic skill on Charlie's part to tell that his erratic friend had news of some importance for him.

He pressed a forefinger on his lips to indicate dead silence, when he found that Charlie had recognized him.

Charlie stood there waiting, while the other crept on his tiptoes to the corner, in the regular orthodox stage fashion, and looked this way and that, to assure himself that there could be no eavesdroppers near.

Then he approached his friend, his warning finger still on his lips.

Reaching the other, he placed his lips close to Charlie's ear, and solemnly said:

"The coast is clear!"

"I see it is," said Charlie, aloud.

"What I am about to disclose to you, will give you a cruel shock, my boy."

"Shock away then, only make haste."

"I am about to make a disclosure that will, I regret to say, knock away the foundations of your belief in humanity."

"Ah! that's a serious thing indeed. Does this disclosure concern the world at large or one individual specimen of mankind?"

"One shining light."

"Then fire away, and be hanged to you."

Artemus assumed a look of extreme gravity, although Charlie was sure he heard a chuckle.

"You have met the father of the young lady of the Steen dungeons. The hotel clerk has been entertaining me with a wonderful story of his return to life and civilization. It reads like a romance, and would find a worthy niche in my notebook, only, my dear boy, it is so very ancient, a veritable stage chestnut, as it were.

"But let that pass. I imagine this Captain Brand is a character worth knowing, something unique. I could hear him out yonder, and the dulcet tones of his voice were soothing enough to conjure with."

"Yes," remarked Charlie, "he is a wonderful man, and could charm most people by the quaint manner of his speech."

Artemus again bent forward.

"Beware of Captain Brand!" he whispered, and then sprang back to note the stunning effect of his announcement.

But Charlie, though interested, refused to be stunned.

"Why, what has he done?"

"He is a bold, bad man!"

Charlie was inclined to say "Amen!" to that, but he kept his own counsel as yet, seeking more light.

"See here! You have known this wonderful modern Baron Munchausen at some past date?" he said.

Artemus nodded.

"It would be impossible that two such men could ever exist. Yes, I knew him."

"Where?"

"In New York."

"When?"

"Let me see," scratching his head, as a comedian must always do when desirous of arousing memory. "Ah! yes, just a little more than two years ago."

"But at that time he swears he was in the heart of Africa, a prisoner at Dahomey."

"Well—he lies," coolly.

Charlie liked that.

It was so fresh and original, at the same time so very emphatic.

"Who was he when you knew him?" he asked, determined to get down to the facts now.

"A fourth-rate actor, on his uppers half of the time. One of these howling barnstormers, a heavy villain of the piece, at home in 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' or 'Ten Nights in a Barroom.' He was the joke of the season on the Rialto, in Gotham. I even thought seriously of utilizing him in my great play as the seedy actor who carries the mysterious secret with him through five acts, but when he found there was a chance of him being immortalized, his price for sittings went away up, and I discovered something better than Hamfatter."

"Good Heavens! was that his name?"

"Certainly not. That's what they call all heavy tragedians of the barnstorming variety. Let me see," placing a finger alongside his nose, a la Irving, "now I have it—bend your head lower, for that fellow has keen ears—it was Frederick Davenport Macauley."

"Indeed! Very suggestive, considering his occupation in life. What a man he is, to be sure; capable of having so many names, and filling such various stations in life. Why, when I knew him, four or five years ago, he was called Captain Nathaniel Kedge."

"What! you knew him, then?"

"I saw him—that is, I am almost dead certain it is the same man; and I expect to prove it presently."

"Where was this?"

"In South America."

"In Valparaiso?"

"Come, what makes you ask that?" in surprise.

"I remember him talking of being concerned in a little war scare that occurred down there—he has always been the same boaster, you know."

"Well, that seems to prove the identity. I never in all my life heard of so stupendous a rascal."

"Say what was he doing down in Santiago, or was it Valparaiso?"

"The latter, on the coast, the most enterprising city along the Pacific, south of San Francisco. What was he doing? Well, about the last I saw of him, he was dancing a Scottish hornpipe."

"Yes, he has his merry moments when the liquor is in."

"But this was a unique affair—before an audience that must have numbered thousands."

"God! that would spur even so poor an actor to do his best."

"And Captain Nathaniel did his very best. If, as you say, he has been an actor, as well as a miner, sea captain, coffee planter, speculator, and Heaven knows what not, he certainly had the chance of his life to bring out bravos. However, I don't think he took half as much interest in the affair as some of the rest of us did."

"He didn't, eh? I never knew he was acquainted with modesty. How was that?" asked Artemus, eagerly.

"Well," said Charlie, dryly, "you see, he was being hung!"

LESSLER'S STORY ABOUT CHOATE

Great Lawyer Asked for Information About Trial Proceeding.

Mr. Montague Lessler has still another story on Ambassador Choate, which he declares is a little newer than the first ascribed to him.

"Once," said the agile and capable New Yorker, "I was attorney for people with interests opposed to those of the Standard Oil company. There was a preliminary examination of some of the magnates of that company, including Mr. Rockefeller. Finally some of Mr. Choate's clients were drawn into the controversy, and they refused to answer the questions I put to them. The tangle become very intense, and it was necessary to have a long argument before the judge. At that time Mr. Choate himself was in New Jersey arguing a Tobacco Trust case, and we had to postpone our case for over a week. Oh, my! how I studied and fortified myself for the argument against the great Choate. Certainly, you can imagine how I worked.

"Well, the day arrived. Mr. Choate came. They pulled him off in one corner of the room and poured a lot of talk in his ear. Then I spoke for about an hour and a half, making the effort of my life, and Mr. Choate followed for about an hour.

"The following evening Mr. Choate was to deliver an address before the College of the City of New York, where I was educated. I attended. Mr. Choate sitting down was quite as tall as I was standing.

"How are you, Montague?" said he, putting his arm around me affectionately. "Please tell me what all that fuss was about which we argued yesterday."

UNIQUE FISHING DONE IN JAPAN

Black Cormorants There Take the Place of Rod and Line.

"At the farmhouse, commodious and hospitable, likewise clean and charming, after the fashion of Japan, we send for the boy who brings our fishing tackle.

"They came waddling into the yard, the three birds with which we are to do our fishing. Black cormorants they are, each with a white spot behind its eye, and a hoarse voice, come of standing in the water, with which it says y'eagh whenever a stranger makes a friendly overture. The cormorants answer to the name of Ou, which in Japanese is something like the only word the cormorants can say. The boy puts them in a box together and we set off across the drifted gravel to the Tamagawa. Arrived at the stream, the boy takes the three cormorants out of the box and adjusts their fishing harness. This consists of a tight ring about the bottom of the neck, of a loop under each wing, and a directing line.

"Two other boys take a low net. They drag it down the stream, driving the little fishes and all the rest before it. The boy with the cormorants goes in advance. The three birds are eager as pointer dogs, and apparently full of perfect enjoyment. To the right and left they plunge with lightning strokes, each dip bringing up a shining fish. When the bird's neck is full of fishes down to the level of the shoulders the boy draws him in, grabs him by the leg and shakes him unceremoniously over a basket until all the fishes have flopped out.—Outing.

PANAMA ROUTE WINS IN SENATE

Spooner Substitute for Hepburn Bill Is Successful.

PRESIDENT GIVEN AUTHORITY

If a Clear Title to the Panama Route Can Be Secured He Is to Acquire It, Otherwise the Nicaragua Route Is to Be Chosen.

Washington, June 19.—Senate.—An isthmian canal, while not yet absolutely assured, is nearer to construction than it ever has been. The senate today, by a majority of 8 votes, adopted the Spooner substitute for the Hepburn Nicaraguan canal bill, the vote on the substitute being 42 to 34. After two amendments to the measure had been adopted, one providing for a commission to supervise the construction of the canal and the other providing for the issuance of $130,000,000 of 2 per cent gold bonds to raise money with which to construct the waterway, it was passed by a vote of 67 to 6. It has been evident for several days that the Spooner substitute, which instructs the president to select the Panama route, if he can obtain a clear title to the Panama Canal company's property, but otherwise he shall adopt the Nicaragua route, would command the votes of a majority of the senate. The Panama route was considered more desirable by the senate than the Nicaragua route. The only question left open is the title to the property, and that the president will determine, if the house should adopt the senate's amendment to its bill. Morgan, of Alabama, closed today's debate with an earnest appeal for the adoption of the Nicaragua route. He had been preceded by Clark, of Montana, in support of the Nicaragua route, and Allison, of Iowa, in support of the Spooner proposition. Only minor amendments, except those indicated, were adopted, all others being voted down.

NO AGREEMENT REACHED.

Senate Republican Caucus Adjourns to Meet Again.

Washington, June 19.—The republican senators held a conference last night on the subject of Cuban reciprocity, and after a flood of short speeches adjourned until next Friday without action of any sort.

Seventeen senators, one after another, announced unalterable opposition to a reduction of the duty on Cuban sugars, and announcement was made that two others not present stood with them. Senators Platt of Connecticut and Spooner of Wisconsin took the lead in behalf of the proposed legislation and endeavored to convince the beet sugar senators that the measure they had framed jointly would not injure any American interests, but their speeches made no impression on the opposition and the conference adjourned until Friday at the desire of the friends of Cuban reciprocity in order that they might have a last opportunity to try to agree on a measure that the beet sugar senators will accept. It was the general opinion after the conference that this session of congress would adjourn without Cuban reciprocity legislation of any sort.

ARE SEEKING AFTER UNITY.

New York Democrats Hold a Love Feast.

New York, June 20.—Democratic unity was the keynote last night of a great gathering of representative democrats who had come to attend the opening of the handsome new quarters of the Tilden club. Addresses were made by prominent democrats and afterwards a collation was served in the banquet hall to the distinguished guests of the evening and a buffet supper was served in the basement for the rank and file.

To democrats the event was one of the most memorable for many a day, as Grover Cleveland and David B. Hill met in harmony, seeking to unite the factions of their party. It was the first public political appearance of the ex-president in five years.

He spoke first. Ex-Senator Hill spoke after his and then Governor A. J. Bontague of Virginia and Colonel W. A. Gaston of Boston delivered addresses.

William J. Bryan had been invited to attend, though not to speak, but no reply was received from him.

FIVE COW BOYS WERE KILLED.

Uneven but Successful Battle Against Greater Number.

Albuquerque, N. M., June 23.—Five cowboys have been killed in a fight near Tucumcari with "Bud" Lee, of Dona Ana county, and an old Indian fighter. Lee, in watering his cattle at a certain spring, had walked them through the water against the protests of other cattlemen, who warned him that if he repeated the act he would be killed. The next time Lee, accompanied by an Indian fighter, appeared with his cattle, eight cowboys were lying in wait. When the battle that followed was over five of the eight cowboys were dead and the other three had fled. Lee and his partner, who were unhurt, surrendered to the sheriff. The names of the dead are not given.

PRESIDENT IS DETERMINED.

Will Secure Reciprocity for Cuba if it is Possible.

Washington, June 23.—The president discussed the Cuban reciprocity with several members of congress. His callers included Senators Allison, Foraker, Proctor and Beveridge and Representative Long of Kansas. From a source close to the president it is learned that he is still firm for reciprocity. If this cannot be accomplished by a bill he will attempt to secure it by a treaty. This treaty may be sent to the senate. Soon, or the president may call an extra session of the senate for the middle of summer or for November. He is determined to secure reciprocity for Cuba if possible.

WILL NOT RESIGN AT ONCE.

Mr. Roberts Will Retain Position Until Fiscal Year Ends.

Washington, June 20.—George E. Roberts, director of the United States mint, was interviewed concerning the purchase of the Iowa State Register at Des Moines. He was asked if he would resign his position. "It is likely that I will go to Des Moines and assume charge of the Register before very long," Mr. Roberts said. "I shall not give up my office here until the end of the present fiscal year, however. The paper comes into our hands on June 30. I expect to go to Iowa next week and will remain in Des Moines for a short time."

Lord Gower once asked Millais whether he should call him "Sir John," or, as Lady Millais did, "Sir Everett." He answered: "Well, you see, mydear fellow, my wife married John Ruskin before she did me, and that makes her dislike the name of John."

In the supreme court of California, it is not uncommon to see a learned justice's shoes on the desk while court is in session. It is one of the trite anecdotes of the California bar that Justice McFarland, sitting with his feet on a level with his head one day, fell over backward; whereupon Chief Justice Beatty remarked aloud that his learned brother had certainly reversed himself in a most astounding manner.

A raw Irish volunteer, during the late war in Cuba, was discovered by the sergeant of his company in a hole well out of the way of even a stray shot, when he should have been engaged in active service. "Get out of that hole!" commanded the sergeant, sternly, "get out of it this minute!" The broad Irish face looked up at him with stubborn resistance written on every feature. "You may be my superior officer," he said, boldly, "but all the same, Oi'm the wan that found this hole fir-rst!"

When Collis P. Huntington was married for the second time, Henry Ward Beecher performed the marriage ceremony. Huntington's first wife had been dead less than one year, and he desired the second marriage to be kept secret until his return from Europe. He gave Mr. Beecher a marriage fee of $1,500. When Huntington returned, some months later, he went through a public ceremony, and Beecher again officiated. He gave Beecher another fee of $1,500. The great preacher had his humor aroused by this second fee. Turning to Huntington, he said: "Collis, I do wish you were a Mormon."

The Secret of Health in Old Age.
Shepherd, Ill., June 23d.—Sarah E. Rowe of this place is now 72 years of age and just at the present time is enjoying much better health than she has for over 20 years. Her explanation of this is as follows:

"For many years past I have been troubled constantly with severe Kidney Trouble, my urine would scald and burn when passing, and I was very miserable.

"I am 72 years of age and never expected to get anything to cure me, but I heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills and thought it would do me no harm to try them.

"I am very glad I did so, for they cured me of the Kidney Disease and stopped all the scalding sensations when passing the urine.

"I feel better now than I have for twenty years."

The U. S. Civil Service Commission will hold examinations during September and October, in several places in each state, to secure young men and women for the government service. There will probably be 11,000 appointments next year. Salaries at appointment vary from $660 to $1200 a year with liberal promotions afterward. Those desiring to take examinations of this kind can get full information about them free by writing to the Columbian Correspondence College, Washington, D. C., and asking for the Civil Service Catalogue for 1902.

Right now is a good time to muzzle your dog, or at least keep a close watch of him. Mad dogs are numerous this year all over the country. At the little town of Ellsworth in this state a mad dog has done lots of damage. Nine residents of that town were compelled to go to Chicago for treatment on account of being bitten by the dog with the rabies. One of the patients died. It is not doing too much to keep close tab on the canines. At the first symptoms of hydrophobia, kill the dog. It's the only sure way.

The Chicago Weekly Inter Ocean is the only weekly newspaper published in Chicago in connection with the great daily papers. It contains a judiciously selected summary of the news of the nation and world, the best stories, home, farm, women's, and other special departments, and fair, patriotic, able editorials, written from a Republican view point. It is by far the best general newspaper of the western states. The regular price for the Weekly Inter Ocean is $1.00 and for the TIMES $1.00, but subscriptions will be received at this office for the two papers in combination for one year for only $1.45

Our readers' attention is called to the statement of the State Savings Bank of Klemme in this issue. The statement shows a healthy increase of business, which should be very gratifying to its officers.

Saved From an Awful Fate.

"Everybody said I had consumption," writes Mrs. A. M. Shields, of Chambersburg, Pa., "I was so low after six months of severe sickness, caused by Hay Fever and Asthma, that few thought I could get well, but I learned of the marvelous merit of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, used it, and was completely cured." For desperate throat and lung diseases it is the safest cure in the world, and is infallible for coughs colds and bronchial affections. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at Harr's.

Pianos at a Great Reduction.

Chicago's leading music house, Lyon & Healy, has just bought for a fraction of their usual cost, the surplus stock of several Eastern piano manufacturers. These splendid pianos will be offered with out reserve until all are sold. Also they offer a wareroom full of slightly-used and second-hand pianos, including insturments of the following well-known makes: Sterling Huntington, Chase, Vose, Fischer, Weber, Chickering, Steinway, Knabe, Hardman, Kurtzman, New England, etc. In square pianos there are fine toned instruments of all the leading makes at $25, 40, 60 and upwards. In Upright pianos neat instruments at $100, 120, 140, 150, 165, 190, 200 and upwards. In Parlor and Concert Grands some nice specimens at $250, and upwards. Nearly all these pianos were intended to sell for much more than these sale prices. This is an opportunity that will not occur again Immediate attention is therefore necessary. Lyon & Healy will send a list and full particulars upon application. Any piano not proving entirely satisfactory may be returned at their expense. Address simply, Lyon & Healy, Chicago. Distance is no obstacle in taking advantage of this remarkable chance to obtain a piano, for, in proportion to the saving to be made, the freight charges are insignificant. Write today.

DOINGS IN AND NEAR ELL CENTER

Hurrah for the glorious 4th.

Mrs. John Christie visited her daughter, Mrs. Rice, Friday.

Wm. Ax has improved the looks of his residence by a coat of paint.

Jacob Stork's little child has been very sick but is better at this writing.

Delbert Slaight's were called to mourn the loss of their little infant last week.

Several of our young sports attended the ball game at Garner last Thursday afternoon.

The Center school drove over to the Rice school last Friday and together closed their schools with appropriate exercises.

A goodly number of our people attended the picnic given by the Reform Sunday school in Mr. Barz' grove last Wednesday.

Our citizens will be scattered to the four corners of the earth the 4th, but probably the majority of them will go to Goodell to hear the bird of freedom scream and also cheer the Klemme ball players on to victory.

The Braund family held a reunion last Sunday, those being present were: R. E. Burman and wife, Ira Derr and wife, of Garner. Misses Karr and VanHoosen of Clear Lake, and John Braund and the Misses Frei, of Klemme, and they all had a pleasant time.

This community was shocked last Thursday to learn of the untimely death of their fellow-citizen, A. B. Shafer, and on Saturday nearly the entire populace turned out to honor their departed friend and citizen. One by one the old soldiers are answering the last roll call to stand before the King of Kings where no parting or death ever comes. The bereaved family have the sympathy of the entire community in their great affliction.

Acts Immediately.

Kanawha

From the Record:—

The promoters of the mutual telephone lines, southeast of Britt, held a meeting Monday evening and decided to drop the matter. Most of them are now negotiating for service from Kanawha.

We overlooked last week our item of the marriage of Will G. Schrader and Miss Katie Reiken, which took place June 16th. Will is one of the trustworthy young farmers north of town, where he is carving out a fortune and a happy home for himself and estimable young bride. Success to them.

Attention, Sportsmen!

Fishing season opens at Spirit Lake May 15. Best fishing place in Iowa. Suitable accommodations at reasonable prices can be secured at any of the many hotels and boarding houses.

A transfer bus will meet all trains of the B. C. R. & N. Ry. at Spirit Lake town and transfer passengers free of charge to and from "The Inn" and Arnold' Park. A bus will also meet all B. C. R. &N. trains at Montgomery and transfer all passengers free to and from Manhattan Beach.

A. B. SHAFER INSTANTLY KILLED

Our community was shocked and sorrow-stricken last Thursday afternoon upon hearing that Mr. A. B. Shafer had been accidentally killed by being caught between a threshing engine and the separator. He had gone out to Jacob Watermiller's place at Bailey's Grove with Henry Stroemer and Julius Preibe, to help run the outfit in from there. Mr. Shafer was backing the engine up to couple onto the separator. The engine came back with a sudden lurch, catching him between the boiler and the feeder of the separator, and killing him instantly. The accident happened at 3 o'clock.

Messrs. Stroemer and Preibe both had very close calls, Mr. Stroemer being on the platform with Mr. Shafer, and only by jumping did he save his life.

Mr. Shafer was a native of Virginia, coming to Hancock county with his family several years ago, first locating in Garner, afterwards removing to Klemme, being one of the first to start in business here. He leaves an aged father and mother in Pennsylvania, who sadly mourn the loss of an only son; also a loving companion who became his wife in youth; one daughter at home and three married daughters, all residents of Klemme.

A wide circle of friends extend their sympathy to the bereaved ones in their sad hour of affliction. A large delegation of the G. A. R., also the W. R. C. and Society of Mystic workers, together with the many friends, composed the vast audience which attended the funeral services held at the Eng. M. E. church conducted by the pastor, after which the remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at Garner. The church was beautifully decorated by loving hands and the floral tributes from the societies and friends were fine.

Abdon Barnhart Shafer was born Jan. 24, 1848, at Morgantown, W. Va. He received his education at the public schools, after which he taught school until he was married. He was converted at the age of 19 and united with the Goshen Baptist Church. He served four years in the war of the Rebellion enlisting at the age of 13 years and 8 months, going as a drummer boy. Sept. 6, 1868, he was married to Miss Priscilla Holland. Five children blessed this union the only boy dying in infancy. Four daughters are left to sustain the wife and mother in her declining years.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. A. B. Shafer and children desire to thank the members of the G. A. R., W. R. C. and Mystic Workers; and also their many friends who so kindly aided and sympathized with them in their recent bereavement and loss of a loving husband and father.

Poisoning the System.

It is through the bowels that the body is cleansed of impurities. Constipation keeps these poisons in the system, causing headache, dullness and melancholia at first, then unsightly eruptions and finally serious illness unless a remedy is applied. DeWitt's Little Early Risers prevent this trouble by stimulating the liver, and promote easy, healthy action of the bowels. These little pills do not act violently but by strengthening the bowels enable them to perform their own work. Never gripe or distress. J. L. Harr.

Corwith

From the Hustler.

J. E. Crane has sold his dwelling to Albert Mitchell, and contemplates the erection of a dwelling on his lots south of the M. E. church.

A. L. Poffenberger has accepted a position as agent on the Great Northern in Minnesota, therefore will not go into business in Corwith.

Married, at the bride's residence on wednesday, June 25, 1902, Rev. J. G. Waterman officiating, Mr. Gus Grimes to Miss Myrtle Hussong.

The wind storm Wednesday morning did considerable damage in a small way. Wm. Farrell's chicken house was moved into his neighbor's yard. A shed was blown away from Mr. Yeakel's barn. W. Izzard's chicken house was blown to pieces; and J. T. Gleaves' chicken house was turned upside down, and his cattle shed was moved from the foundation, lighting on and killing a full blood Short-Horn bull.

Vacation Days.

Vacation time is here and the children are fairly living out of doors. There could be no healthier place for them. You need only to guard against the accidents incidental to most open air sports. No remedy equals DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve for quickly stopping pain or removing danger of serious consequences. For cuts, scalds and wounds. "I used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve for sores cuts and bruises," says L. B. Johnson, Swift, Tex. "It is the best remedy on the market." Sure cure for piles and skin diseases. Beware of counterfeits. J. L. Harr.

Homeseekers Before buying a farm or locating elsewhere, ought to see the good farming and dairy lands along and contiguous to the line of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway. The soil is rich and highly productive of grains, and is a good stock country with markets in easy reach.

These lands are going rapidly and another opportunity will be given to all who desire to see them. On the first and third Tuesdays of June, July August, September and October, round trip tickets will be on sale at principal stations to points on this line in Northwestern Iowa, Southern Minnesota and Southwestern portion of South Dakota.

Call on nearest ticket agent for rates, etc., and see that your ticket reads via the C. R. I. & P. Ry.

There will also be on sale at stations of this company on same dates homeseekers excursion tickets at low rates to various other territory.

Mother Always Keeps It Handy.

"My mother suffered a long time from distressing pains and general ill health due primarily to indigestion," says L. W. Spalding, Verona, Mo. "Two years ago I got her to try Kodol. She grew better at once and now at the age of seventy-six, eats anything she wants, remarking that she fears no bad effects as she has her bottle of Kodol handy." Don't waste time doctoring symptoms. Go after the cause. If your stomach is sound your health will be good. Kodol rests the stomach and strengthens the body by digesting your food. It is nature's own tonic. J. L. Harr.

Round trip excursion rates will be in effect at all stations on the C. R. I. & P. Ry., in this territory for the Fourth of July. Tickets will be on sale July 3 and 4. with final return limit of July 7, to points within 200 miles of selling station. Full information will be cheerfully given upon application to C. R. I. & P. agents.

Saves a Woman's Life.

To have given up would have meant death for Mrs. Louis Cragg, of Dorchester, Mass. For years she had endured untold misery from a severe lung trouble and obstinate cough. "Often," she writes, "I could scarcely breathe and sometimes could not speak. All doctors and remedies failed till I used Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and was completely cured." Sufferers from coughs, colds, throat and lung trouble need this grand remedy, for it never disappoints. Cure is guaranteed by Harr. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

A number of Klemmeites attended the ball game at Garner Thursday. The game was too one-sided to be very interesting, Waseca winning over Algona by a score of 5 to 0.

Des Moines, June 27, 1902.

Chairman John Cownie of the board of control has returned from Council Bluffs, where he and Judge Kinne opened the bids on the temporary buildings and made awards. Peterson & Rasmussen of Council Bluffs received the award for the buildings, the price being $13,590. There were five other bidders. J. C. Bixby & Sons of Council Bluffs will be given the contract for plumbing and steam heating, the price being $4,300. The total price of the different contracts runs up to $17,000. The board of control has already been advised by the executive council that it can have $25,000 out of the providential contingent fund. This is practically all the money available for the board to make the proposed improvements at Council Bluffs. Taking out the sum of the contracts awarded at Council Bluffs, leaves $7,100 available for furniture and equipments. The temporary buildings that will be erected comprise a new school building, a new dining room constructed with the use of some of the walls of the main building not destroyed by fire, a storage room or ware house, a new industrial building, an office for the superintendent, a toilet annex to the old industrial building and the fitting up of two rooms in the old industrial building for dormitory purposes.

The board of control has received advises from Warden Jones of Fort Madison to the effect that he is having trouble in disciplining Matt Hunter, who was recently convicted and sent up from Ringgold county for the crime of killing Homer Holland. Hunter is proving extremely refractory. He refuses to work and says he was not sent to prison to work and he refuses to exert himself. Warden Jones has put Hunter in solitary confinement and is feeding him on bread and water.

Warden Hunter of Anamosa says Wesley Elkins is getting along well. He is still at the home of Professor James E. Harlan and is finding plenty of employment. He may enter Cornell college in the fall. Warden Hunter says Elkins was extremely reticent at first, but he has been kindly treated and has been invited to the societies of the college and other gatherings and is gradually losing his shyness.

The board of control has bought fifty-five acres of land just east of the building at the Glenwood institution for feeble minded, for $5,400, of P. A. Goyer. He asked $6,500. It was decided to erect the two cottages for which the legislature appropriated, recently, on the east side of the plat dedicated to buildings for the institution. It was found that to do this it would be necessary to secure additional land. Therefore, the purchase. The legislature appropriated $25,000 for land at this place and more will be purchased. The additional cottages are to be built this year. They are necessary to wholly separate the girls and the boys in the institution, and this is absolutely essential in a state asylum. Up to date the institution has on hand 535,000 brick, made by the inmates, at a minimum cost, and as one of the industrial features of the employment of the feeble-minded people. This represents a value of about $40,000. The brick will be used in the construction of the cottages referred to, the contractors taking the contracts on condition that the state furnishes the bricks on the ground. The enormous saving to the state is at once apparent.

The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy company has commenced the purchase of right of way for a new line between Oskaloosa and Tracy and will commence the work of construction at once. Tracy is located on the Des Moines and Albia division of the Burlington road thirty-eight miles south of Des Moines. The new line will be a little over twelve miles long and will include a bridge across the Des Moines river at a point three miles east of Tracy. The new road will connect up the Burlington & Northwestern road extending from Burlington to Oskaloosa and recently acquired by the Burlington company and will afford an air line between Des Moines and Burlington. The Burlington & Northwestern is a narrow gauge road, but arrangements have been made for changing it to standard gauge one week from today. Material has been distributed for this work and one rail along the entire distance will be moved over to standard gauge on that day. June 30 the operation of the road as a standard gauge will be commenced. With the completion of the twelve miles of road from Oskaloosa to Tracy the line between Des Moines and Burlington will be operated as the Des Moines and Burlington division of the Burlington road.

Dr. P. O. Koto of Forest City, state veterinarian, stated that rabies in Iowa is on the decrease. Dr. Koto for several weeks past has been assiduously engaged in visiting different parts of the state where this disease has been prevalent. When he was last in Des Moines he was very apprehensive and feared that strict precautions would have to be resorted to if the disease was stamped out. As a result of his vigilance, however, the situation is much improved and he feels confident that the greatest danger is passed. There have been no deaths since the two reported some weeks ago. Dr. Koto during the past week was in Sioux county, where he found a number of cases of glanders. This disease is somewhat prevalent in different portions of the state.

Charity covers a multitude of so-called sacred concerts.

Nearly every house and hut in Siam has a clock, and most of them are of American manufacture.

The smallest people in the world are the natives of the Andaman Islands, in the Bay of Bengal. They average three feet eleven inches in height, and about seventy pounds in weight.

Dr. Paul Carus, president of the Folklore association, in a recent lecture on Chinese literature, said that the Chinese, the Hebrews and the Saxons are the three toughest races and that they would survive all others.

"President Roosevelt doesn't smoke, at least not in his office during business hours," said an attache at the white house. "In fact, I have never seen him smoking anywhere, and I understand that he doesn't indulge in tobacco in any form."

It is stated that the residents of islands and small peninsulas live longer than persons who dwell on the mainland.

NEWS FROM THE HAWKEYE STATE

What Has Happened in Iowa During the Past Week.

MAY REFUSE INFORMATION

Said That Railroads May Decline to Furnish Monthly Reports to the Executive Council—Father Shoots Objectionable Suitor.

Des Moines, June 30.—There is a well defined rumor in political circles that the railroads which do business in Iowa may decline to furnish the information asked from them by the state executive council under the interpretation put on the English law by the governor and members of the council. This law gave the council power to prescribe rules and regulations governing the compilation and furnishing of information concerning the business of the roads in Iowa, as a basis for railroad property assessment.

Under this authority the council prepared certain blanks and rules requiring monthly reports from all of the railroads respecting the detailed income from four classes of business: The business originating in Iowa and going out, that originating out and coming in, and that wholly within the state. The blanks for the first monthly report on this line, for the month of April, have been in the hands of the roads since the adoption of the rules. While they were given sixty days in which to file the reports only two or three have been received by the officers of the executive council.

Now arises the rumor that the roads will find it impossible to furnish the detailed information asked for. It is said that they have been advised by the legal departments of some of the roads that the council is without the authority to require this monthly information in the shape in which it is solicited. It is even said that the council might be resisted in the courts if the reply of the railroads that they are unable to furnish the information is taken at its face. As a matter of fact, it is further said, the roads do not wish to furnish the information because the compilation of it would be enormously expensive.

MRS. HOSSACK RELEASED.

Goes to Live with Her Son-in-Law Near Medora.

Indianola, June 27.—Mrs. Margaret Hossack left her prison cell in the county jail, and went to the home of her son-in-law, E. E. Henry, in Squaw township, near Medora.

A week or ten days ago Judge Gamble ordered her release upon $15,000 bonds on account of her poor health. The bond has just been filed and Mrs. Hossack was let out of the county jail upon an order of the county clerk.

Twenty-one persons signed the bond. Practically all of them are farmers of Squaw and Virginia townships in the southwestern corner of the county where the Hossacks resided. Their combined wealth amounts to more than $100,000 so that the bond is entirely secure. There is no probability, however, that Mrs. Hossack will attempt to escape.

Of the persons who signed the bail bond about half were witnesses for the state in the trial a year ago.

Mrs. Hossack's sickness is said not to have been so severe as at first reported, and her life is not in danger. According to present indications, she will be tried at the September term of court, which begins on the 2nd of that month; Judge J. H. Applegate, of Guthrie Center, presiding.

JOE MACK BADLY INJURED.

He Fell While Attempting to "Loop the Loop."

Des Moines, June 27.—Joe Mack, the Diavolo of the Jabour Circus company, made his second attempt to "loop the loop" yesterday. He made nearly the entire circle, but just as safety and success seemed at hand and as the awe silenced multitude which witnessed the daring feat was about to break into cheers his wheel slipped from under him and he was badly injured.

Mack's jaw bone and collar bone were fractured and he sustained internal injuries, the precise extent of which have not been determined. He is resting easy at the hospital and Dr. Rood, his attending physician, states he may survive.

The bicycle feat of "looping the loop," that is, riding down an incline to secure momentum and then passing around the inner side of a perpendicular circular track, has never yet been sucessfully accomplished, advanced advanced amusement notices to the contrary notwithstanding. Mack's disastrous attempt yesterday was the eighth which has been made. The management of Jabour's circus has abandoned that feature of their performance.

OIL INSPECTOR NAMED.

Governor Selects Eleven Out of the Fourteen.

Des Moines, June 27.—Governor Cummins announced the names of eleven of the fourteen oil inspectors. With the exception of Capt. H. M. Pickel of Des Moines, who was reappointed, all of the oil inspectors were turned down by the governor.

The inspectors will enter on their term of office July 1. Those for the Sioux City, Fort Dodge and Dubuque districts were not named. They will be announced early next week.

The following is the list of the appointees:

Hugh M. Pickel, Des Moines; Charles S. Rogers, Mount Pleasant; Edwin I. Cameron, Davenport; Leroy Burch, Cedar Rapids; Robert A. Santee, Cedar Falls; S. W. Morgan, Marshalltown; Frank B. Rogers, Britt; William J. Scott, Ida Grove; Ed C. Brown, Council Bluffs; John B. Currie, Mount Ayr; P. Gad Seevers, Oskaloosa.

THEY ATE POISONED CHICKEN.

Twenty-five People Made Very Sick, Some Dangerously.

Oskaloosa, June 28.—As the result of eating some pressed chicken at a dinner party at Wright twenty-five people are very sick, some of them dangerously so. The dinner was served at the Ed Kent home and the pressed chicken served was made from fowls that had access to the barn yard where cholera medicine had been administered to hogs. There seems little doubt that this is the way the poison was communicated, as the agent who sold Mr. Kent the medicine told him it was poison. Dr. Sarbaugh has charge of the patients and says that unless some unforeseen complications arise they will

HUBBARD ESTATE LIABLE.

Fortune of the Late Judge Subject to Inheritance Tax.

Des Moines, June 27.—The estate of the late Judge N. M. Hubbard of Cedar Rapids has been reported to the state treasurer as subject to the collateral inheritance tax of the state. Only a small portion of the estate is taxable during the life of Judge Hubbard's widow. After her death, when the estate is divided, two-fifths will go to the two sons-in-law of the judge, G. W. Barton and John W. Nye, both collateral heirs. This amount will be subject to the five per cent collateral inheritance tax.

At present the judge's law library, which is valued in the neighborhood of $30,000, is subject to the tax. That is, one-half of the library will be assessed as only one-half went to collateral heirs. The library was left to Nat Hubbard, Jr., the son and direct heir of the diseased, and to his partner, F. F. Dawley, of Cedar Rapids. The latter's half interest is subject to the five per cent tax. A bequest of two horses from the judge to Charles E. Wheeler, who bore no relation to deceased, is also reported as subject to the five per cent tax. The value of these horses is not given.

In fact no figures whatever were submitted to the treasurer by the county attorney of Linn county, the report being simply a statement of facts as to the collateral inheritance. Judge Hubbard's estate, excluding his law library, has been valued at about $400,000. The assessment of two-fifths of this, which eventually will go to collateral heirs, means a clear gain of from $8,000 to $10,000 to the state. The library valued at $30,000 will yield a tax of $750.

GOVERNOR ON TARIFF.

MR. CUMMINS ISSUES A STATEMENT OF HIS VIEWS ON SUBJECT.

Hopes Republicans Will Readjust Declarations of Last Year's Platform.

Des Moines, June 28.—Governor Cummins has authorized a statement of his views on the tariff question and with respect to the declaration which the republican state convention of July 30th should make. He hopes that the convention will readopt the plank of last year's platform treating of tariff and trusts. The governor said:

"The platform of last year declared 'that we stand by the historic policy of the republican party in giving protection to home industries, and point for its ample vindication to the extraordinary rapidity with which our national resources have been developed and our industrial and financial independence secured. We favor such changes in the tariff from time to time as become advisable through the progress of our industries aond their changing relations to the commece of the world. We indorse the policy of reciprocity as the natural compliment of protection, and urge its development as necessary to the realization of our highest commercial possibilities. That we assert the sovereignty of the people over all corporations and aggregations of capital, and the right residing in the people to enforce such regulations, restrictions or prohibitions upon corporate management as will protect the individual and society from abuse of the power which great combinations of capital wield. We favor such amendment of the interstate commerce act as will more fully carry out its prohibition of discrimination in ratemaking, and any modification of the tariff schedules that may be required to prevent their affording shelter to monopoly.'

"This is the best expression of the republican position on trusts and tariff I have ever seen. It was written, as I have been informed, by George E. Roberts, who is equally distinguished for his clear conception of political principles as for the forcible way in which he defines them. It was approved, as I have been told, by President McKinley, and was adopted without a dissenting vote by the largest republican convention ever held in Iowa. I sincerely that the convention to assemble July 30th will declare exactly the same thoughts, for I believe that the position that the republicans of Iowa have been holding under the Cedar Rapids platform is unassailable."

GAS AT ANKENY.

Pecple of That Town Excited by the Discovery.

Des Moines, June 27.—A flow of natural gas, sufficiently large to send a blaze ten feet into the air when ignited, was struck on a lot owned by Samuel Allen of Ankeny, fifteen miles north of here. Jack Dahl, a well driller, residing at Carlisle, was horribly burned about the head and face when attempting to ignite the flow, and now lies in a critical condition from the injuries. Ankeny is in a feverish state of excitement over what is believed to be a permanent flow of gas and already plans have been proposed with a view to drilling deeper and storing the product for commercial purposes.

The fact that the flow was discovered in the immediate locality of the Allen property some two months ago indicates that there is gas in large quantities there and will undoubtedly interest capital in the matter of its development. The Allen property lies on the south side of the town not three blocks from the business center.

Well drillers from Carlisle were employed to drill a well on the place and reached a depth of about forty feet when the odor of gas was detected. The drill was sunk deeper and the odor increased. Finally Dahl lighted some shavings, threw them at the surface of the hole when a blaze ten feet in height leaped into the air. In the excitement of his injuries the blaze was smothered.

TO DEDICATE CONVICT'S HOME.

Institution Founded by Father Coffin of Fort Dodge to be Opened.

Fort Dodge, June 27.—The "Home for Discharged and Paroled Convicts," which has been founded by Father Coffin, the well known philanhropist of this city, will be completed and ready for dedication during the coming August. It is a beautiful building erected on ground donated by Father Coffin himself and in which large sums of money have been invested by him with a view to making a home for discharged and paroled prisoners. Father Coffin, although 80 years of age, has spent the entire past year superintending the work on this institution, which will be a lasting monument to his memory. It is one of the expectations of his life to live to see his plan for helping ex-convicts to get a start in the world, in operation. The institution is to be self-supporting eventually, but when the formal dedicatory exercises are held in August, an effort will be made to raise funds with which to start the ball rolling. There is much sympathy here with Father Coffin's project.

Temperance women in Maine have declared that it is small to ride in an automobile propelled by steam generated by alcohol.

$28,000 IS APPROPRIATED.

Executive Council Allows This Sum for School for Deaf.

Des Moines, June 26.—The executive council took final action yesterday on the appropriation for the school for the deaf at Council Bluffs. By unanimous vote the council decided to allow the full sum asked by the board of control, or $28,000, from the providential contingent fund.

There is $35,000 in the providential contingent fund and the appropriation by the executive council of $28,000 of this leaves but $7,000 to meet contingencies for the rest of the biennial period. The board of control appeared before the council and stated the necessities of the institution and the members of the council went over the amounts asked by the board item by item and decided to give the full sum asked. Until yesterday it had been expected the council would give but $25,000. From the first the council has indicated a willingness to give this amount, but some of the members were doubtful about exceeding it.

The appropriation of $28,000 will be paid out of the treasury on warrants from the auditor, issued in payment of bills that have been approved by the board of control and also given the approval of the executive council. The council thus retains the right to control fully the disposition of the fund.

With $28,000 the board of control will be enabled to proceed without embarrassment to the erection of temporary buildings and their equipment with first class furniture, such as will be available when permanent buildings are put up. The board of control was unwilling to be compelled to get along with $25,000, as this would have necessitated the use of cheap and temporary furniture and would have proved a loss to the state in the long run. The contracts for buildings, heating and plumbing already awarded by the board of control for the school for the deaf amount to $17,900, about $11,000 will be needed for furniture and equipments.

ATTACK FARM TAXATION.

Railroads Prepare to Retaliate Against Farmers.

Des Moines, June 26.—Judge J. C. Cook, general solicitor in Iowa for the C., M. & St. P. railway, has launched his fight against the executive council raising railroad assessments and stated that he would be able to make a showing, that if given proper consideration, would result in a reduction instead of an increase of the Milwaukee's assessed valuation. What he proposes to do is to show that the farm lands of Iowa are under assessed and appeal to the council as an equalizing board.

Plans entered into by the Milwaukee are of an elaborate character. They include the sending of a railroad attorney to every county in Iowa for the purpose of securing a record of all transfers of land and the consideration of the sales. Then each piece of property wil be investigated to learn what assessed valuation had been placed upon it. The statement is made by Judge Cook that figures show that the assessments will not average 1 per cent of the actual value and that there will not be a county in the state where assessed value will reach more than 15 per cent of the actual.

The examination of land transfers begun by Judge Cook will extend over a period of eighteen months, taking the year 1901 and six months of the year 1902. Judge Cook is here today looking up Polk county's transfers. He stated that he will be able to show to the council that the people who have been clamoring for increased taxation of railroads are the very ones that are under assessed.

It is evident that the railroads are preparing to resist to their utmost any increase of assessment of railroad property. Several roads have had attorneys here at various times. It is expected they will have more figures and oratory to offer the council at the railroad hearing than there has been in all the former hearings.

DYNAMITE UNDER DRUG STORE.

Building Wrecked and Stock Damaged —Motive Unknown.

Ottumwa, June 28.—For some mysterious reason which no one, either through fear or disinclination, will reveal, a charge of dynamite was placed beneath the drug store of the Hamilton Drug company, owned by J. H. Williams, of Hamilton, a little town about twenty-five miles west of Ottumwa. About 3 o'clock a. m. the charge was exploded, tearing a great hole out of the glass front of the building and wrecking the show cases and doing a considerable amount of other damage, inflicting a loss estimated by Mr. Williams at from $100 to $150.

Great indignation is manifested by the people of that place over this exhibition of lawlessness, and it seems that through fear there is no attempt made by the people of Hamilton to name the parties of the gang that perpetrated this act. Several times during the last decade attempts have been made to fire or destroy by explosion different buildings. Mr. Williams has been in business in Hamilton for the past two years, having resided for several years previous at Eddysville, and has always been known as a peaceful and loyal citizen and the reason for this attack upon him is a matter of the greatest mystery to the people of that place.

SHOOTING SCRAPE AT NODAWAY.

Samuel McKown's Way of Keeping Boys Away From Daughter.

Creston, June 30.—Much excitement was created in the little town of Nodaway, in Adams county, west of here, by a shooting affray in which one man was shot in the left arm.

The shooting was done by Samuel McCown, an old retired farmer, and Chas. Todd, a painter, was his victim. McKown shot three times at Todd, but only one shot took effect and that is not a very serious wound.

The shooting was the outcome of Todd's persistent attention to McKown's daughter against his wishes and commands and contrary to his warnings and threats. McKown was arrested and bound over to the grand jury under $10,000 bonds, which he furnished.

THE HUNT FOR STATISTICS.

Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Looking For Figures.

Keokuk, June 30.—As a result of the agitation in Iowa regarding railroad assessments, the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy is inaugurating one of the greatest pieces of statistical work that was ever undertaken in the state. In each of the thirty-four counties in which it has tracks the company is having men searching the records for a comparison of the market and assessed valuation of property. The report will give the ratio of assessed value to the actual market value during the past eighteen months. Live stock valuation is to be kept separately in the statistics. The report is to reach President W. W. Baldwin by July 5.

WEEK'S DOINGS IN CONGRESS

Business Transacted by the House and Senate in the National Capital.

CANAL BILL TO PRESIDENT

House Agrees to Senate Amendments—The Philippine Bill Passes the House Practically as It Came From the Committee.

Washington, June 24.—Senate—The senate today passed bills creating a national forest reserve in the southern Appalachian mountains and ratifying the agreement between the Cnoctaw and Chickasaw Indians of the Indian Territory and the United States. The first bill provides for the purchase of 4,000,000 acres in the southern Appalachian system to cost not to exceed $10,000,000. The secretary of agriculture is to designate the lands to be purchased and is to take measures to preserve the hardwood forests which they bear. Quay, of Pennsylvania was unable today to secure consideration for his motion to discharge the committee on territories from further consideration of the omnibus statehood bill, but gave notice that he would demand that it be taken up tomorrow.

House.—Two notable speeches marked the closing of the general debate on the Philippine civil government bill in the house today. They were made by Landis, of Indiana, republican, and by Williams, a Mississippi democrat. There were big demonstrations after each concluded. The other speakers today were Ball, of Texas, Jones, of Virginia, Shafroth, of Colorado, and Crumpacker, of Indiana. The latter closed the general debate for the bill with a strong speech.

Washington, June 25.—Senate.—In a few minutes today the senate disposed for this session the omnibus statehood question, which has been pending for several days. Beveridge, of Indiana, chairman of the committee on territories, announced that a report on the bill before the committee would be made on the third day of the next session. This was satisfactory to Quay, of Pennsylvania, who, after securing an agreement that the committee's report should be the unfinished business on and after the 10th of December until it was disposed of, withdrew his motion to discharge the committee from further consideration of the matter. After McCumber, of N. Dakota, had discussed the pending food bill, and Gallinger, of New Hampshire, had delivered an extended argument to show that the present prosperity of the country was due to the operation of the Dingley tariff law, the senate took up the calendar and passed a large number of bills of minor importance. The conference report on the army appropriation bill was agreed to thus passing that measure and eliminating the friction which has existed between the two houses over it.

House.—The Philippine civil government bill was thrown open to amendment in the house this morning. Very slow progress was made, only fifteen of the fifty pages of the bill being completed. By an amendment offered by Bartlett, of Georgia, cases involving the construction of the constitution can be appealed from the supreme court of the island to the supreme court of the United States, and by another offered by Littlefield, of Main, one corporation in the islands is prohibited from holding stock in another. These were the only amendments of importance adopted. The earlier portion of the day was devoted to consideration of conference reports on the sundry civil, army and navy appropriation bills. The house adopted a proposition agreeable to the senate with reference to the disputed items in the army bill, and by a vote of 63 to 95 refused to agree to the senate amendments to the naval bill providing for five submarine torpedo boats.

Washington, June 26.—Senate.—During comparatively brief time the senate was in session today the conference report on the isthmian canal bill was agreed to, and the general deficiency bill, the last of the big supply measures, was passed. A slight protest was made against the appropriation of $500,000 for the Buffalo exposition and $160,000 for the Charleston exposition, but finally they were included in the bill. The measure also carried $45,000 for the payment of the expenses of the last days of President McKinley, that amount including the payment of the physicians.

House.—At 8 o'clock tonight, at the end of a nine-hour session, and of a debate lasting night and day for a week, the house passed the Philippine civil government bill practically as it came from the committee. It was a party vote—141 to 97—with the exception of McCall of Massachusetts, who voted with the democrats. The minority substitute for the ... ment of a temporary ... the islands and their p... pendence as soon as a ... ment could be established ... ed by a vote of 95 to 136. The debate during the day was at times of a lively character. The democrats offered a multitude of amendments, but they were voted down, including one offered by Patterson, of Tennessee, to prohibit slavery or involuntary servitude in the islands. The greatest interest attached to an amendment offered by McCall (rep.) of Massachusetts, to declare the policy of the U. S. to be developed in the capacity of the Filipinos for self-government and pledging the faith of the United States to grant them self-government. He supported the amendment in an elegant speech, and the democrats challenged their political adversaries to declare their future policy. Grosvenor of Ohio, and Cooper of Wisconsin said it would be unwise to mortgage the future by making such a declaration now, and the latter quoted Governor Taft as saying that such a promise now would tend to prevent the pacification of the islands. The amendment was lost—89 to 129. It was a strict party vote, except for McCall and Littlefield of Maine, who voted with the democrats for the amendment. Before the consideration of the Philippine bill was resumed today, the house, by a vote of 250 to 8, adopted the conference report on the isthmian canal bill, thus accepting in toto the senate bill. The bill now goes to the president.

Washington, June 27.—Senate.—Quite unexpectedly a sharp debate arose in the senate today on the question of Cuban reciprocity. Teller of Colorado, at whose instance the senate committee on Cuban relations made its report of the subject, delivered a spirited speech in opposition to reciprocity with Cuba. He charged that the entire reciprocity propaganda had been backed by the American Sugar Refining company, and by Americans who were interested financially in Cuban sugar plantations. The purpose, he said, was to strike down an important agricultural industry in this country. He was willing to join in a general revision of the tariff to meet changed conditions, but unless the duties on iron and steel and other products were reduced together with those on sugar in order that the arrangement may be equal, the beet sugar growers never would consent to a reduction on their product. Platt, of Connecticut, chairman of the Cuban relations committee, replied to the Colorado senator. He maintained that there was nothing sordid in the desire to promote reciprocal relations between the United States and Cuba, and said the making of some concessions to Cuba was a plain duty to this country. It was a duty which this government owed to itself as well as to Cuba, because friendly relations with the new republic was a necessary means of defense to this country, unless the United States should annex the island. That, he hoped, would not be done, as he regarded annexation as a grave menace to our institutions.

House.—The contested election case of Horton vs. Butler, from the Twelfth Missouri district, was under consideration.

Washington, June 28.—Senate.—A lively debate was precipitated in the senate today over a resolution of Morgan of Alabama, authorizing the committee on interoceanic canals to investigate the status of the American stockholders of the Panama Canal Co. with a view of protecting them in the French court. Spooner of Wisconsin, Hanna of Ohio, and Mitchell of Oregon, antagonized the resolution, maintaining that it was a matter with which the United States had nothing to do. Morgan warmly advocated the proposition, but it finally went to the calendar without action. Deboe and Blackburn of Kentucky engaged in an interesting but good-natured discussion of Kentucky politics, in the course of which the former alleged that the reason why Governor Taylor did not return to Kentucky and stand trial as an accessory to the murder of Governor Goebel was that the courts were corrupt and that the $100,000 reward offered for the apprehension of the murderer of Goebel had been used to corrupt the court and bribe witnesses. This Blackburn emphatically denied, and declared that he was so thoroughly convinced of Taylor's guilt that he would be willing to submit the case to any judge and any jury in the United States.

House.—When the house adjourned tonight the general deficiency bill and one item in the naval appropriation bill was all that remained in dispute between the two houses, so far as the appropriation bills are concerned. The conference report upon the District of Columbia bill was adopted and it now goes to the president for his signature. Earlier in the day the house decided the contested election of Horton vs. Butler, from the Twelfth Missouri district, by declaring the seat vacant. By a vote of 100 to 136—a strict party vote—Butler, who is also a democrat, was decided not entitle to his seat. Butler made a vigorous speech of an hour in defense of his right to the seat. The Dick militia bill was made a continuing order not to interfere with conference reports.

VAST DAMAGE BY STORM

WIDE SECTION OF INDIANA COMPLETELY DEVASTATED.

Only Two Deaths Reported, but Scores Were Seriously Injured.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 26.—The entire north central portion of Indiana was visited yesterday by one of the most disastrous storms that ever swept over the state. The storm swept sections covered hundreds of miles, extending from Hancock county northwest through the northern portion of Marion county, Hamilton and Boone counties, and did much damage in Tippecanoe and adjacent counties. Madison county also felt its fury.

Thousands of buildings were razed, tens of thousands of trees were uprooted and now blockade the highways, railroads and traction lines; crops are utterly ruined, causing a loss estimated at nearly $2,000,000, and fifty persons were more or less injured.

But two deaths have been reported. James Van Hoy was caught in the ruins of a collapsed barn near Pendleton and killed, and James Bailey was killed by flying timbers at McCordsville.

The course of the storm was southeast and northwest. Its path was clear across the state. In the ruins left behind are many factories, churches, school houses and residences.

RATHBONE ASKS EXAMINATION.

Petitions Congress for an Investigation of His Administration.

Washington, June 30.—E. G. Rathbone, who was formerly director general of posts of Cuba and was convicted in Cuba on charges involving maladministration of his office has petitioned congress to order a congressional investigation of all his acts in Cuba. The petition is based on allegations that the proceedings which led to his conviction were not judicial, but were special and irregularly conducted; ex parte evidence was admitted in the absence of the petitioner, and the trial court refused to summon witnesses in his behalf; that evidence vital and material to his defense was withheld and that the evidence of the principal witnesses of the state was not given under oath.

The petition recites that under the Cuban laws a defendant in a criminal trial is not required to be sworn, and cannot be punished for perjury if he gives false testimony. This witness, the petition alleges, was convicted under the same proceedings as the petitioner, but was pardoned on turning state's evidence. He also took advantage of his position as a witness for the state to secure his pardon.

M'ARTHUR IS COMING.

He Will Accompany the President to Council Bluffs Reunion.

Council Bluffs, June 30.—Samuel Knox, who has charge of the correspondence of the local organization of the National Society of the Army of the Philippines, has received a letter from Major General Arthur MacArthur of the department of the lakes, stating that he is planning to be here during the entire three days of the third annual encampment of the society, which is to be held here August 13, 14 and 15. President has already signified his intention of being present and taking an active part.

President Noyes C. Robinson of St Paul has also notified the local organization that he will be here with a large delegation from his state and that an effort will be made to take the fourth annual encampment of the society ... that city.

The girl who steels her heart will not have it stolen.

In response to a missionary's appeals for various articles for use on an African farm, a milking-stool was sent to him from England. He gave it to the negro whose duty it was to milk the cows, with injunctions to use it. On the first day the negro returned home from the cow-sheds, bruised and battered, but with an empty pail. When the missionary asked for an explanation, the negro replied: "Milk stool very nice, massa, but she won't sit on it!"

General Forrest, the dashing confederate leader, having had no opportunities for study in early life, did virtually all his correspondence during the war through Major Strange, his adjutant-general, who was considered a very accomplished man. It was only on stray occasions that the general allowed his illiteracy to be known. A soldier came to him a third time, asking for a furlough. Twice it had been refused, for all the men were needed that could be secured at that time. When the application appeared the third time, General Forrest, in his own handwriting, indorsed on the back of it: "I told you twist (twice) Goddammit know," and the man knew he meant no.

Taking a Man Unawares.

Bland, Mo., June 30th.—F. B. Crider describes very graphically how he was overtaken by an enemy and his narrow escape, he says:

"For years I have been troubled with Kidney Disease which came on me so gradually that I did not know what it was until the pains in my back warned me that it was Kidney Trouble.

"I began treatment at once and used one medicine after another, but without help, till at last I was just about to give up in despair.

"Just then I heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills and bought a few boxes and began to take them. They helped me from the first and now I am completely cured. Dodd's Kidney Pills is the only medicine that ever did me any good. They are worth their weight in gold."

You may not this season be able to build a new one, or make the radical changes in the old one that you have in contemplation, but there is no school district in the United States that can not afford to tint with Alabastine the interior of their buildings, thus making them more attractive, getting colors made with special reference to their effects on the eyes of the pupils, getting a sanitary and rock base cement coating that will not harbor disease germs.

HERPICIDE

BEAUTY IS NEVER COMPLETE without a thick, luxuriant head of soft, glossy hair, which is in truth "woman's crowning glory." The faithful use of Newbro's Herpicide never fails to produce hair of this character, for, by destroying the deadly germs that feed upon the oil of the hair root, it makes dandruff, falling hair and all scalp diseases impossible. It then promotes a new and thick growth to replace the old thin, brittle hair.

One bottle will verify these statements.

[CHA]PTER 50.

[Ma]tt[hew] Brand!" [the] never always possessed for [him] a peculiarly strong interest, and he was eager to glean the particulars.

"Well, it isn't given to most of us to see a man hung, and then meet him afterward alive and well. Tell me about it, Charlie, my boy."

"There isn't a great deal to narrate. At the time an insurrection in Chili was causing the most intense excitement, and some very bloody battles were fought about Santiago.

"I chanced to be, as I said, in Valparaiso. One day I found myself in a crowd of excited citizens and soldiers, in the midst of whom stood a prisoner—a spy, caught red-handed, upon whom they were about to execute summary judgment.

"That was Captain Nathaniel.

"The word was given, and I heard a roar from five hundred throats as the wretch was jerked off his feet.

"One moment I saw him as he dangled in space, hands and feet striking out wildly—a spectacle I shall never forget to my dying day.

"There came a sudden shot, and Kedge fell to the ground in a heap—some one had cut the rope with a well-aimed bullet.

"Immediately the deuce of a row broke out, but bless you, the affair died away as speedily as it began, and then, gradually, it dawned upon the minds of the crowd that a great hoax had been successfully carried out.

"For when they looked for Kedge, in order to complete their artistic little job, behold! the man who had already been partially hung had disappeared, nor were they able to discover him, though Valparaiso was thoroughly searched.

"That is my little story, and I am almost ready to swear that our Capt. Brand in yonder is the identical Kedge, grown a little gray in the service of beating the world, but just the same old sixpence."

Artemus nodded, and they separated for a time.

But their meeting had not been unobserved.

Charlie went back to Arline and Capt. Brand, and the three chatted for a while.

Then Arline graciously consented to play several favorite pieces, while Charlie idly glanced through a book made up of fugitive songs and music.

It was while doing this he suddenly came upon an opportunity to make another test of the man's identity. So Charlie handed the well-worn book of music to the fair girl.

"Play that for me—an old favorite—always revives pleasant recollections."

Charlie was so situated that a side glance into a massive pier glass gave him an excellent view of the man who had arisen from the dead.

What Stuart had so accidentally, yet fortunately, come across was the Chilian National Hymn. He watched the effect upon Capt. Brand.

When the first rather weird notes of this Spanish-American music throbbed upon the air, Brand sat bolt upright upon the divan.

Involuntarily he seemed to gasp for breath; his tongue partly protruded from his mouth, as though he were being choked, while his hand crept up to his throat and clutched his loose collar, as if to tear it away.

There was no longer the faintest doubt remaining in his mind.

This was the man!

Finally they said good-night.

Charlie managed to whisper a few sentences in Arline's ear while the captain waited at the door, so that he was assured of seeing her again on the morrow.

Capt. Brand led her away.

One smiling glance she sent back over her plump shoulder—gods! what a thrill it gave the bachelor who received it!

Here was a miracle.

He felt dazed—felt as though he walked in a dream. He who had scoffed at such a ridiculous thing as love at first sight, who had always declared the holy passion a flower of slow growth, founded upon mutual friendship and esteem, now discovered his theory in utter ruin, and not only that, but himself engulfed in the chaotic debris.

Finally he aroused himself to a realization of the fact that there were a few more people in the world besides Arline Brand.

How about the baron? Had he learned of his mistake by this time with regard to the identity of the Countess Isolde?

The idea of taking Arline for the fascinating countess was absurd. How could so shrewd a man have been deceived? Why did an occasional lingering doubt still find lodgment in Charlie's heart. No woman could play such a game. Arline must be what she seemed. Hank Peterhoff and his miserable warnings!

So he trusted blindly.

If there was a pit, he would fall into it, headlong, for love had already blinded him.

Or was the Russian bear still on guard?

Could the hotel be surrounded by his emissaries, ready to entrap the wonderful adventuress?

Having decided to smoke a weed and take a look around ere retiring to his bunk, Charlie lighted up and sauntered toward the open door leading to the street.

When he stepped out of the hotel door, he was astonished to discover little knots of men, dressed in the well-known uniform of the Antwerp gendarmes, standing near the Hotel de la Paix.

Then it burst upon him that he had not placed enough significance upon what the baron had confided to him. This did not mean the mere arrest of a clever adventuress, charged with no specific crime save that of enslaving men of rank, and compelling them, through her witchery, to contribute from their wealth toward her regal support. It stood for something grander, something that might yet shake a greater part of Europe with a mighty convulsion, since the conspiracy in which the Countess Isolde was connected concerned more than one imperial throne.

Charlie forgot that he had been sleepy.

His eyes were never brighter than now.

It seemed that the countess had finally made a stupendous blunder, and Peterhoff's hour of triumph was at hand.

It would mark an epoch in the lives of many prominent men in Europe when Isolde Brabant vanished behind the walls of a military fortress.

Some who had been in the toils would breathe easy for the first time in many moons, and drink a bumper to her long residence in her new and exclusive palace.

So Charlie watched and waited, deep in reflection.

When his cigar was about half consumed, he thought he would saunter down the street a short distance, to see what effect, if any, his appearance might have upon the officers on guard.

The result was really more than he had anticipated.

He had not gone more than a dozen paces before, without the least warning, he felt a rough hand laid roughly upon his arm.

As he turned to see what was wanted, a second hand gripped his other arm.

A bended face looked into his own.

"Messieurs, I am afraid you—" he began.

"Silence!"

"Have made a little mistake."

"Silence on your life!" was hissed.

He saw frowning pistols.

It was evident that the officers meant business.

Charlie began to grow a little indignant.

"See here! send for the baron!" he insisted.

"He is engaged."

"But he is my friend—he will be angry with you for making so ridiculous a blunder."

"So. But we carry out his orders. Now, not a word more, mynherr."

"Confound—"

"Do you hear? Not one word, on your life!"

Charlie shrugged his shoulders.

Ah! a whistle!—evidently a signal.

The game was about to be called.

Even as he stood there, held fast by his captors, he saw a man enter the door of the hostelry.

It was Peterhoff.

Another and another followed, until Charlie had counted a round dozen.

At the same time there was a stretching of lines in the street. Signals passed from mouth to mouth, and Charlie understood that the well-known Hotel de la Paix was in the center of a strong cordon of officers, through which escape was impossible.

Alas! for the countess! It was her hour of doom!

He listened, swayed by contending emotions.

Somehow Arline was in his mind.

Perhaps there might be a fight.

Some of those who would be found in the society of Isolde Brabant were desperate men, connected with anarchists and nihilists, sworn to reduce society in Europe to one dead level.

They might take their lives in their hands and endeavor to give battle.

Still, the awful influence of Peterhoff's dreaded name was sufficient, under ordinary conditions, to freeze the fighting blood in the veins of most men, however brave they might be.

To his surprise, he heard no shot, not even a shout or a scream.

The baron's sudden appearance in their midst must have paralyzed the conspirators.

Presently they would be trooping forth under escort, to be hurried away to gloomy prison cells.

And as for himself.

Charlie smoked calmly on.

This was another experience, that was all.

He seemed bound to suffer in the cause of Arline Brand. Because she chanced to resemble the notorious Countess Isolde in possessing an entrancing figure, and also golden hair and eyes that rivaled the summer skies of Italy, forsooth, the baron must fall into error and bring about this entanglement.

Well, perhaps all things would work together for good, if he but put his shoulder to the wheel.

And the cause was one in which he could stand considerable knocking about with complacency.

He watched the hotel door.

The baron would be sorry on account of his blunder. Naturally, he would want to make amends, and Charlie had already concluded to enlist his valuable services in the work of unmasking Captain Brand.

If anybody could accomplish this matter, surely it was Peterhoff, whose long experience and facilities for securing information would stand him in good stead.

Ah! there were signs of life.

A number of sombre closed vehicles came dashing down the gassen.

They drew up before the hotel.

A few loungers gathered in the doorway out of idle curiosity. Heads appeared at the windows across the way, as though some spirit of intuition, passing through space, gave warning that strange events were occurring.

Charlie's captors began to move along toward the hotel door, and of course, he was forced to accompany them.

He was still twenty paces away when the baron came out, bearing upon his arm a lady with a sylphlike form, but who was heavily veiled.

Charlie's traitor heart leaped at sight of her. The graceful carriage was so like that of Arline, so queenly and perfect.

Yet he knew beyond peradventure that this was the countess who had finally fallen into the toils of the fowler.

Charlie was inclined to rush and seize upon his friend, the baron; but those two guards held his arms in a grip of steel.

Attract the attention of Peterhoff he could not, since the other had eyes only for the woman at his side, knowing his men were capable of executing the orders previously given.

So he assisted her into a vehicle and swept one last glance around.

Charlie cried out.

Other sounds there were in the street just then. At any rate, the baron never vouchsafed a single look in his quarter, but waved an arm, jumped into the vehicle and was gone.

By this time the gendarmes were issuing from the hotel, each with a companion, most of the prisoners being gentlemen.

As fast as the vehicles were filled with guards and captives they dashed away.

Charlie's turn came. He attempted a protest, but was roughly shoved along and thrust into one of the closed vehicles, which presently lumbered down the street.

And so the innocent suffered with the guilty.

WALKING AN AID TO LONGEVITY

With Many Centenarians It Was the Favorite Form of Exercise.

Walking appears to be the form of physical exercise most favored by centenarians. It is related of one MacDonald, who died in Highlands, Scotland, in 1791, aged 101: "He was a great pedestrian, and the year before he died, at the age of 100, undertook on a wager to walk ten miles in two hours and a half, which he performed. He was accordingly presented to the king at Windsor."

Colonel George Perkins of Norwich, Conn., who died thirteen years ago, aged 100, made a practice of walking four miles a day until within a few years of his death. Mary Wilkinson of Yorkshire, England, who in 1788 died at 109, walked to London when she was 90. The distance was 230 miles. She made it in five days and three hours. Mary McDonnell, a vigorous old woman of Magheratempany, Ireland, in 1784, when 117, walked fourteen miles.

Sally Morris, who recently died near Parkersburg, W. Va., at the age of 113, had, up to two years previous to her death, walked twenty miles to town and back one day in each week.

A conspicuous number of centenarians have enjoyed their favorite sports and pastimes even in their very last days. Sieu Dason de Veger of Lourday, France, who died in 1744, aged 118, "rode hunting fifteen days before his death." Bartholowey Rymer, Yorkshire gamekeep who ended a century of vigorous life in 1791, "Shot game flying in his 99th year." One Hastings, an Englishman, dying in 1650, "rode to the death of a stag when near 90." In the last century of his life he was a fisherman and swam the river after he was 100.

All these instances, says the Rochester Post-Express, prove the value of out-of-door exercise as an aid in the prolongation of life.

A MIDNIGHT CALL UPON METHUEN

Soldier's Sense of Human Not Destroyed by Hard Work.

The recent capture and release of Lord Methuen by the Boers has given rise to a number of stories relating to this unlucky commander's career in the army, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Long before the Boer war began Lord Methuen was campaigning in South Africa at the head of the famous band of rough riders known as Methuen's Horse. A member of the regiment, G. L. Chesterton, has since made a reputation as a worker in the field of London journalism, and he it is who tells this anecdote of campaigning on the borders of Bechuanaland:

"When we were encamped on the big hill overlooking the Setlagoli River, not very far from Mafeking, Lord Methuen used to occupy a common bell tent, near to which slept a couple of his orderlies and myself, his field trumpeter. One dark night the Hon. 'Dick' Cotton came stumbling into camp and, endeavoring to discover the whereabouts of the commander, approached us, shouting in a high voice: 'Paul, I say, Paul, where are you?' Presently from the inside of the tent came a more sonorous sound: 'Is that you, Dick? What do you want?' The jaded wayfarer remarked: 'Do you know, Paul, that I asked one of your men where I could find you, and he told me to go to ——!' Without a moment's hesitation Lord Methuen replied: 'Come inside, Dick, come inside.'"

The Successful Wooer.

Men would have a great deal more chance of success in their wooing if they understood better how girls like to be wooed. As it is, they have no idea on the subject that is at all useful, and many a lover's suit is unsuccessful just because he is ignorant of a girl's tastes in that direction.

Now, if girls had the matter in their own hands they would manage very differently. To begin with, they would never play the bashful lover. There is nothing less calculated to make a girl say "yes" to the important question than the wooing of a lover who is shy.

She despises a man who can't have courage enough to ask her boldly, and when he stammers and hesitates over it, instead of walking up boldly to the lion's mouth, he reduces his chances to a minimum, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Above all things, woman delights in feeling the superior strength of man. When he comes and asks her to be his wife with a fine, bold front and manly bearing, the battle is half won.

She respects and admires him for pressing his suit with decision, and when she begins to admire a man love does not lag far behind. The trembling, timorous lover never commands her respect.

CIVIL RULE OPENS JULY 4

MILITARY RULE WILL END ON THAT DATE.

General Chaffee Will Remain in Command of Military Department.

Washington, June 28.—It was stated at the war department this afternoon that the entire Philippine archipelago will be placed under control of the civil authorities, as represented by the civil governor and the Philippine commission, on the Fourth of July, and that General Chaffee's functions as military governor of the provinces now under military control will terminate on that date. General Chaffee, however, will remain in command of the military division of the Philippines and will assist the civil authorities in the preservation of peace and good order whenever called upon to do so. The effect of this policy will be the complete establishment of civil government throughout the entire Philippine archipelago on American Independence day. The military will everywhere be subordinate to the civil authorities as it is in the United States.

It was further stated that the Moros will be allowed to continue their tribal relations for the time being and will be governed under practically the same conditions as the American Indians until it is demonstrated that civil government may be advantageously established througout the province of Mindanao.

OPPOSE ADJOURNMENT.

DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS DEMANDS ACTION BY CONGRESS.

Relief for Cuba, Anti-Trust Legislation and a Reduction on Duties on Trust Controlled Articles.

Washington, June 28.—A caucus of the democratic members of the house of representatives, held last night, unanimously adopted the following declaration:

"Resolved, First—That we condemn the republican majority in congress for their failure to pass a measure providing for reciprocity with Cuba.

"The bill which passed the house of representatives was heartily supported by the democratic minority, after the protection to the sugar trust had been removed by the solid democratic aided by the small minority of the republican members. As it passed the house, the bill carried relief to Cuba, reduced the price of sugar to American consumers and struck a heavy blow at the notorious and obnoxious sugar trust. The refusal of the republican senators to consider this measure unless the protection to the sugar trust should be restored gives evidence that the president and republican party in congress are willing to refuse relief to Cuba and totally ignore American consumers rather than abandon their alliance with the trusts.

"The failure of all reciprocity legislation with Cuba rests upon the republican administration, which is willing to reduce the duty on the raw sugar of our producers, but unwilling to destroy the sugar monopoly.

"Second—That the republican majority in congress is dominated and controlled by the trusts and monopolies, which have the great industries of the country in their grasp, as shown by its action in passing an anti-trust bill through the house of representatives in the Fifty-seventh congress in the closing hours of the session, the senate refusing to consider the same as a subterfuge to tide over the election of 1900. That bill has been abandoned and they have since refused and do now refuse and fail to bring in any measure to suppress the trusts or to favorably report any of the numerous anti-trust bills introduced by democratic members during this congress.

"Third—That we favor the immediate passage of a measure to amend the present anti-trust law so as to more fully protect the trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and also a measure to reduce the duties on all articles and commodities manufactured and controlled or produced in the United States by a trust or trusts so as to destroy such illegal combinations, and to reduce the rate of duty on any article or commodity manufactured in the United States and sold in a foreign country more cheaply than in the United States.

"Fourth—We oppose the adjournment of congress until the measures above mentioned have been enacted into law."

FAIR SLAYER GUILTY.

Jury in Jessie Morrison Case Renders Verdict Against Young Woman.

Eldorado, Kan., June 30.—Miss Jessie Morrison was found guilty of murder in the third degree for the killing of Mrs. Olin Castle. It took the jury twelve hours to agree upon a verdict, and the final decision was unaccompanied by any suggestion regarding punishment. The young woman will probably be sentenced early next week, and it is expected that her counsel will then make another desperate attempt to have the case appealed once more.

This was Miss Morrison's third trial. Her first trial was fought bitterly and resulted in a disagreement of the jury. On the second trial she was found guilty of manslaughter and sentenced to imprisonment for five years. After two months in the penitentiary she was released on bail, her appeal having been granted by the state supreme court, which decided last February that she was entitled to another trial.

Self defense was the plea, and Miss Morrison was confident that she would be acquitted. She came into court this morning accompanied by her aged father, H. M. Morrison, formerly a circuit judge, and her brother Hayward. When the foreman announced the verdict she threw herself upon her father's breast, and the two wept convulsively. She said later that the only reason of her conviction lay in the hostility of the judge presiding.

DELAY IN SMITH CASE.

Charges Against General Will Not Be Acted Upon for Some Days.

Washington, June 30.—It is announced at the war department that the case of General J. H. Smith will not be acted upon finally before the end of this week at the earliest. Judge Advocate General Davis has completed his review of the proceedings of the court martial and the papers are now in the hands of Secretary Root, who is so busy with other matters that he has not yet had time to give the case the attention it deserves. It has been generally understood that General Smith was acquitted by the court, but it transpired today that such was not the case, the court, it is alleged, having found General Smith guilty of violating the rules of war and sentenced him to be reprimanded by the reviewing authorities, which in this case is President Roosevelt. Inasmuch as the case is considered strictly confidential until finally acted on by the president, it is impossible to obtain any official information in regard to it.

DURING SUMMER MONTHS

Dr. Hartman Gives Free Advice to Suffering Women.

MISS LIZZIE SNEATHING

MRS. ALEX. JOHNSON

Dr. Hartman, the Famous Gynaecologist and Inventor of Pe-ru-na Offers to Treat Women Free During the Summer Months.

America is the land of nervous women. The great majority of nervous women are so because they are suffering from some form of female disease. By far the greatest number of female troubles are caused by catarrh.

Women afflicted with pelvic catarrh despair of recovery. Female trouble is so common, so prevalent, that they accept it as almost inevitable. The greatest obstacle in the way of recovery is that they do not understand that it is catarrh which is the source of their illness. In female complaint, ninety-nine cases out of one hundred are nothing but catarrh. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

The following letter was recently received:

186 W. 38th st., New York City.
The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

Gentlemen:—"What bread and meat means to the hungry Peruna means to the sick. It is an especially valuable medicine for sick women. I have found that no medicine so quickly restores health and places the body in a normal condition. I but voice the sentiments of women who were once sick, but are now in perfect health."

MISS LIZZIE SNEATHING.

All women who are in doubt as to what their trouble is should write Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio. Give him a full description of your trouble, previous treatment, symptoms and age. He will promptly reply, with full directions for treatment free of charge. This is an opportunity which no ailing woman should miss. Dr. Hartman has become renowned through his success in treating women's diseases. His experience in these matters is vast. Correspondence is strictly confidential. No testimonials published without written consent.

Dr. Hartman relies principally upon Peruna in these cases. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

Mrs. Alex. Johnson, 256 University avenue, Kingston, Ontario, Can., writes:

"I have been a sufferer for years with bearing down pains and backache, and got no relief from doctor's prescriptions. I commenced taking Peruna and after taking the first bottle I felt much better and within a month I was a well woman, and heartily recommend it to any woman who is in as poor health as I was."

Miss Mabel Meyers, Argentine, Kansas, collector for the Kansas Temperance Union, writes: "Peruna has proved a friend to me for it cured me when I was sick and the least I can do in return is to acknowledge its value to the public. Since I was 17 years old I have suffered with headache, backache and pains in the shoulder blades. I caught cold easily and my lungs were weak. Catarrh of the lungs was what the doctors called my trouble. I took their medicine for eighteen months without any benefit and hearing about Peruna I decided to try it. I used nine bottles and was restored to health. This was two years ago, and I am now in perfect health."

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be glad to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

WANTED 5 YOUNG MEN from Hancock County at once to prepare for Positions in the Government Service. Apply to Inter-State Corres. Inst.,
Cedar Rapids, Ia.

The Hancock teachers' institute will be held at Britt commencing Monday, July 14, and continuing 2 weeks. Supt. Deyoe has taken great care in selecting instructors and hopes to make it the largest and best institute held in the county. All teachers are urgently requested to attend.

The Klemme band, as per schedule, got up from their comfortable beds last Thursday morning at 4 o'clock, and drove in the cool morning air to Garner. with the expectation of taking the excursion train to the Woodman picnic at Spencer. When the boys arrived at Garner they were informed that there was no transportation there for them, as they were promised, so we disbanded right there. Some of the boys went to Spencer and had a good time, and some returned home. It was a very shabby trick on our boys and one they will not forget soon, either. The Garner fellows might at least have informed our boys of the condition of affairs and saved them the trouble and expense in driving to Garner. It seems to us that the Klemme band is entitled to an explanation, at least. Who will explain? Don't all speak at once.

Don't Fail to Try This.

Whenever an honest trial is given to Electric Bitters for any trouble it is recommended for a permanent cure will surely be effected. Bert Crawford and his efficient corps of carpenters have their Kanawha church nearly completed. They had a big set back on account of the cyclone demolishing the building just as they got nicely started. Part of the force is now building a big barn for Wm. Schlei.

The Chicago Weekly Inter Ocean is the only weekly newspaper published in Chicago in connection with the great daily papers. It contains a judiciously selected summary of the news of the nation and world, the best stories, home, farm, women's, and other special departments, and fair, patriotic, able editorials, written from a Republican view point. It is by far the best general newspaper of the western states. The regular price for the Weekly Inter Ocean is $1.00 and for the TIMES $1.00, but subscriptions will be received at this office for the two papers in combination for one year for only $1.45

Pianos at a Great Reduction.

Chicago's leading music house, Lyon & Healy, has just bought for a fraction of their usual cost, the surplus stock of several Eastern piano manufacturers. These splendid pianos will be offered with ont reserve until all are sold. Also they offer a wareroom full of slightly-used and second-hand pianos, including insturments of the following well-known makes: Sterling Huntington, Chase, Vose, Fischer, Weber, Chickering, Steinway, Knabe, Hardman, Kurtzman, New England, etc. In square pianos there are fine toned instruments of all the leading makes at $25, 40, 60 and upwards. In Upright pianos neat instruments at $100, 120, 140, 150, 165, 190, 200 and upwards. In Parlor and Concert Grands some nice specimens at $250, and upwards. Nearly all these pianos were intended to sell for much more than these sale prices. This is an opportunity that will not occur again Immediate attention is therefore necessary. Lyon & Healy will send a list and full particulars upon application. Any piano not proving entirely satisfactory may be returned at their expense. Address simply, Lyon & Healy, Chicago. Distance is no obstacle in taking advantage of this remarkable chance to obtain a piano, for, in proportion to the saving to be made, the freight charges are insignificant. Write today.

Poisoning the System.

It is through the bowels that the body is cleansed of impurities. Constipation keeps these poisons in the system, causing headache, dullness and melancholia at first, then unsightly eruptions and finally serious illness unless a remedy is applied. DeWitt's Little Early Risers prevent this trouble by stimulating the liver, and promote easy, healthy action of the bowels. These little pills do not act violently but by strengthening the bowels enable them to perform their own work. Never gripe or distress. J. L. Harr.

Notice

Notice is hereby given to property owners to cut all weeds and grass on the streets and alleys abutting their property, in the incorporated town of Klemme. If not cut by the 18th of July, the street commissioner will be ordered to cut them and the cost will be charged to the property owners.

KLEMME IS ON THE MAP

WOODARD TOOK THE FOOT RACE

Most of the Klemme people celebrated Independence Day with our neighbor on the south, and nearly everyone enjoyed the day immensely. The Goodell people tried to show their visitors a good time, but were badly handicapped on account of the washout on the Rock Island, which delayed supplies and made it impossible for people to get to the town on the train.

Klemme sports were there full force and our people captured nearly everything in sight. The ball game went to Klemme, and the 100 yd. foot race went to Woodard, of Klemme, and several other prizes went to our citizens.

The speech and morning exercises were fine and greatly enjoyed.

The horse races in the afternoon attracted a large crowd to the Old Town.

THE FOOT RACE

Mel. Woodard, of Klemme, won the 100 yard foot race, and Bash Nissen, of Klemme, got third money. The Goodell fast man, who has been beating Woodard with his mouth for the past two months, wasn't in it, Woodard winning easily.

THE BALL GAME

The ball game between Klemme and Meservey was not as interesting as was expected, the Midgets defeating the Meserveyites easily. A hot, close game was expected, and Meservey money was free before the game, but, oh, what a difference after the game started. Meservey money could not be found. The final score was 12 to 8. Our boys had one bad inning, the seventh. Aside from this agony they put up a nice game.

Meservey batted first, and one hit and a combination of errors netted them two runs. In the second they made one, the result of hits by Ell and Courtney. For the next four innings they went out in one, two, three order. Then came the seventh, that awful inning in which every Meservey man faced our pitcher. Errors and hits were thick and five runs were made. After that the Meservey batters got up, only to go back and sit down.

Joe Nissen was the first man up for Klemme, and Brower gave him a free pass to first. He stole second. Braund fouled out. Baumgartner got a base on balls, and he and Nissen scored on Crawford's hit. Kluckhohn and Schoper were retired at first. In the second, errors on the part of Meservey and hits by Carlson, Braund, Baumgartner, Kluckhohn and Schoper netted Klemme six runs. One was made in each of the next two innings, followed by two goose-eggs. Just to cinch the game, two more were made in the seventh.

Lee Louick, of Belmond, umpired the game in a fair and impartial manner, satisfactory to all concerned.

Batteries — Klemme, - Flint, Kluckhohn and Nissen. Meservey–Brower, Russell and Ell.

The score by innings:

Meserv'y–2 1 0 0 0 0 5 0 0— 8

In spite of the fact that last week's Democrat reported our third baseman at Hot Springs for his health, he was in the game at Goodell and acted as healthy and spry as a kitten.

Kluckhohn, Ell, Nissen and Crawford each have credit for a two sacker.

May 29, at Meservey—Klemme 9; Meservey 8.

July 4, at Goodell—Klemme 12· Meservey 8.

'Nough said.

Vacation Days.

Vacation time is here and the children are fairly living out of doors. There could be no healthier place for them. You need only to guard against the accidents incidental to most open air sports. No remedy equals DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve for quickly stopping pain or removing danger of serious consequences. For cuts, scalds and wounds. "I used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve for sores cuts and bruises," says L. B. Johnson, Swift, Tex. "It is the best remedy on the market." Sure cure for piles and skin diseases. Beware of counterfeits. J. L. Harr.

Homeseekers Before buying a farm or locating elsewhere, ought to see the good farming and dairy lands along and contiguous to the line of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway. The soil is rich and highly productive of grains, and is a good stock country with markets in easy reach.

These lands are going rapidly and another opportunity will be given to all who desire to see them. On the first and third Tuesdays of June, July August, September and October, round trip tickets will be on sale at principal stations to points on this line in Northwestern Iowa, Southern Minnesota and Southwestern portion of South Dakota.

Call on nearest ticket agent for rates, etc., and see that your ticket reads via the C. R. I. & P. Ry.

There will also be on sale at stations of this company on same dates homeseekers excursion tickets at low rates to various other territory.

Mother Always Keeps It Handy.

"My mother suffered a long time from distressing pains and general ill health due primarily to indigestion," says L. W. Spalding, Verona, Mo. "Two years ago I got her to try Kodol. She grew better at once and now at the age of seventy-six, eats anything she wants, remarking that she fears no bad effects as she has her bottle of Kodol handy." Don't waste time doctoring symptoms. Go after the cause. If your stomach is sound your health will be good. Kodol rests the stomach and strengthens the body by digesting your food. It is nature's own tonic. J. L. Harr.

HOW MANY—

Men give to the alms seeker without regard to worthiness.

Women have no idea as to how men pass their leisure hours.

Women think it no harm to resort to trickery to appear to advantage.

Women fail to appreciate the struggle it is for a man to meet financial demands.

LITTLE CLASSICS.

Buy what thou hast need of, and ere long thou shalt sell the necessaries.—Franklin.

He that thinks he can afford to be negligent is not far from being poor.—Johnson.

The minutes saved by hurry are as useless as the pennies saved by parsimony.—C. B. Newcomb.

Saves a Woman's Life.

To have given up would have meant death for Mrs. Louis Cragg, of Dorchester, Mass. For years she had endured untold misery from a severe lung trouble and obstinate cough. "Often," she writes, "I could scarcely breathe and sometimes could not speak. All doctors and remedies failed till I used Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and was completely cured." Sufferers from coughs, colds, throat and lung trouble need this grand remedy, for it never disappoints. Cure is guaranteed by Harr. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, July 7, 1902.

Lafayette Young of the Capital returned from Washington, and at a conference of some of the members of the executive committee in charge of the entertainment of the Odd Fellows' Sovereign Grand lodge reported that President Roosevelt had said to him that he intended to be in Des Moines during the week in September when the lodge meets in this city. This is the first direct assurance of the president's intention to come here received by Iowa Odd Fellows.

Judge C. A. Bishop qualified as judge of the supreme court to succeed Judge Charles M. Waterman of Davenport on the 1st. Judge Bishop will hold office until his successor has been elected and qualified. It is assumed he will be his own successor and that he will be nominated at the coming convention without opposition.

City Physicians Smith says the smallpox has been stamped out of the city. "The pest house is cleaned out," said Dr. Smith. "There is not a smallpox patient there and the city is free from the contagion. It cannot be said this is due to the warm weather, for the weather has not been favorable. It has been due to the good work of the city authorities in taking hold of the disease properly, and the health department deserves credit.'

Judge McVey has announced that he is not ready to announce his decision in the test suit brought on the Griswold building and loan law to ascretain whether or not its provisions applying to non-resident corporations transacting business in the state are valid. He states that Attorney General Mullan had expressed a desire to be heard in behalf of the state and that he has decided to set aside the recent submission of the case and to order a retrial. This is the case in which J. W. Brady, an agent of the Co-operative Mutual Home Association of Kansas City, sought release by habeas corpus. He was arrested on the charge of soliciting a building and loan association contract for a company that had not complied with the section of the Griswold law requiring the deposit of real estate mortgages, etc., with the state auditor. In his application for a writ he claims that the law is unconstitutional for the reason that it is an attempt to impose unwarranted regulations upon a legitimate business and for the further reason that the requirements made by the law amount to a prohibition.

On the Fourth a party of boys were snooting fire crackers and had with them a dog that evidently had been taught to retrieve. One of the boys lit a dynamite cracker and threw it some distance away. Immediately the dog made a rush for it, and despite the calls of the boys, took the big cracker between his teeth and started to return with it when it exploded. The dog's head was literally blown to pieces by the force of the explosion, it was thrown some distance and did not get up. It was killed almost instantly.

The committee on arrangements for the entertainment of the republican state convention July 30 has decided to put the picture of President Roosevelt on the badge to be presented to delegates and others at the convention.

The fourth annual meeting of the County Attorneys association of Iowa will be held in Des Moines at the Savery hotel July 28 and 29. D. W. Telford of Mason City is the president of the association, and John McLennan of Des Moines is secretary.

On July 7, 8, 10, 12, 14 and 16 a rate of one and one-third, on the certificate plan will be granted on all railroads within a radius of one hundred miles on account of Midland Chautauqua, Des Moines, good returning to and including July 23, when duly certified by the secretary and joint agent. For full information apply to E. C. Musgrave, secretary, 118 Second street, Des Moines, or local agent.

When Ringling Bros.' circus exhibits in Des Moines, Monday, July 14, the people of this vicinity will see not only the biggest and greatest arenic exhibition ever given by these progressive managers, but they will also witness a performance that is novel and original from beginning to end. Ringling Bros. have been remarkably successful this year in securing European novelties of a high order, and these new importations are as numerous as they are clever. Most of them have been engaged for only one season, and they return to Europe at the close of the circus year. Among the new features are several trained animal acts of a most sensational character, including comedy elephants, juggling seals and other educated beasts. The show opened the season in Chicago, and the three weeks engagement there was successful beyond all precedent. The Chicago Inter Ocean, speaking of the performance in that city, declared that they surpassed in magnitude and interest anything of the kind ever seen there. The exhibitions in Des Moines will be identically the same. This means a great triple ring performance with over a hundred big feature acts, to say nothing of a colossal horse ballet—the newest and most brilliant display of its kind ever attempted. An augmented menagerie, with thirty elephants and a splendid specimen of the giraffe, a tremendous revival of the old Roman hippodrome and a new street parade, are incidental features that will arouse local enthusiasm.

Ping—"Are Mrs. De Style's entertainments very exclusive?" Pong—"Well, I should say so; she has just made application to have the conversation of her guests copyrighted."

"Who is the hero of this piece?" asked the man who was coming out of the theater. And the manager thoughtfully replied: "The man who is putting up the money."

Willy (over his natural history)—"Papa, what species of animals in this country are becoming rapidly extinct?" Papa—"Buffaloes and naval heroes, my son."

In the long run actors make money.

"This poem would be good but for one thing," remarked the editor. "Whats that?" inquired the poet. "It isn't."

"Will you share my humble lot?" begged the suitor. "Yes; if there's a cottage on it," answered the crafty maid.

Nell—"Did Miss Bilyuns act as if it was a severe blow when she didn't get the prince?" Belle—"Yes; she took the count."

"Life is not all sunshine,' remarked the pessimistic individual. "No!" exclaimed the man who was examining the thermometer; "and that's where we're lucky."

NEWS FROM THE HAWKEYE STATE

What Has Happened in Iowa During the Past Week.

WAR ON SIOUX CITY SALOONS

Petitions For Injunction in Thirteen Liquor Cases Have Been Filed—Judge McClain to Annotate Code Supplement—Green Grapes Kill Three Children.

Sioux City, July 3.—With the filing of thirteen injunction suits against saloon keepers the Woodbury County Anti-Saloon League yesterday opened a campaign which promises to be a hot one. Heretofore the league has not been very successful in the prosecution of violaters of the Martin law. The ministers of the city are thoroughly aroused. They declare they will now pursue different tactics, and they expect to force saloon men to comply strictly with the statutes.

Some of them have been visiting the saloons in disguise in order to procure evidence against the saloon men. They say nearly every saloon in town has been violating the law, selling at all hours of the night and using back doors. The ministers have a list of forty-eight liquor dealers whom they intend to prosecute.

Rev. Charles Williams, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, and president of the league, today issued a proclamation explaining the league's purpose.

Rev. T. E. Carter, of Sioux City, who has been a Methodist pastor in the northwest Iowa conference for twenty years, has just been elected superintendent, to fill the office which has been vacant ever since Rev. H. C. Marshall accepted the superintendency of the Iowa Anti-Saloon League.

RIOTS AT CELEBRATION.

Both Dubuque and Webster City Have a Bad Time.

Dubuque, July 7.—Four brothers, Jack, Jim, Frank and Billie Williams of this city, notorious for their disposition to pick quarrels on the least occasion, thought they would try their hand at the picnic held near Julian. One year they broke up the gathering; this time they were not successful. They started a fight and at the end Jack, Jim and Billie were laid out with gunshot wounds and are now at Mercy Hospital. Jack is almost certain to die. Others present were injured but not seriously.

Webster City, July 7.—A disagreeable riot at night closed the Fourth of July celebration in this city. Dan Wren and his two sons, George and Ed, started the fray. They began a fight on Second street at a time when it was jammed with thousands of people. In a few minutes twenty or thirty people were hammering each other and the crowd about them to a finish. Fifty extra police had been sworn in and a squad of these in charge of E. C. Litchfield and P. W. Lee charged the mob. They fought for fully half an hour. Blood flowed freely and heads were broken galore. Quiet was not restored until the three Wrens had been pounded into insensibility. Much difficulty was experienced in getting the brawlers to the jail. The streets were so jammed that a patrol wagon was out of the question. The rioters were literally dragged a block and a half to the jail. Over most of this distance the officers had to fight. With the Wrens in jail, however, the matter ended.

IOWA GETS WAR WINDFALL.

State Receives From National Government $56,417.89.

Des Moines, July 7.—A small and insignificant looking piece of paper, bearing the name of Leslie M. Shaw, secretary of the treasury, and good for nearly half a million dollars, reached Governor Cummins Saturday. It was a warrant drawn by Secretary Shaw himself in favor of the state, and in payment of Iowa's claims against the federal government for interest on war bonds and warrants. The exact sum turned over to the state is $456,417.89.

This is practically the full sum claimed by the state. The warrant was sent to Governor Cummins, unaccompanied by a letter or even a voucher. It is expected these will follow. The warrant was endorsed and turned over to the treasurer of the state by the governor. It will go into the general fund and will swell the balance therein to the comfortable sum of about $1,400,000. The balance in the general revenue fund at the close of June was a little more than $954,000.

The important question is, what will be done with the increased revenue? There is little doubt the executive council, when it makes its annual levy, will take the money received on the war claim into account. Inquiry among the members of the council has developed this fact.

New Canning Plant at Grimes.

Des Moines, July 7.—The new canning plant at Grimes, in which Des Moines is largely interested, and which will be the first plant to be erected in Polk county for the canning of corn, tomatoes and a general line of canned goods, is fast nearing completion. The building is all but done, and the work of installing machinery is now under way. The plant will be ready to receive garden truck in thirty days. This plant will have a capacity this season of 80,000 cases of two dozen cans each. Next season it is proposed to nearly double this. This season it will be operated almost entirely upon corn, though a considerable acreage of tomatoes has been contracted for.

Cutting Affray at Centerville.

Centerville, July 6.—A shocking cutting affray took place out in the Relay addition to Centerville. As a result Sam Whitely, colored, is locked up in the county jail and Martha White, also colored, is lying at the point of death. Just how the trouble was started is not known. Whitely was intoxicated and the two became involved in a quarrel. Drawing a knife from his pocket, he attacked the woman, cutting her face, arms and breast in such a dreadful manner that the physicians have no hopes for her recovery.

Stamps Step-Daughter to Death.

Burlington, July 3.—Mrs. Edward Edwards has been arrested charged with the murder of Viola Edwards, her 4-year old step-daughter. The coroner's jury found that the child came to its death by being stamped and tramped on by Mrs. Edwards. The woman, who is in jail here, says a strange man killed the child. Mrs. Edwards is Edward's third wife. The child was adopted by Edward's second wife.

DAMAGE BY STORMS.

Great Loss in Vicinity of Anthon and Whiting.

Sioux City, July 6.—A funnel-shaped cloud struck Anthon, a small town on the Cherokee and Onawa branch of the Illinois Central. Several thousand dollars worth of property was destroyed. A large house of William Kissinger was completely demolished and the family barely escaped with their lives by entering a cyclone cellar. Over a dozen barns were overturned, and there is scarcely a small building in the town that is not destroyed. The strong wind lasted only for a few minutes and was accompanied by a heavy downpour of rain.

Council Bluffs, July 7.—Saturday night's storm has proved to be much worse than was imagined at the time. The towns of Anthon and Whiting seem to have fared the worst and the farming community around these was devastated. All small buildings were destroyed. Trees were uprooted, barns were wrecked and windmills razed to the ground. There has been no loss of life reported, as the storm had given sufficient warning and nearly every one in the country swept had taken refuge in their cyclone cellars.

At Whiting a Mrs. Campbell was slightly injured when her home was moved from its foundation, but her condition is said to be not serious. The farmers have been the worst sufferers. Thousands of acres of small grain are lying flat on the ground, and as it was so nearly ready to be harvested there is doubt of it raising sufficiently to be cut by the harvesters. The bottoms along the small streams of Woodbury and Monona counties are flooded and many bridges have been damaged or swept away.

COLLATERAL INHERITANCE.

Treasurer of State Collected $103,000 of Such Tax Last Year.

Des Moines, July 3.—Deputy State Treasurer John S. McQuiston, has made a report of the collections of collateral inheritance tax for the year ending June 30. The total number of estates paying tax are 306, aggregating $103,730.77. The banner month was last April when collections were made from 39 estates, the receipts being $14,531.55. The greatest amount was collected last July when the receipts amounted to $15,301.04, but this was paid by only 31 estates. The amount paid in last December is also told in five figures, $10,565.11, from 33 estates. By months the collections were as follows: July, 1901, 31, $15,301.04; August, 17, $4,720.96; September, 26, $5,985.45; October, 20, $5,709.02; November, 31, $7,950.05; December, 33, $10,565.11; January, 1902,12, $8,316.08; February, 19, $7, 320.01; March, 27, $7,378.52; April, 39, $14,531.55; May, 26, $6,225.73; June, 25, $9,726.35.

LEGALITY ELECTION TESTED.

Rubber Stamps to Play Important Part in Municipal Election.

Creston, July 2.—The legality of a municipal election at Lorimor has been questioned because rubber stamps were used in affixing the names of candidates to the official ballots instead of having them printed thereon in the regular manner. The claim is made that the names were filed in time but through a misunderstanding did not get on the ticket. As a last resort they were stamped by the voter, the result being the election of those candidates. The old officers qualified on the ground that the election of the new officers was illegal because of the rubber stamps. The new men went before Judge Towner and secured permission to begin quo warranto proceedings. This has been granted and the suits for ouster begun. Many fine legal points are involved in the controversy. In the meantime Lorimor has two sets of officers.

BOLD NEGRO IS ARRESTED.

Worsted an Officer and Disarmed Him Ater Being Downed.

Iowa City, July 2.—Frank Hamilton, a negro, was arrested here charged with assault with intent to kill a policeman in Davenport, Ed Brehmer, and with committing robbery. It is alleged that Hamilton slashed the officer in the face with a razor, in an attempt to escape, after the policeman had arrested him. Brehmer knocked down his assailant, and the man, while prostrate, kicked him in the stomach, drew a revolver from the officer's pocket, and one out of his own, and fled across the river, holding the officer at bay with the two weapons. When captured here Hamilton had a gold watch and $40 on his person. Officer Brehmer came here from Davenport, identified the prisoner, and took him back to Davenport to stand trial.

THE CANNON CRACKER.

Newton Boy Loses Both Eyes and His Right Hand.

Newton, July 5.—Master Rex Hook, the 15-year-old grandson of Sheriff C. H. Hook of this city, lost both eyes and his right hand yesterday by the explosion of a cannon fire cracker The accident occured at 4 o'clock a. m. The boy had arisen early to celebrate and with a number of playmates was touching off crackers, both large and small. The cracker which exploded was one of the enormous size The explosion occurred when the boy was not expecting it to and, therefore he got the full force in his right hand, which held the cracker, and both eyes were put out in the twinkling of an eye.

DES MOINES ALMOST READY.

Big Crane Placed in Position to Receive Cruiser When Launched.

Boston, July 2.—The parts of the new 75-ton gantry crane are being assembled along the fitting-out basin of the Fore River ship yards, at Quincy Point, and work on the concrete dock that will support it is being hurried so that everything may be in readiness to bring the cruiser alongside as soon as she is in the water. The machine shop is finishing the cruiser's propeller hubs and her engines are being set up. The ports and hawsepipes have been cut, especially designed machinery operated by compressed air being used for the former. The caulking of the pine sheeting below the water line is nearly done.

GREEN GRAPES KILL CHILDREN.

Davenport, July 3.—Three children of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Offerman died from eating green grapes while suffering from scarlatina. Cholera morbus caused complications that quickly resulted fatally. A fourth child is seriously ill from the same cause.

Burglars Escape From Jail.

Sioux City, July 3.—Four prisoners in the Woodbury County jail escaped. They were John Cole, James Henry, Edward Story, and Fred E. Thompson. All except Thompson had been bound over to the grand jury for burglary. The men sawed a bar, making an aperature 7x14 inches in size, and through which they crawled. The work was done from the outside.

PEACE AND CIVIL LAW ANNOUNCED

Most Important Chapter in Philippine History Is Written.

AMNESTY FOR INSURGENTS

General Chaffee Is Relieved and Secretary Root Thanks the Army for Its Services—There Are a Few Exceptions to General Amnesty.

Washington, July 5.—The president has formerly declared the restoration of peace in the Philippine archipelago; he has placed the islands under complete civil control, and has extended general amnesty to the Filipinos who have been in rebellion. These three things, marking one of the most important chapters in Philippine history, were accomplished through the issue of three separate orders and proclamations, one by the president, over his own signature, extending amnesty; one through Secretary Root, by the president's order, relieving General Chaffee from his duties as military governor, and a third which takes the shape of a general order addressed to the entire army of the United States, in which Secretary Root takes occasion to express the president's high appreciation of the work it has accomplished, both in Cuba and in the Philippines.

The Amnesty Proclamation.

The amnesty proclamation is as follows:

A PROCLAMATION.

By the President of the United States:

Whereas, Many of the inhabitants of the Philippine archipelago were of the insurrection against the authority and sovereignty of the kingdom of Spain at divers times from August 1896, until the cession of the archipelago by that kingdom to the United States of America, and since such cession many persons so engaged in insurrection have until recently resisted the authority and sovereignty of the United States; and,

Whereas, The insurrection against the authority and sovereignty of the United States is now at an end, and peace has been established in all parts of the archipelago except in the country inhabited by the Moro tribes, to which this proclamation does not apply; and,

Whereas, During the course of the insurrection against the kingdom of Spain and against the government of the United States, persons engaged therein, or those in sympathy with and abetting them, committed many acts in violation of civilized warfare, but it is believed that such acts were generally committed in ignorance of those laws, and under orders issued by the civil or military insurrectionary leaders; and,

Whereas, It is deemed to be wise and humane, in accordance with the beneficent purposes of the government of the United States towards the Filipinos, and conducive to peace, order and loyalty among them, and that the doers of such acts who have not already suffered punishment shall not be held criminally responsible, but shall be relieved from punishment for participation in these insurrections, and for unlawful acts committed during the course thereof by a general amnesty and pardon;

Now therefore, be it known that I, Theodore Roosevelt, president of the United States of America, by virtue of the power and authority vested in me by the constitution, do hereby proclaim and declare, without reservation or condition, except as hereinafter provided, a full and complete pardon and amnesty to all persons in the Philippine archipelago who have participated in the insurrection aforesaid, or who have given aid or comfort to persons participating in the isurrection aforesaid, for the offense of treason or sedition, and for all offenses political in their character committed in the course of such insurrections pursuant to orders issued by the civil or military insurrectionary authorities, or which grew out of internal political fueds or dissensions between Filipinos and Spaniards or the Spanish authorities, or which resulted from eternel political feuds or dissensions among the Filipinos themselves during either of said insurrection.

Excemtions to General Amnesty.

Provided, however, that the pardon and amnesty hereby granted shall not include such persons committing crime since May 1, 1902, in any province of the archipelago in which at the time civil government was established, nor shall it include such persons as have hereto been finally convicted of the crime of murder, rape, arson or robbery by any military or civil tribunal organized under the authority of Spain or of the United States of America, but which special application may be made to the proper authority for pardon by any person belonging to the exempted classes, and such clemency as is consistent with humanity and justice will be liberally extended; and, further,

Provided, that this amnesty and pardon shall not effect the title or right of the government of the United States or that of the Philippine islands to any property or property rights hereto used or appropriated by the military or civil authorities of the government of the United States or that of the Philippine islands organized under authority of the United States by way of confiscation or otherwise; and,

Provided, further, that every person who shall seek to avail himself of this proclamation shall take and subscribe to the following oath before any authority in the Philippine archipelago authorized to administer oaths, namely:

"I ——, solomnely swear (or affirm) that I recognize and accept the supreme authority of the United States of America in the Philippine islands and will maintain true faith and allegiance thereto; that I impose upon myself this obligation voluntarily without mental reservation or purpose of evasion, so help me God."

Given under my hand at the city of Washington this Fourth of July, in the year of our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Two, and in the One hundredth and Twenty-seventh year of the Independence of the United States.

(Signed.) Theodore Roosevelt.

By the president.

Elihu Root, Secretary of War.

General Chaffee Relieved.

General Chaffee is relieved of his civil duties and the Philippine Commission is made the superior authority in the following order:

"The insurrection against the sovereign authority of the United States in the Philippine Islands having ended, and provincial civil governments having been established throughout the entire territory of the archipelago not inhabited by Moro tribes, under the instruction of the president to the Philippine commisson, dated April 7, 1900, now ratified and confirmed by the act of congresss, approved July 1, 1902, entitled 'an act temporarily to provide for the administration of affairs of civil government in the Philippine Islands and for other purposes, the general commanding the division of the Philippines is hereby relieved from further performance of the duties of military governor, and the office of military governor in said archipelago is terminated. The general commanding the division of the Philippines and all military officers in authority therein will continue to observe the directions contained in the aforesaid instructions of the president, that the military forces in the division of the Philippines shall be at all times subject, under the orders of the military commander, to the call of the civil authorities for the maintenance of law and order and the enforcement of their authority."

The Army Eulogized.

Finally the president, through Secretary Root, pronounced the following eulogy upon the United States army:

"The president, upon this anniversary of national independence wishes to express to the officers and enlisted men of the United States army, his deep appreciation of the services they have rendered to the country in the great and difficult undertakings which they have brought to a successful conclusion during the past year.

"He thanks the officers and enlisted men who have been maintaining order and carrying on the military government in Cuba because they have faithfully given effect to the human purposes of the American people. They have, with sincere kindness, helped the Cuban people to take all the successive steps necessary to the establishment of their own constitutional government. During the time required for that process they have governed Cuba wisely, regarding justice and respecting individual liberty; have honestly collected and expended for the best interests of the Cuban people the revenues, amounting to over sixty million dollars; have carried out practical and thorough sanitary measures, greatly improving the health and lowering the death rate of the island.

"They have transferred the government of Cuba to the Cuban people, amid universal expressions of friendship and good will, and have left a record of order, justice and liberty, of rapid improvement in material and moral conditions and progress in the art of government which reflects great credit upon the people of the United States.

"The president thanks the officers and enlisted men of the army in the Philippines both regulars and volunteers for the courage and fortitude and indomitable spirit and loyal devotion with which they have put down and ended the great insurrection which has raged throughout the archipelago against the lawful sovereignty and just authority of the United States.

Had Difficult Task.

"The task was peculiarly difficult and trying. They were required at first to overcome the resistence of superior numbers, well equipped with arms of modern precision, intrenched in an unknown country of mountain defiles, jungles and swamps, apparently capable of interminable defense. When this resistence had been overcome, they were selected to crush out guerrilla warfare conducted among a people speaking unknown tongues, from whom it was almost impossible to obtain the information necessary for successful pursuit or to guard against surprises and ambushes.

"Bound themselves by the laws of war, our soldiers were called upon to meet every device of unscrupulous treachery and to contemplate without reprisals the infliction of barbarous cruelties upon their comrads and friendly natives.

"Under these adverse circumstances the army of the Philippines has accomplished its task rapidly and completely. In more than 2,000 combats, great and small, within three years, it has exhibited unvarying courage and resolution.

"With surprisingly few individual exceptions its course has been characterized with humanity and kindness to all.

"With admirable good temper, sympathy and loyalty to American ideals, its commanding generals have joined with the civilian agents of the government in healing the wounds of war and assuring to the people of the Philippines the blessings of peace and prosperity.

"The president feels that he expresses the sentiments of all of the loyal people of the United States in doing honor to the whole army, which has joined in the performance and shares in the credit of those honorable services.

"This general order will be read along at parade at every military post on the Fourth of July, 1902, or on the first day after it shall have been received.

"Elihu Root, Secretary of War.

"By command of Lieutenant General Miles.

"H. C. Corbin, adjutant general.

"Major General of U. S. army.

CELEBRATION QUITE AMERICAN.

Nation's Natal Day Observed In Manila—Amnesty Paper Read.

Manila, July 5.—President Roosevelt's amnesty proclamation was read yesterday at noon in English and Spanish from a flag draped stand on the Luneta, after a parade of six thousand Americans and Filipinos.

Arthur Ferguson, secretary to Governor Taft, read the proclamation in the presence of a small gathering, the heat having dispersed the crowd when the parade ended. The prisoners freed by the proclamation, estimated to number six hundred, were released without ceremony. Many military prisoners had previously been freed.

Aguinaldo remained in the house which has sheltered him since his captivity. He is expected to visit friends briefly and then depart on a trip. His destination is not announced. The exiles on the island of Guam are expected to return here on a special steamer.

The observance of the national holiday was general. The city was decorated and the ships were flying all their flags.

The celebration was typically American, even the fire crackers. Acting Governor Wright and General Chaffee reviewed the procession and Captain Crossfield delivered the oration. He defended the American policy in the Philippines, predicted the ultimate acceptance of American institutions by the Filipinos and denounced the critics of the Philippine policy.

MINER KILLED.

First Loss of Life in the Great Anthracite Coal Strike.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., July 2.—The first loss of life during the anthracite strike occurred yesterday at the William A colliery at Duryea. Antonio Guisuepe, an Italian, was shot dead by one of the coal and iron policeman from behind the stockade of the colliery.

Reports differ as to the cause of the shooting. Friends of the dead man say that he was walking on the road near the stockade when he was fired upon. The man was on his way from Scranton to Duryea at the time.

Another report is that the Italian tried to get over the fence and would not heed the warning of the policemen to go away. He insisted in making his way into the stockade and was fired upon.

There is much indignation over the shooting and the sheriff of Lackawanna county was summoned to take steps to preserve order as it is reported that there would be an uprising among the foreigners and that they would attack the stockade before night.

The body lay in [illegible] north for some time. The coroner's physician would not venture out [illegible] stockade to remove it and people living in the vicinity did not like to remove it until the arrival of the coroner. When the sheriff reached the scene he ordered the body removed to an undertaking establishment.

NEW MARKET FOUND.

Really First Class Cattle Could Be Sold in Buenos Ayres.

Washington, July 2.—Frank W. Bicknell of Des Moines, Ia., special agent and agricultural explorer of the agricultural department, writing from Buenos Ayres to the bureau of animal industry, says that it is possible for some of the breeders of the United States to send some really first class animals to that place; now is a good time to do so, as British cattle have been barred owing to an outbreak of foot and mouth disease in England. The cattle must arrive in Buenos Ayres not later than August 1, so as to have time to get in condition before the opening of the great animal show of the Rural society, which begins in Buenos Ayres September 14 and lasts five days. This show brings out the best animals in the country and is for pure bred stock only. At this time all the best sales of the year are made, both on the show grounds and in the large auction houses in the city. Representatives of some of the principal houses there say a few good animal from the United States may be sold, but it is useless to send anything but the very best.

Minnesota Republicans.

St. Paul, Minn., July 2.—The Minnesota republican convention renominated Samuel R. Van Sant for governor. Almost the entire ticket was named by acclamation. The platform adopted reaffirmes the Philadelphia platform; mourns the tragic death of President McKinley; cordially indorses the able and patriotic administration of President Roosevelt and pledges him the earnest support of the republicans of Minnesota in all his efforts to continue and advance the prosperity of the people at home and the glory of the republic abroad, and says: "It is therefore the sense of this convention that President Roosevelt succeed himself as president of the United States."

WEEK'S DOINGS IN CONGRESS

Business Transacted by the House and Senate in the National Capital.

FINAL ADJOURNMENT TAKEN

Washington, June 30.—Senate.—Elkins of West Virginia delivered an earnest speech in favor of the annexation of Cuba, maintaining that it would be in the best interests of both countries. Elkins' remarks drew a sharp fire from Platt of Connecticut and Hanna of Ohio, who deprecated any annexation proposition at this time and urged that the United States ought to be sensible of its obligations to the civilized world, if not to Cuba. After a lively colloquy, in which General Wood was criticised, by inference, for using Cuban funds to advance reciprocity propaganda, Elkins' resolution for annexation was referred to the Cuban relations committee. mong the many bills passed was one giving Rear Admiral Schley the pay and allowance of a rear admiral on the active list of the navy.

House.—The conference report on the Philippine civil government bill, which is considered the last obstacle in the way of adjournment, was adopted by a strict party vote, with the single exception of McCall of Massachusetts, who voted with the democrats. A partial report on the general deficiency appropriation bill was adopted, and after a prolonged fight, the house, by a vote of 118 to 101, adopted the senate amendment to appropriate $500,000 for the Buffalo exposition and then sent the bill back to conference. The senate amendments to appropriate $160,000 for the Charleston exposition and $1,000,000 to pay the Hawaiian fire bubonic plague awards were defeated, the former by a vote of 71 to 118. Subsequently, at the night session, the house reversed itself and assented to the senate amendment making an appropriation for the Charleston exposition. A number of bills were passed under suspension of the rules, including the senate bill to allot lands in the Cherokee nation and to provide corporation laws for Alaska. At the evening session the Dick militia bill was taken up and passed 180 to 28.

Washington, July 1.—Senate.—After a session marked by some of the stormiest debates ever heard in the American congress the congress adjourned sine die at 5:30 this afternoon. During the last hours of the session there was a tart debate on the Philippine question, participated in by Carmack of Tennessee, Spooner of Wisconsin, Culberson of Texas, McComas of Maryland and Lodge of Massachusetts. The conference report on the Philippine government bill was adopted without very much serious opposition and then, when the desks of the senate were cleared for adjournment, Carmack called up his resolution providing for a continuance of the investigation of the Philippine committee and for a visit to the Philippines by the committee during the present summer. This started trouble and for more than an hour a battle of words was waged. Spooner delivered a scathing denunciation of the minority of the Philippine committee for what he declared was an attack upon the American army. Carmack denied that any attack had been made upon the army and declared that any fool could charge such a calumny and any parrot could be taught to repeat it. The resolution was referred to a committee, thus effectually killing it.

Before adjournment the usual resolutions were adopted, including one offered by Cockreli, the venerable democrat from Missouri, cordially thanking President pro tem Frye for the dignified, impartial and courteous manner in which he had presided over the senate. After adoption of the resolution Mr. Frye made a feeling response and then declared the senate adjourned without delay.

House.—Immediately after the approval of the journal scramble for recognition began. Members with small bills of interest to their constituency were exceedingly anxious to secure action upon them and a dozen of them were almost constantly on their feet clamoring for opportunity to call them up. Senate bills were passed as follows: To resurvey certain townships in San Diego, Cal. The senate bill to promote the efficiency of the marine hospital service and change its name to the public health and marine hospital service was passed under suspension of the rules. The bill to create a military warehouse at Omaha was passed. A joint resolution was adopted, appropriating $5,000 each for monuments to the memories of General Francis Noah and General William Lee Davidson of North Carolina, as authorized by resolutions of the contingent congress. Foss presented an agreement on the naval appropriation bill. There was a ripple of applause as Foss announced the agreement and Taylor of Ohio, who followed, receiver hearty applause when he declared that a fight had been won and that the experiment of building a first class battleship would now be tried. Meir of Louisiana congratulated the house upon the victory that had been achieved.

Powers Likely to Adopt Less Rigorous Measures in China.

Washington, July 3.—The state department is somewhat encouraged by advices just received from China in its hope that the powers will consent to adopt less rigorous measures in the treatment of China.

It has been informed that England has consented to accept its indemnity in silver or on the silver basis, which is in line with the contention of the United States, and it is understood that Japan will do likewise. These powers ranged in accord may influence the remaining signatories to the Peking agreement toward a more liberal construction of the clauses dealing of the rate of exchange at which the indemnity payments are to be calculated. The situation at Tien Tsin is also improving and it is now said that Russia, England and Japan have taken sides with the United States in holding that the restrictions imposed on the Chinese occupation are far too severe and should be relaxed. It is confidently expected that this view will prevail and that the powers will soon be able to effect a complete withdrawal from China save for the legation guards.

A GREAT GUESSING CONTEST

In Which You May Win a Small Fortune While Aiding a Worthy Enterprise.

The Auditorium Stock Contest has been successfully launched after months of preparation, and is growing in popular favor as it becomes understood.

The Contest was started for the benefit of the Auditorium, that the money yet required to complete the building in every detail may be quickly and in a way that will be beneficial to no one.

Every one likes to win a fortune, especially when it is a worthy and demonstrable character, of merit, as it is. The entertainment, Co... and an object, the building.

The "guess" on the page advertisement is very simple with its open, readily understood after reading the Rules printed therein. A ticket is sold only for 25 cents, which is exchangeable for a share of Common Stock in the Auditorium Company. With this ticket goes two free guesses, one on the New York election, the other on a certain Special sum of money. The contract, or top portion of the ticket is retained by the purchaser and the premium coupon is filled out and sent in to the office of the Auditorium Company, room A, N. Y. Life Bldg. If a receipt for the Premium Coupon is desired, an enclosure of a 2 cent stamp will procure it. Those who may wish to participate in the Special Prizes will be furnished with a Special ticket free with the purchase of a regular ticket. This Special ticket must be made out in the same manner and address as is given on the reguar ticket, and must accompany same when sent in for filing, and have the same number as the regular ticket.

When these tickets properly made out are received at the Auditorium office, they are placed in metal boxes made for the purpose, in order of the estimates to await the time of the awarding of prizes, those on the election, until November, and those on the Specials until the day following the 15th or last day of each month. To show the detail of the making up of a Special Prize, the first Special was made ready by Mr. Sam'l Rees, who will act for the printers. Mr. Rees had the amount of the prize made up in bills, gold, silver, nickles and cents, and placed same in a promiscuous heap. From this pile he took the money without counting, placing a larger bulk in one sack than in the other. The sacks were then tied and sealed. In this manner Mr. Rees could not possibly tell what sum had been placed in either sack, nor even approximate it. The two sacks were then deposited with the cashier of the First National Bank of Omaha, and by him securely locked in the safety deposit vaults of the bank, and cannot be distributed until after the Contest is closed at midnight of July 15th. Mr. Rees has made affidavit that he does not know the contents of either sack, and that he will not make a guess for the prize.

The guessing will be on the amount contained in the larger of the two sacks. The person making the best guess gets the contents of both sacks, or the entire prize. Where two or more persons are tied on the prize, the money will be equally divided among them. These prizes will be paid as soon as the guesses can be assorted and the money counted after the Contest closes, probably on the following day.

Fifteen trade marks taken from 10-cent packages of Defiance Starch will be exchanged for an Auditorium Stock Ticket by the Defiance Starch Co., or The Omaha Auditorium Company when presented in person or by mail. This opportunity to get really valuable premiums is rarely presented to the public. It presents a chance for every one. There is no limit as to the number of tickets purchased or exchanged for trade marks.

A Great Piece of Railroad Work.

With the completion of work on the western division, the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway Company will have practically a new double track main line through the State of Iowa. ### CHAPTER VIII.

Of course it was very annoying. The cigar had gone, and, that source of consolation lost, Charlie had to do something else in order to interest himself.

His companion in misery was along-side up to the present Charlie did not care whether he were young or old. He saw was that a man had been placed in ahead of him.

He leaned his head toward that fellow-passenger and exclaimed to him:

"Monsieur, it seems that we are companions in misery. Might I ask your name?" giving his own at the same time.

The other did not appear downcast indeed, he answered, quite cheerfully:

"I am Henri, the Marquis of Montpensier, a blood relative of Don Carlos of Spain."

At length they drew up to the prison.

Without ceremony the two prisoners were hustled into the jail.

Charlie silently walked into the dark cell which yawned before him. To have refused would have been folly, since by force he would doubtless have been thrown over the threshold.

Ah! he might be worse off.

His cigar case still held a few choice weeds, such as appeal most strongly to the heart of the confirmed smoker.

So he hastened to secure a cigar.

Next came a match.

As he struck this latter and a light sprang into existence he heard an exclamation, and remembered he had a comrade in misery.

He saw a young chap with a resolute face. There was more of an American look about him than European, and yet Charlie remembered having heard him give the name of Guiseppe Brignoli, as though he were an Italian.

"Pardon, comrade," Charlie said in French. "Allow me to light my weed, since matches are scarce and then I shall offer you a cigar," with which he proceeded to put his words into execution.

"Thanks awfully, but I don't smoke," said the other laconically in the best of English.

The match expired before Charlie could get another look at his comrade.

But he knew his first suspicion was true—the young fellow came of Anglo-Saxon stock, and had assumed an Italian name in order to keep his own from disgrace or from some other reason.

They might exchange confidences while trying to pass away the long hours, or at least engage in social discourse.

"Pardon me again, sir, but can you spare a couple of matches?" asked the other.

"Half-a-dozen, at your service."

"Thanks. They may serve my end well and yours in the bargain."

Charlie's curosity flashed up.

What did the other mean to do? Was he desperate enough to think of setting the prison on fire? Nonsense! There was not one chance in a million of accomplishing such a thing to men shut up here in this grimy dungeon.

Nevertheless, he knew that nothing was ever accomplished without effort, and that often a capricious fortune aids those who help themselves.

Under the boards the youngsters discovered a tunnel.

When the flat stone was lifted up, behold! an opening yawned below.

The youth gave thanks in his peculiar way, and without much more ado jumped into the breach.

"I shall return, comrade," he said.

And Charlie believed him.

He sat there smoking his cigar and feeding the flames with bits of the splintered planking.

Minutes passed.

Evidently his companion was making quite a tour under the prison flooring.

At last there was a movement, and a head appeared above the stone flagging.

"Give me a hand, please."

Charlie knew from the look of triumph upon his face that the other was decidedly pleased with what he had discovered.

"In luck, eh?" he hazarded.

"The best in the world. Some good chap in the past has made a tunnel all but breaking through. I did that part while I was gone. In fact, to tell you the truth, I've been under the starlight."

"Outside the prison walls?" incredulously.

"Yes. When I tapped the end of the tunnel I found it came up in an old wagon yard some ten feet or more beyond the outer walls. But I suppose we might as well go."

"Then good-by, my dear fellow."

"But—you will share my escape. We don't separate yet, you know."

"I'm not going."

"Not going? You prefer to remain in this accursed hole, when freedom offers? Come, you are joking, sir."

"Oh, no. You see if I crawled out of here I would, by implication, admit my connection with those whom Baron Peterhoff has hauled in. Being innocent, I shall sit here until he comes to beg my pardon and personally conduct me to freedom."

The youngster looked at him with kindling eyes.

"Bravo! I like your spirit," he said. "Would you mind shaking hands with me, sir?"

"It will be a pleasure on my part."

And they exchanged a warm grip.

"I hope we may meet again. Let me give you my card. Who knows what strange chance may drift us together again. Who can say under what conditions we may come together again?"

Who indeed?

Both of them would have been chilled with horror could they have even guessed the truth, but the veil of the future mercifully hid that from mortal ken.

Another hearty Anglo-Saxon handshake, then the youngster dropped into the hole.

Charlie made as comfortable a seat as was possible from some of the old planks and kept the fire going with fragments.

By degrees his thoughts came around again to his late companion.

Then he remembered that as yet he did not even know the other's true name.

Where was the card? Ah, just where he had thrust it, and, bending down, he read the name by the flickering light of his fire.

Then it dawned upon him why he had felt such a singular interest in the young fellow, and why he had deemed his features familiar, yet could not grasp the tangible substance for the name, written boldly, was.

ALEXANDER BRAND.

Here then was the most remarkable coincidence in the whole course of his varied experiences.

There could be no mistake.

This young fellow bore some relationship—that of brother or cousin, perhaps—to Arline.

He had her name, and there was a strong family resemblance in their faces.

There must be a sense of awe in the realization that one is a mere puppet in the hands of destiny—that the power which sends unnumbered worlds whirling through space in their exact orbits, without danger of collision, or of the slightest change in their course, can condescend to superintend such a small thing as the welfare of one puny human life.

Charlie pondered upon the matter a long time.

Then, before he knew it, he fell asleep, despite his hard seat and his determination to remain on guard.

When he awoke he was stiff and sore.

A light gleamed in his eyes—it was the warder making the rounds with bread and water.

When the gruff man held up the light in order to view the confines of the dungeon, and beheld only Charlie seated there and blinking like an owl, he was much amazed.

He demanded to know where the other prisoner had hidden himself.

Charlie calmly pointed to the hole still uncovered by the slab of stone.

"Oh! he's gone out for a walk," he said, coolly.

The man began to grasp the situation, and when he could move, he sprang to the door of the dungeon to bawl for assistance.

Several other wardens came tumbling into the cell.

Then ensued a great powwow of Dutch phrases, while Charlie yawned and stretched himself.

Then came the commandant.

"How did this happen?" he demanded.

"Well, you see, he had an appointment, and did not wish to break his engagement."

"But you, mein herr; how is it you remain? Do you like this residence so well?" grimly.

"I told you last night, or attempted to, that I was an innocent party—that Baron Peterhoff was my friend—that my arrest, under the circumstances, was an outrage; and hence I utterly refused to leave this place until you and the baron had humbly begged my pardon. Indeed, I am not sure but that I will insist on remaining here until the English consul comes to see me and takes action against your miserable government for treating me, a British subject, in this disgraceful way."

Just as he had expected, his manner awed the fiery commandant, who feared trouble.

He began to whine at once, and expressed his rgret that any mistake should have occurred. Surely mein herr must hold him blameless, since he had only done his duty in the premises. It was not given to him to investigate when the all-powerful Baron Peterhoff brought in political prisoners with orders to hold them securely.

Would mein herr be pleased to go with him to his office, where he could be more comfortable, and there await the coming of the baron, who would with a word set him free?

But mein herr was obstinate.

The baron must come to him. As Paul and Silas, in days of yore, made the governor unbend his dignity and come to plead with them to go away, so Charlie meant to keep hold of his advantage.

So the commandant went away.

Charlie was still smoking, with one of the keepers for company, and the door of his cell wide open, when voices were heard in the corridor.

Then entered the baron.

The great man looked both disturbed and amused. He had heard the amazing story of the commandant, and sifted the wheat from the chaff, so that he had a pretty fair idea as to the truth.

He marched straight up to Charlie and stretched out his hand.

"My most abject apologies, my dear boy, for what has happened. It was a miserable mistake, on my part. I trust you will forgive me," he said.

Charlie saw he was sincere, and as his indignation passed away he unbent his dignity.

"Then you know it was Miss Arline Brand, and not the Countess Isolde, whom I assisted into a carriage at the Steen?" he asked, eagerly, determined to put his fears to the test.

"Yes; she has assured me she never saw you, save at a distance," returned the baron.

Then it is all right. Now I am ready to leave here and go out with you, baron," he said, smiling.

"To breakfast with me, I hope."

Charlie hesitated.

True, he anticipated more or less pleasure in his coming interview with Arline. There would be much to hear, and some surprising things to tell on his part.

But these would keep a little longer; besides, it is sometimes exceedingly pleasant; to anticipate a feast.

He had something which he wished to relate to the baron, seeking in return his advice and material aid.

Whenever men went to the desperate length of contemplating crime, in order to secure wealth, as the so-called Capt. Brand and his confreres had certainly done when they purposely abandoned the young girl among those awful passages amid the Steen dungeons, it was time the stern arm of the law was invoked in order to bring them up with a round turn.

And to whom could he go with a better show of results than to the baron?

So, arm in arm, Charlie and Baron Demetruis Peterhoff sauntered out of the prison.

It was about eight in the morning.

Charlie could imagine the young fellow standing on the deck of the vessel bound for London, and snapping his fingers at the baron's dragnet.

He was determined not to give the slightest clew to his companion concerning Alexander Brand, his plans or present whereabouts.

A vehicle stood near.

Into this Charlie was shown: the baron followed, and presently they drew up before a palatial abode, where the widower baron resided in great style, as became a man of his immense means.

And over the elaborate breakfast Charlie found a chance to spin his little story, the baron proving greatly interested, as the sparkle in his eye attested.

He could read Charlie's secret as easily as though the other carried the story on his brow.

"You have done excellently, Charlie, my boy," he said, finally; "but it is just as well you ask my assistance in unmasking this unholy fraud. He and his unprincipled accomplices might be too much for you. Depend upon it, I shall tear the mask from his face, and that right speedily."

DREW THE LINE ON JACK POTS

Conscience of Theological Student Has Sudden Awakening.

At a certain university in this state the game of hearts has been exceedingly popular among the students the last winter. A group of them, accustomed to meet in one of the fraternity houses to play, included a theological student, who, although a member of one of the stricter denominations, did not find it against his conscience to be an ardent devotee of the game, which, however—at least when he made one of the party—was never played for money. Even when chips were introduced for counters, as being an easier method of keeping score than the tiresome tally with pencil and paper, the theologue did not balk.

But there came an evening when his sense of the fitness of things received a rude shock. The pile of chips in the middle of the table had reached rather large proportions, and one of the players, inspired by a desire to make the prospective winnings still more worth while, remarked:

"Let's have the next a jackpot."

The effect of these words on the theological student was electrical. He knew of their being associated with only one game, and that scarcely to be mentioned in highly moral circles.

"A jackpot!" he exclaimed mechanically. "Then I guess I'm through with this game," and he rose and walked out. No amount of explanations or apologies was sufficient either to reinstate hearts in his approval.—New York Tribune.

The Swiss Language.

We sometimes hear that the French language has less vitality than some others, and it is in particular pointed out to what an extent it is giving way to English and German, says the London News. Some figures just published do not, however, bear out this in the case, at any rate, of Switzerland, where French, German and Italian are all spoken. In 1888 the number of persons speaking German in the Helvetian republic was 2,083,097; those speaking French 634,613, and those speaking Italian, 155,130. At the recent census it was found that the position had changed considerably. There are now, according to the official figures, 2,319,105 persons whose language is German, 733,220 who speak French, and 222,247 who use the language of Dante. Certain cantons appear in particular to be giving up the use of German. In Neufchatel, where formerly 22,000 persons spoke that tongue, there are now only 17,000.

What Made Shakespeare.

Carnegie's view that "hard work made Shakespeare the greatest dramatic genius" is absurd. The finest poetic imagination of modern literature, which is the foundation of the supreme and universal excellence of Shakespeare, was not obtained by "hard work;" it was a beautiful gift from God. It would be quite as reasonable to say that "hard work" made Homer, the greatest poet of antiquity. The truth is that Shakespeare probably gave more "hard work" to his duties as an actor and a theatrical manager than he ever did to his plays. He wrote with extraordinary rapidity and often at a kind of fever heat, as did Byron and Shelley and Keats. Shakespeare was sometimes called upon by his manager or his company on brief notice to excise passages, rewrite passages and supply entirely new matter. Such facility of mind is the gift of great natural powers, and can not be created by "hard work."

Slow Philadelphia.

Poor Philadelphia continues to receive hard thumps from rude outsiders. The latest was dealt by a Brooklyn widow, who had received an advertising circular from an enterprising firm of local undertakers and acknowledged it in the following terms:

"Gentlemen: Your kind offer received. Thank you, so much! But I'm afraid you are behind the times. I had a brother who died in Philadelphia last year. You might write to his family."—Cleveland Plain Dealer

Ears of Animals.

The ear is found by M. Paul Bonnier to have a sense of altitude in addition to that of hearing. It depends on change of barometric pressure due to altitude, and he has proven its existence by his sensations during a balloon ascent. It is believed to be more highly developed and useful in such animals as birds than in man.

Plain duties become beautiful through their performance.

Ping—"Are Mrs. De Style's entertainments very exclusive?" Pong—"Well, I should say so; she has just made application to have the conversation of her guests copyrighted."

Jack—"It is mighty hard to be son of a self-made millionaire." Tom—"Why so?" Jack—"A fellow can't decide whether to go into business and live up his father's reputation, or go into society and live it down."

"See here," said Colonel Winders, angrily, "your reporter promised to print all I said at the banquet last night." "Well?" replied the editor. "Well, he printed only a few lines, although my speech was quite a long effort." "Yes, but you didn't say much."

Fishermen in the Columbia river get about twenty-five cents each for the salmon they catch. The average weight ranges from fifteen to twenty pounds. Vast quantities of these are frozen by Oregon dealers, and shipped to Germany, where they sell for thirty-five cents a pound.

The electric bath is one of the newest things, although it isn't a bath at all. A thick robe is entwined with wires, and this is donned. Then a current of electricity is switched on, and the wearer of the electrical robe soon finds his body getting warmer, until in a little while he perspires as freely as if he were in a Turkish bath.

John Dillon's outbreak in the house of commons the other day, when he called Joseph Chamberlain a "damned liar," reminds one of the speech of Mr. Martin, a member for Galway, in 1789, which absolutely defies reproduction. He denounced a fellow-member in language of unprintable disgust, and could not resist the temptation of applying his words also to the member's sister, who sat in the gallery of the house of commons at the time. "Tnese Ponsonbys," he burst out, "are the curse of my country. They are ——, personally and politically, from that toothless old hag who is now grinning in the gallery, to the white-livered scoundrel who is now shivering on the floor."

Saved the Baby.

New Providence, Iowa, July 7th.—Little Helen Moon, the three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Moon of this place, had a narrow escape from death.

Her mother noticed she semed to be very clumsy and complained when she was rocked. Her limbs and face were bloated badly.

A doctor was summoned but she got no better. He said she had Kidney Trouble in the worst form.

Two other doctors were called in and they agreed that there was very little, if any, hope. She was bloated all over, her eyes being completely closed and her abdomen bloated until it was purple.

They bought six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and she commenced to improve at once. She had used nine boxes before the Dropsy was all gone. The treatment was continued and now she is as well as ever.

Dodd's Kidney Pills certainly saved the little one's life.

You have no idea how many people approach newspaper reporters and ask them to take a shot at you.

Some men are born great, some acquire greatness and others are just dubs.

Round Trip Homeseekers' Excursions to the West.

MEDICAL EXAMINER

Of the United States Treasury Recommends Pe-ru-na.

The Women Also Recommend Pe-ru-na.

Dr. Llewellyn Jordan.

Miss Blanch Grey, 174 Alabama street, Memphis, Tenn., a society woman of Memphis, writes:

"To a society woman whose nervous force is often taxed to the utmost from lack of rest and irregular meals I know of nothing which is of so much benefit as Peruna. I took it a few months ago when I felt my strength giving away, and it soon made itself manifest in giving me new strength and health."—Miss Blanch Grey.

Mrs. X. Schneider, 2409 Thirty-seventh Place, Chicago, Ill., writes:

"After taking several remedies without result, I began last year to take your valuable remedy, Peruna. I was a complete wreck. Had palpitation of the heart, cold hands and feet, female weakness, no appetite, trembling, sinking feeling nearly all the time. You said I was suffering from systemic catarrh, and I believe that I received your help in the nick of time. I followed your directions carefully and can say to-day that I am well again. I cannot thank you enough for my cure."

Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. Peruna is not a guess, nor an experiment—it is an absolute scientific certainty. Peruna has no substitutes—no rivals. Insist upon having Peruna.

A free book written by Dr. Hartman on the subject of catarrh in its different phases and stages, will be sent free to any address by the Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Catarrh is a systemic disease curable only by systemic treatment. A remedy that cures catarrh must aim directly at the depressed nerve centers. This is what Peruna does.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

DR. LLEWELLYN JORDAN, Medical Examiner of the U. S. Treasury Department, graduate of Columbia College, and who served three years at West Point, has the following to say of Peruna:

"Allow me to express my gratitude to you for the benefit derived from your wonderful remedy. One short month has brought forth a vast change and I now consider myself a well man after months of suffering. Fellow sufferers, Peruna will cure you."

Peruna immediately invigorates the nerve-centers which give vitality to the mucous membranes. Then catarrh disappears. Then catarrh is permanently cured.

Pianos at a Great Reduction.

Chicago's leading music house, Lyon & Healy, has just bought for a fraction of their usual cost, the surplus stock of several Eastern piano manufacturers. These splendid pianos will be offered with out reserve until all are sold. Also they offer a wareroom full of slightly-used and second-hand pianos, including insturments of the following well-known makes: Sterling Huntington, Chase, Vose, Fischer, Weber, Chickering, Steinway, Knabe, Hardman, Kurtzman, New England, etc. In square pianos there are fine toned instruments of all the leading makes at $25, 40, 60 and upwards. In Upright pianos neat instruments at $100, 120, 140, 150, 165, 190, 200 and upwards. In Parlor and Concert Grands some nice specimens at $250, and upwards. Nearly all these pianos were intended to sell for much more than these sale prices. This is an opportunity that will not occur again Immediate attention is therefore necessary. Lyon & Healy will send a list and full particulars upon application. Any piano not proving entirely satisfactory may be returned at their expense. Address simply, Lyon & Healy, Chicago. Distance is no obstacle in taking advantage of this remarkable chance to obtain a piano, for, in proportion to the saving to be made, the freight charges are insignificant. Write today.

Don't Miss This

Mr. B. L. Allen, ticket agent of the B. C. R. & N. Ry., has just received authority from headquarters to make special low rates for the people of Klemme and vicinity. No matter where you want to go, you should call on or write him, and you will save money by so doing. July31

Warmer weather this week.

Haying & Harvest are here.

Geo. Schroeder has painted his new house.

J. W. Allen and wife were callers here the first part of the week.

Are we going to have a harvest home picnic? If so preperations should be made.

Mrs. Horace Lowhorn enjoyed a visit from her parents who live in Dubuque.

Several of our young people were in Klemme Saturday enjoying an outing.

T. Gauley sold the east quarter section of his farm to Fred Walker for 55 dollars per acre.

Now is a good time to mow those unsightly weeds along the road side, and also along the fence rows.

Owing to the excessive moisture it became necessary for Henry Swarz to purchase a cradel to cut his rye.

The bottom seams to have dropped out of the road in several places, especialy the road running west from the Rice school house. Several people having got their horses mired down and had to have help to get them out. Our road boss should have these places fixed before some one is injured.

A young lady explained to a printer the difference in printing and publishing and in conclusion said: "Now you can print a kiss on my cheek but you must not publish it" With that he locked the fair form in his arms and went to press.

Little One Called Home

It is with sorrow that we chronicle the death of the month old babe of Mr. and Mrs. Myron Haskin, which occurred this morning at six o'clock. The direct cause of its death we are unable to state. The little one suffered terribly but its troubles are now over and he rests in peace with his Maker. The sympathy of the entire community goes out to the stricken ones in their hour of affliction. Funeral services will be held from the Eng. M. E. church tomorrow forenoon at 10 o'clock.

WOODMAN PICNIC

The Klemme Camp M. w. A. will give a picnic next Thursday, July. 24, in S. B. Day's grove near town to which everybody is cordially invited. A good program and speech will be given in the forenoon commencing about 10:30 o'clock. A ball game and other amusements in the afternoon and a bowery dance in the evening Everybody come and bring full baskets. A good time is assured.

Poisoning the System.

It is through the bowels that the body is cleansed of impurities. Constipation keeps these poisons in the system, causing headache, dullness and melancholia at first, then unsightly eruptions and finally serious illness unless a remedy is applied. DeWitt's Little Early Risers prevent this trouble by stimulating the liver, and promote easy, healthy action of the bowels. These little pills do not act violently but by strengthening the bowels enable them to perform their own work. Never gripe or distress. J. L. Harr.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, July 12, 1902.

Judge McVey has announced that he is not ready to announce his decision in the test suit brought on the Griswold building and loan law to ascretain whether or not its provisions applying to non-resident corporations transacting business in the state are valid. He states that Attorney General Mullan had expressed a desire to be heard in behalf of the state and that he has decided to set aside the recent submission of the case and to order a retrial. This is the case in which J. W. Brady, an agent of the Co-operative Mutual Home Association of Kansas City, sought release by habeas corpus. He was arrested on the charge of soliciting a building and loan association contract for a company that had not complied with the section of the Griswold law requiring the deposit of real estate mortgages, etc., with the state auditor. In his application for a writ he claims that the law is unconstitutional for the reason that it is an attempt to impose unwarranted regulations upon a legitimate business and for the further reason that the requirements made by the law amount to a prohibition.

The fourth annual meeting of the County Attorneys association of Iowa will be held in Des Moines at the Savery hotel July 28 and 29. D. W. Telford of Mason City is the president of the association, and John McLennan of Des Moines is secretary.

On July 7, 8, 10, 12, 14 and 16 a rate of one and one-third, on the certificate plan will be granted on all railroads within a radius of one hundred miles on account of Midland Chautauqua, Des Moines, good returning to and including July 23, when duly certified by the secretary and joint agent. For full information apply to E. C. Musgrave, secretary, 118 Second street, Des Moines, or local agent.

When Ringling Bros.' circus exhibits in Des Moines, Monday, July 14, the people of this vicinity will see not only the biggest and greatest arenic exhibition ever given by these progressive managers, but they will also witness a performance that is novel and original from beginning to end. Ringling Bros. have been remarkably successful this year in securing European novelties of a high order, and these new importations are as numerous as they are clever. Most of them have been engaged for only one season, and they return to Europe at the close of the circus year. Among the new features are several trained animal acts of a most sensational character, including comedy elephants, juggling seals and other educated beasts. The show opened the season in Chicago, and the three weeks engagement there was successful beyond all precedent. The Chicago Inter Ocean, speaking of the performance in that city, declared that they surpassed in magnitude and interest anything of the kind ever seen there. The exhibitions in Des Moines will be identically the same. This means a great triple ring performance with over a hundred big feature acts, to say nothing of a colossal horse ballet—the newest and most brilliant display of its kind ever attempted. An augmented menagerie, with thirty elephants and a splendid specimen of the giraffe, a tremendous revival of the old Roman hippodrome and a new street parade, are incidental features that will arouse local enthusiasm.

Hon. John Cownie, chairman of the state board of control, has returned from Davenport, where he let the contracts for raising roofs on seven cottages and for placing slate roofs on three of the buildings at the Soldiers' Orphans Home. The bids for raising the roofs were too high to come under the appropriation made by the general assembly for this work, there being $12,750 to do the work, furnish the additional quarters and put on slate roofs. The contract was finally let to the Northern Building company of Davenport for $10,000, with the understanding that the state would do the work necessary by detailing its carpenter at the institution. The three roofs will be put on by C. G. Hipwell for $750, which leaves $2,000 for the purpose of furnishing.

The Mutual telephone girls' strike is ended and the thirty-five young women have returned to work in the offices of that company, taking their old places, but at the advanced wages which they struck for. Not only are the wages advanced, but the girls' union is fully recognized by the Mutual company. In addition, the strike of the electrical workers is ended and they have returned to work. Their union, also, is recognized. Both unions secure a contract for a year.

The state board of control has given out figures showing the total number of insane persons in Iowa June 30, 1902, to be 4,526, a total increase of 136 over the previous year. Along with these figures is a table showing the number of insane in the state during the past three years, together with the increased number each succeeding period. The average yearly increase during the three years is 125-2-3. Judge Robinson of the board of control stated that at this rate the state would have to furnish every eight years added accommodations for its insane equal to the capacity of one of the present state hospitals. It is impossible now for more than 1,000 insane persons to be accommodated in any one of the state hospitals. However the increase mentioned above includes insane in county and private institutions, and Judge Robinson does not anticipate that the above contingency will ever arise when the state will bear the entire burden of increase.

Betzer—"Why do you have iron bars in front of your kitchen windows and doors?" Shemster—"To prevent the escape of the cook."

He—"Mrs. Wise seems to understand how to manage her husband pretty well." She—"Yes. She lets him have her own way in everything."

"Who is the hero of this piece?" asked the man who was coming out of the theater. And the manager thoughtfully replied: "The man who is putting up the money."

Willy (over his natural history)—"Papa, what species of animals in this country are becoming rapidly extinct?" Papa—"Buffaloes and naval heroes, my son."

In the long run actors make money.

"This poem would be good but for one thing," remarked the editor. "Whats that?" inquired the poet. "It isn't."

"Will you share my humble lot?" begged the suitor. "Yes; if there's a cottage on it," answered the crafty maid.

NEWS FROM THE HAWKEYE STATE

What Has Happened in Iowa During the Past Week.

BULLIES TACKLE WRONG MAN

Boarded a Mississippi River Steamboat at Rock Island and Tried to Run It, But Mate Dan Breen Drew a Gun and Shot Both Men Dead.

Davenport, July 11.—A shooting affray on the Diamond Joe liner Dubuque, running on the Mississippi between St. Louis and St. Paul yesterday resulted in the death of two patent medicine fakirs who call themselves "Christopher Leonidas and Son, the long haired medicine men." The men boarded the boat at Rock Island, wearing sombreros, guns and bowies, and soon were quarreling with the crew, cursing the captain, etc., and finally ran up against Mate Dan Breen.

The strangers wore marksmens' medals and are said to give shooting exhibitions, but the mate's gun was out first and before the others got the range they were down, the older man with a bullet through his body and another through his leg and the son with a bullet in the groin, which came out of his back on the other side. Both men died almost instantly.

The men had been giving shooting exhibitions and selling medicines in Rock Island and took passage for McGregor.

Their bullying manners led Mate Dan Breen to suggest that they take off their belts and leave their arms with the clerk. This request brought out the profane replies and motion toward their weapons that led the mate to draw and shoot. At the first shot the younger man clapped his hand to his side.

"Father, let up," he cried, "I'm shot."

By this time the mate's bullets had found the older man, who fell to the deck with two bullet holes through him.

Dan Breen, the mate, was arrested, but was acquitted of blame by a coroner's jury and released after four hours' detention. He is an old river man about 55 years of age and has a family living at Dubuque.

ICE GOES DOWN RIVER.

Eight Thousand Tons Lost Through Break in the Ice House.

Des Moines, July 13.—Eight thousand tons of ice floated off down the Des Moines river yesterday afternoon. Last night another thousand tons started after it and with it went the plant of the Central Ice company, located at the foot of University avenue, and a portion of the Diamond Ice company's big plant located at Pennsylvania avenue and the river. Another 5,000 tons of ice belonging to the Diamond Ice company is exposed to the action of the flood water and it is expected it will go into the river at almost any moment.

The Arctic plant at the head of East Second street, in which is stored about 8,000 tons, is also in danger. Water has surrounded this house for several days and the lower courses of ice, in which there is probably 1,000 tons, are ruined. The ice in this house started to settle yesterday morning, throwing the great weight against the walls and causing them to bulge out. A big force of men worked yesterday bracing the walls and last night it was thought the house would be saved and that none of its contents above the water line would be damaged.

SHE WAIVED HEARING.

Mrs. Lavelleur Bound Over to Await Action of Grand Jury.

Newton, July 12.—Mrs. Lavelleur, who was arrested for the murder of her husband on an information sworn out by D. W. Church, an old soldier, who had worked up evidence in the hope of securing the reward offered by Governor Cummins, waived the preliminary hearing and the case will go directly to the grand jury.

Justice J. W. Allfree fixed Mrs. Lavelleur's bond as $1,000.

Many people here think Mrs. Lavelleur guilty of the crime or else cognizant of it, but unless the evidence which Church claims to have secured is much stronger than was produced before the coroner's jury the case will be in vain.

The county attorney has refused to prosecute the case because he believes Mrs. Lavelleur is innocent, and the coroner who held the inquest is so firm in his belief that the defendant is not guilty that he has offered to furnish money to help her fight the case.

TWELVE PERSONS POISONED.

One Woman Dies From the Effect of the Poison.

Traer, July 11.—At a party held between here and Gladbrook a dozen persons were poisoned, and Mrs. J. C. Onstott met her death. All the family and visitors were taken very ill during the night, but recovered, save in the case of Mrs. Onstott. Physicians were called, but gave her no relief. The people ate ice cream and cold roast beef. As all who partook of the latter were ill, it is supposed that the poison was in the beef.

FORTUNE FOUND IN JARS.

Nine Thousand Dollars in Gold and Paper Money.

Braddyville, July 11.—Several jars containing over $9,000 in gold and paper money were found yesterday in the rear of the home of Wesley Ferrens, who died recently at the age of 86 years. Ferrens had lived on the farm sixty-one years, and at the time of his death an elderly daughter was his only companion. Besides the money found he left realty valued at $25,000.

Judge Church is Grand Master.

Clinton, July 12.—The officers of the grand lodge of Iowa I. O. O. F. elected for the coming year, according to the count which has just been completed, are as follows: Grand master, Z. A. Church of Jefferson; deputy grand master, M. W. White of Sioux City; Grand warden, W. V. Tufford of Clinton; grand secrtary, R. L. Tilton of Des Moines; grand treasurer, H. N. Smith of Spencer; grand representative, N. Jasper, Shelby.

Killed by a Batted Ball.

Mason City, July 12.—George Dewey Mann, a three-year-old youngster, was struck by a batted ball at Emery, five miles west of here. The blow jerked the lad's head by so quickly that he broke his neck and died immediately.

FIFTEEN PERSONS INJURED.

North-Western Passenger and Freight in Collision at Ankeny.

Ankeny, July 12.—Fifteen persons were injured, one perhaps fatally, in a head end collision between a North western pessenger and freight train at this point at 5 o'clock last evening. The more seriously injured are: Mrs. W. M. Rice of Ames, right hip and back bruised, back badly strained, right side of head bruised. There are evidences of internal injuries which may prove fatal.

Bernita Rice, aged 2½ years, bruised about head and face.

W. S. Archer, of 604 east Fifth St., Des Moines, transfer agent for the L. J. Wells Company, bruised about the head and shoulders. His injuries are serious but not dangerous.

E. A. Leidloff, of 1003 Sixth street, Des Moines, badly bruised and shaken up.

The wreck was caused by the crew of the freight which was south bound leaving the switch open. The passenger, which left Des Moines at 4:30 p. m., was running slow and nearly under control. The engine of the freight was badly crippled, but the engine of the passenger suffered no loss except the pilot, and the passenger made its trip to Ames after a delay of twenty minutes. Conductor Sterling was in charge of the passenger, and Herman Wills, at one time democratic candidate for railroad commissioner, at the throttle. It was Mr. Wills' first wreck in twenty-six years experience as an engineer on the North-western.

Among the passengers in the smoker at the head of the train, who were thrown forward over the seat tops, but not seriously hurt, were Judge L. G. Kinne, C. G. McCarthy, State Printer Murphy, and D. N. Lewis, secretary of the railroad commission.

HELD TO THE GRAND JURY.

Two Charged Wth The Murder of Henry Wilson at McGregor.

McGregor, July 14.—Lillian Ellsworth and William Presbury are in the county jail awaiting the action of the grand jury on the charge of murder.

Harry Wilson was found a week ago Tuesday night lying unconscious by the side of the Chicago, Milwaukee & Paul tracks a mile and a half south of McGregor. By his side was his lover, Miss Lillian Ellsworth. She was either sleeping at the time or was unconscious. They were discovered by the crew of the passenger train going north, which left Dubuque at 12:30. At first it was thought the train had run over them and accordingly the conductor went back and picked them up. The girl was uninjured but the man had three wounds which looked as though they were made by jabs with some points instrument such as a railroad spike or a pick. The couple were picked up and taken into the car. While Wilson was being examined the girl jumped through the door and fled to the woods, presumably from fright. She was recaptured the next morning and was taken into custody at McGregor. Wilson was taken to McGregor and died Thursday from the effects of his injuries.

Sheriff Benton of Elkader county, took charge of the case Thursday and has been working on it ever since. It is undoubtedly one of murder and accordingly he has made an arrest of one William Presbury, who is a cousin of the murdered man and who was jealous of the attentions paid Miss Ellsworth by him. He is now in jail and is supposed to be the murder of Wilson, although he stoutly denies the accusation and claims that he can prove an alibi.

LOTHROP GETS $7,500.

Executive Council Refuses to Allow Claim for $25,000.

Des Moines, July 10.—The executive council yesterday voted to pay Captain J. S. Lothrop of Sioux City the sum of $7,500 for services he has rendered the state in working up the Iowa civil war claim, which was recently paid by the government. This represents a little more than one-fourth of the amount which Captain Lothrop indicated he would be willing to consider a fair compensation.

Yesterday morning he went before the council and submitted a claim for $25,102.93, which represents five and one-half per cent of the entire claim paid by the government, it amounting to $456,417.89. The council took the matter under consideration and after consultation decided that the bill was too high. It then reduced the figure to $7,500 by a unanimous vote and Captain was given a warrant on the state treasury department for the amount.

He accepted it without demur, making the statement that the amount was all he expected to get out of the council. He would not state whether or not he might have recourse to the next general assembly to secure a larger amount but it is hardly expected that he will do so. The legislature originally referred the claim to the executive council with instructions to the members to allow a reasonable compensation, thereby practically refusing to fix the amount due Captain Lothrop as provided in a bill which he succeeded in introducing before the last general assembly.

MRS. PIKE GIVEN LIBERTY.

Not Enough Evidence to Connect Her With Shooting of Pike.

Rockwell City, July 10.—Mrs. Kate Pike and son, Henry Grieber, had a hearing before Justice Hunter, charged with intent to murder William Pike, husband and father. The testimony showed Pike had been drinking Sunday. He came home about 11 p. m. and went directly to bed and to sleep. When awakened upon being shot he tore the screen off the window and climbed outside. Mrs. Pike came to him outside fully dressed. The wound was made by a bullet of small size. Henry Grieber had a 22 rifle which was found between the mattress and springs of his bed. The family has had domestic jars. The justice found there was not evidence sufficient to bind over the defendants and discharged both. Pike was able to be present and testify. Both Pike and his wife are financially well fixed.

WOMAN SHOOTS A MAN.

A. H. Goodspeed of Atlantic Injured by Woman.

Atlantic, July 11.—A. H. Goodspeed was shot in the head near his room over the First National bank here yesterday by Mrs. Hunt. The woman fired five shots, one of which took effect, making a scalp wound four inches long. It is not considered serious. Mrs. Hunt gave herself up, saying she intended to kill him, and is sorry she did not succeed. Mrs. Hunt has been keeping company with Goodspeed for some time. Another woman, Maude Moore, seen by her in company with Goodspeed, roused her jealousy and led to the act. She went to Goodspeed's room and got his revolver, then went back and waited for him, picking a quarrel, which resulted in the shooting.

RUMPLE OUT OF RACE.

Cancer of Mouth and Throat Compels Him to Leave Public Life.

Davenport, July 14.—Congressman J. N. W. Rumple of Marengo, representing the second district of Iowa in the lower house of the United States congress, and conceded a nomination this fall, has announced that he will not be a candidate for another term. The announcement is made in a letter to the Hon. Joe R. Lane, chairman of the republican congressional committee.

The news was altogether unexpected and has created great surprise throughout the district. It has been generally understood that there would be no opposition to Captain Rumple's nomination and there has been no talk of other candidates. Following is the letter received by Mr. Lane:

"Marengo, Iowa, July 12, 1902.—Hon. J. R. Lane, Davenport, Iowa.—Dear Sir: Through you as chairman of the republican congressional committee, I desire to state that in consideration of causes purely personal, I am compelled to decline a re-election to congress. In this connection, allow me to return to all republicans and friends my sincere thanks and gratitude for the support given and assistance rendered in my campaign and congressional life. Regretting that circumstances are such that I cannot serve longer than the present term, I remain, very respectfully,

"J. N. W. Rumple."

Marengo, July 14.—The declination of Congressman Rumple came as a great surprise to Iowa county citizens, but the reasons therefor at this time permit of no discretion on the part of Mr. Rumple, notwithstanding the assured nomination and election. For some years a growth on the lower lip has given him some care, which during the past year has developed into an active cancerous growth, extending within the mouth, and a large lump has now developed within the glands of the throat. Much time has been given to heroic treatment administered at a hospital in Indianapolis and now, having dispaired of any permanent relief there, he has, after a hurried visit home to consult with relatives and friends, gone to Chicago, where he is now undergoing an x-ray treatment by eminent specialists. Feeling that a restoration to health, not to be had while in active public life, was of greater importance to himself and family than anything else, and feeling that the only thing for him to do to be fair with his friends was to thus early announce his declination because of his disability, it was done.

HOSPITAL FOR DIPSOMANIACS.

Board of Control Taking Steps to Comply With New Law.

Des Moines, July 10.—The board of control has taken up the question of the establishment of a department for dipsomaniacs, inebriates and persons addicted to the excessive use of narcotics, in one or more of the state hospitals. Judge Robinson of the board said yesterday there had been numberless letters and messages from persons in different parts of the state asking whether the board had located a hospital for inebriates, as provided for in the law on that subject passed by the last general assembly. The law went into effect on the 4th of July and the board at once began to obtain the opinions of superintendents and others connected with the state institutions as to the best place for the location of the hospital, or more than one if found necessary. Judge Robinson said the board hoped to announce in a short time where the department for inebriates would be established.

As soon as the board reaches a decision the county authorities will be at once officially informed. Judging from the inquiries received at the office of the board of control, the new department will do a flourishing business. The law applies to all dipsomaniacs, inebriates and persons addicted to the excessive use of morphine or other narcotics. They may be brought before the district court or judge of the county where they live for examination and commitment. The law says their examination and commitment shall be governed by the same statutes as now apply to the commitment of incorrigibles to the state industrial school.

KILLED HIS SON-IN-LAW.

Ed. Widner Hits Moses Labarge on the Head With a Flatiron.

Clinton, July 14.—Moses Labarge, aged 80, was instantly killed by his son-in-law, Ed. Widner, who struck Labarge in the head with a flatiron When Labarge entered the house his daughter was in a violent quarrel with her husband, who threatened to brain her with a flatiron. She frantically appealed to her father for protection. Labarge remonstrated with Widner, who turned on the old man and struck him down, fracturing the skull. Widner ran for a doctor but before he returned the man was dead. Widner was placed under arrest on the charge of manslaughter.

FRED JOHNSON KILLED.

Coroner's Jury Holds He Was Kicked to Death by Carl Hector.

Avoca, July 10.—In a brawl in John Carson's saloon Fred Johnson was killed by Carl Hector. A post mortem examination was made by Drs. Emmert and Hardmon. A clot of blood was found at the base of the brain that caused death. In the absence of the coroner, Justice J. T. Hazen held an inquest. The evidence showed that Hector knocked Johnson down and then kicked him. The verdict of the jury was that Johnson came to his death by blows on the head and kicks administered by one Carl Hector. Hector was committed to jail.

Suicide of Ex-Police Captain.

Council Bluffs, July 14.—After a life and death struggle with his wife for the possession of a pistol Dixon Denny, who until a month ago was captain of the police in this city, shot himself through the heart. Mrs. Denny narrowly escaped being shot in the struggle. She awoke to find her husband moving about the room and asked him what he was looking for. He replied that he wanted his revolver to shoot an imaginary enemy. Mrs. Denny realized something was wrong, secured the revolver from a dresser and the struggle and shooting followed. Denny is thought to have been temporarily demented over some business matters.

"Tommy" Crooks Drowned.

Des Moines, July 12.—Thomas Crooks, better known to the people of Des Moines as "Tommy" Crooks, a promoter of local sports and the proprietor of the "Little Turf" saloon at Sixth and Cherry was drowned last evening on Seventh street about a block below the "Q" tracks. Mr. Crooks had been out viewing the flood and while turning around in the flooded street drove on the embankment into twenty-five feet of water.

The Lancet specially asserts that the king is free from cancer.

Lady Arline's Secret.

This assurance on the part of the powerful baron was as balm to Charlie's troubled soul.

He believed Capt. Brand must speedily find himself in hot water.

The conversation took several turns.

Indeed, Charlie found the baron so congenial that he was easily led into relating many reminiscences connected with his past, so that, eventually, Peterhoff had a pretty good knowledge of the young man's character.

At last they separated.

"You can depend on me. At the same time keep your wits about you when dealing with this Brand. Something will presently drop," said the baron.

When Charlie drew near the hotel, after visiting his own room and improving his appearance to some extent, he was conscious of a nervous condition of mind such as was entirely new to him.

And he was obliged to confess that it had gone pretty far when the prospect of an interview with a young woman could have such an influence upon him.

The next thing on the program was to find a chance for a quiet talk, where the captain could not intrude.

So he asked again for Lady Arline, and she presently came down to the same bijou parlor, rosy and smiling.

Charlie had heard the voice of Capt. Brand somewhere about the hotel, and he was more or less concerned lest that worthy come in upon them ere he could make his arrangements.

Hence he speedily opened the subject.

"I have much of importance to tell you, and we must be where Capt. Brand may not intrude. Suppose I get a nice vehicle with a quiet animal and we can go to take a look at the suburbs of Antwerp."

Arline did not hesitate.

She knew that she could trust this frank-faced gentleman with her very life if need be.

So she quickly agreed to his plan.

"In fifteen minutes, then; and be sure you wrap up well," said Charlie, hastening away to secure just the outfit that would suit his idea as to the right thing.

True to his promise, he was back in good time.

Near the parlor Charlie ran across Brand, who greeted him rather effusively, he thought, and would have detained him, only that the young man refused to be held up, and laughingly pleaded an engagement with Lady Arline, and the impatience of his noble charger outside.

Thus it came about that, after running the gauntlet in this way, Charlie was at length given the proud pleasure of driving away with the fair girl.

Charlie knew it was only proper for him to open the ball with an account of the strange things that had befallen him since last he said good night.

One thing he intended keeping to himself for the present, and this was the name of the young fellow who had been his companion in the dungeon. At least there was no necessity of bringing it forward until he had heard what she wished to tell him, and discovered if his suspicions were confirmed.

"Now that there is no longer a chance of our being overheard, I'm going to make an awful confession to you, Lady Arline," he said.

She turned a startled face toward him, and, immediately seeing the quizzical smile, felt relieved.

"I shall fortify myself to hear it. Pray proceed."

"Where do you think I passed the night?"

She believed she could account for a fair portion of it, but confessed her ignorance as to the remainder.

"In the lockup," he said calmly.

"Do you mean the jail?" breathlessly.

"Yes. Please don't draw away from me, or imagine I was engaged in any street brawl. It all came to me because I chanced to make your acquaintance yesterday morning."

"Why, Mr. Stuart!"

"Because, forsooth, you chance to have a carriage like a queen; and besides, possess the most charming of [illegible] blue eyes."

[illegible] crimson and still surveying her hair and [illegible] with puzzled as well as startled [illegible]

"I confess I do not understand you at all. You will have to explain further."

"Pardon me. When I assisted you into the carriage at the Steen I was observed by Baron Peterhoff. He believed you were the Countess Isolde Brabant, because in several ways at a little distance one might be deceived. My interest in the baron's plans induced me to loiter about the hotel last night when he was making his wholesale arrests, and by accident they caught me in the dragnet."

"Then she—that wonderful woman—has been arrested?"

When he nodded in the affirmative, strangely enough Arline gave a little sigh of relief, as though some unexplainable burden were removed from her heart; but Charlie was too obtuse to understand that the first little fire of jealousy had been kindled in that gentle breast, because she knew the reputation Isolde Brabant had as a sorceress among men.

The ice having now been broken, he started in to tell his strange story.

Arline listened eagerly.

Indeed, Othello, relating his astonishing adventures to Desdemona, could not have had a more deeply interested listener than this fair English girl proved to be.

When he described his companion in misery he was careful not to say too much, lest he betray that which he wished to keep a secret a little longer.

The story was done.

Arline had hung on his words eagerly, and his assurance that Baron Peterhoff would take care of Capt. Brand, discovering the truth with regard to his claims, and relieve her of his presence—if, as Charlie suspected, the other proved to be an arrant imposter—was comforting to her troubled heart.

Still Lady Arline showed no signs of nervousness.

"Perhaps I may shock you, Mr. Stuart—perhaps you have such strict notions of honesty and a name upon which there has never been a stain, that you will hardly be as pleased to look upon me in the light of a sister when I confess that I have a relative in whom I am deeply concerned, and who has broken the law of his native land—who took what was not his own and fled. In plain language, Mr. Stuart, my cousin betrayed a trust and stole money."

She was scarlet with shame as she turned her blue eyes appealingly toward him.

"Let me tell you as briefly as I can. I knew him quite well. He was younger, and a son of my father's only brother, now long since dead. We were good friends up to the time he took this false step, and I was the last one he saw before he fled from England. Poor boy, if he had only confided in me, I could have easily settled the matter, which I did soon afterward, at any rate.

"I have been searching since last October; at times the trail would grow warm, and then I lost sight of him completely.

"By mere accident a friend wrote me that she believed she had seen him in Antwerp, though he had not answered her smile and nod. I could very well understand why, since he believed the officers from London were looking for him.

"That is why I came here—to find this boy, to reclaim and make a man of him."

"And I shall endeavor to assist you in your search for this Alexander Brand," said Charlie eagerly. "As it chanced I have some knowledge of the young chap. In truth, I have seen him face to face."

"Here—in Antwerp?" eagerly.

"In this city."

"And you can take me to him? You will, Mr. Stuart?" laying a hand upon his arm.

"If you so desire; but that will necessitate a long journey—across the sea, in fact."

"Then he has returned to England?"

"No; to America—New York."

"How very strangely it all came about!" she mused.

"Almost incredible! Indeed, I should have been loth to believe such things could be possible if I had not gone through the experience myself."

Everything had now been told, so that there was no more secrets.

The rest of the ride was occupied in enjoying the features of the scenery, in so far as these points could be discovered from a vehicle.

And Charlie's mind was made up ere they returned to the Hotel de la Paix that, God willing, he would serve and win this peerless girl.

The curiosity of Artemus had been whetted to a degree that demanded satisfaction, else his peace of mind was forever gone.

He asked many questions regarding Aleck.

Evidently the young fellow had aroused the strongest interest in his mind, for he saw in him the elements of a strong character that must attract attention from the public.

"Where is he bound—Hong Kong, Nagasaki, Singapore, Cape Town? I'm ready to go to the uttermost parts of the earth to interview him!"

"Try something easier—something nearer home."

"New York?" with a little, almost inarticulate shriek.

"Exactly. I have a sort of engagement with him at the Windsor Hotel in your city."

"But that is not me."

"Well, you can make one of the party. Arline—that is, Miss Brand, or rather, Lady Arline—is bound to find Aleck. She is possessed of an idea that since fortune was so bountiful as to heap favors in her lap, she should respond by taking care of this half-brother, or cousin, who seems balancing between a bright career and going to the devil.

"Circumstances drive us sometimes, don't they, Charlie? But there's one party I rather guess you've overlooked."

"Who's that?"

"Her father," chuckling.

"Capt. Brand, you mean. I believe I have arranged a berth for him."

"Where—on the steamer?"

"Rather in the place where I spent part of last night."

"Oh, ah! then he's a fraud, sure enough?"

"I have every reason so to believe. At any rate, my friend, the baron, has promised to look after him."

"I've no doubt Peterhoff's intentions are good; but there's a prospect of his being fully occupied in another quarter," Artemus said, sagely.

"Meaning the Countess Isolde."

"Well, she has seldom missed her game—the most wonderful woman outside of Thackeray's Becky Sharpe I ever heard of. You're lucky to have just missed her, my boy. Men jeer at her powers and boast about their invulnerable qualities; yet no sooner do they come in touch with this modern Circe than their knees grow weak, and one glance from her bewitching eyes charms them even as the rattlesnake does its prey."

"Your advice is good. I had intended depending on my own ability to checkmate this old reprobate; and, on the whole, it may be best for me to keep my hand at the plow."

"And I'll stand by, ready to give what aid I may. Don't hesitate to call on Artemus Barnaby if you are bent upon some dark and desperate business that stands for the right. You know I have some sort of a claim upon this affair, seeing that only for my pertinacity in dragging you on that wild goose chase in search of the new Man in the Iron Mask, of whom old wives in Antwerp gossip, you would never have gone there to the dungeons of the Steen, and ergo, would never have had the pleasure of saving Lady Arline from her distressing position."

The words of his companion aroused within Charlie a sense of the great debt he owed Artemus, who had been an instrument in the hands of Fate to bring about the result upon which his whole future now seemed to hinge.

So he seized his hand and squeezed it with fraternal zeal—squeezed it till the owner was fain to appeal for mercy.

"Yes, I owe you everything, my dear fellow; and if I can at any time do you a favor, try me. There are few things I could refuse you."

After that there was the fullest confidence between these two. Charlie confided to Artemus his plans for routing the enemy, and was glad to adopt some very bright and sagacious ideas advanced by the latter.

Everything seemed as usual, but under the calm exterior forces were working that threatened a speedy upheaval.

Capt. Brand had taken the alarm.

Keen-eyed man of the world though this great traveler was, he read the writing on the wall, and it plainly declared his reign had neared its end.

Hence he detested Charlie with a venom such as could only be compared with the enraged cobra, seeking to bury its poisoned fangs in the object of its hatred.

In brief, this fine old plotter began to cast about him for some method by means of which he could get rid of Mr. Charlie Stuart, either temporarily or for all time.

He was not alone in his schemings.

Other harpies there were who hoped to share in the glorious plunder—men whose past lives no doubt could possibly show almost as great a variety of adventure and bold schemes as his own.

Accordingly these precious worthies laid their heads together in order to devise some brilliant scheme whereby the obnoxious interloper—this young Lochinvar who had come out of the west—might be defeated ere he could carry the girl off on his fleet steed.

And when the conference was adjourned, it had all been arranged just how Charlie was to be dropped out of sight.

However, these worthies in planning so neat a campaign failed to take into consideration several elements which had a positive bearing upon the ultimate outcome.

There was the baron, for example.

Besides—there was Artemus.

No doubt this latter individual, with his peculiar notions and his apparently inoffensive appearance, would have been looked upon by the hoary old fortune-hunter as very much in the nature of a freak, and must be brushed aside without ceremony.

But they made a mistake. Under that simple exterior beat a bold heart and a keen brain.

For Artemus had taken a room next to Capt. Brand's, and during that celebrated conference his eye and ear did noble duty at the keyhole of a connecting door.

WHERE DEATH REIGNS HIGH

France, Though Favored by Nature, Has Heavy Mortality Record.

M. Papillon has lately printed a striking array of statistics on the [illegible]lation between public hygiene and mortality, from which the following instances and remarks are taken:

France (he says) is favored by climate and in other respects. While its birth-rate the smallest in Europe its death-rate among the greatest. The cause is not in nature, but in institutions. From the 38,000,000 inhabitants of France 150,000 deaths from tuberculosis annually occur. In there are but 60,000 among the 40,000,000 of Great Britain, but 500,000 among the 56,000,000 of Germany.

In every nation of Europe except France the mortality from tuberculosis has diminished, and, at the same time, the consumption of alcohol has retrograded. The results are that in France, between one census and the next, the mortality from tuberculosis has increased 68, while in Italy many it diminished 109 in every 100,000 inhabitants. The difference is 41 per 100,000—or in the total population 68,000 lives were lost during the last census period in France which might have been—and ought to have been—saved.

Hyprophobia is stamped out in England, and is still common in France. The case is similar for other diseases.

Back to Nature.

"Take to the woods again!" he exclaimed. "Tear off the vicious trappings of a debilitating civilization and restore to degenerating mankind the superb physique, the absolute health of our forefathers. So only can the race be saved from a feebleness and melancholy which must lead to universal suicide." It is only a few months since Prof. Starr of the University of Chicago affirmed that we must become not merely imitators of the red men, but Indians in fact, in order to be saved from physical degeneration. By joining the Indians in the forest he maintained that we would gradually take on the attributes of the aborigines and regenerate the race. To show his confidence in his own theory he has been formally initiated as a member of the Onondaga tribe in central New York, and his next costume will hereafter consist of the eagle's feather and blanket.

Woman's Ready Wit.

The ready wit of southern women was the subject of comment at a recent gathering, and numerous illustrative anecdotes were told, says the Philadelphia Times. One had to do with a Virginia belle of a generation ago—a member of the Clark family of Taylors, famous in the social history of that state. Her betrothal to a worthy gentleman by the name of Mason had been announced at a formal function; and one young gentleman, whose hopes with regard to her had been crushed by the announcement, greeted her thus:

"May I beg to assure you that I am always yours, in spite of the fact that Taylor, that I hear you are to change your vocation for that of Mason?"

She regarded him contemptuously for a moment, and then replied:

"I am not quite certain of the fact of having found a goose, I may be willing to remain a Taylor."

Typhoid Fever Kills Soldiers.

During the months of January and February there were 800 deaths from typhoid fever in the British army. Notwithstanding the regulations regarding boiled water the soldiers continue to drink out of brooks and rivers.

In the eye of the state all religions are equal in Australia.

EXPLAINS PELEE'S ACTIONS.

Views of Prof. Verrill on the Recent Eruption.

Some of the phenomena attending the destruction of St. Pierre have been difficult to explain, especially the sheet of flame that seems to have accompanied or closely followed the violent explosion of gas.

Prof. Verrill of Yale states his view to be that the heat is sufficient to cause the dissociation of hydrogen and oxygen from water coming suddenly into contact with the lava in the crater, and that in the case of sea water chloride would be dissociated from sodium.

These gases suddenly ejected with great violence and exploding in the air above the crater would produce the effects manifested on so great a scale at Martinique.

The people were killed by the sudden explosion of a vast volume of hydrogen and oxygen; and this accounts for the sudden burning of flesh and clothes, as well as of buildings and of vessels in the roadstead.

The chlorine combining with some of the hydrogen would produce hydrochloric acid, which is poisonous and suffocating and would quickly kill all those not destroyed by the first explosion.

SALISBURY OUT; BALFOUR PREMIER

SALISBURY WANTED TO RETIRE

Relations of America With Great Britain Will Not Be Altered—Reasons Why Balfour and Not Chamberlain Was Chosen Premier.

London, July 14.—The fact of the resignation of the premiership of Great Britain by Lord Salisbury, as foreshadowed in the dispatches of the Asosciated Press, was officially given out last evening.

The prime minister laid down the responsibilities of his office July 11. Within twenty-four hours his majesty elevated Mr. A. J. Balfour, the government's chief representative in the house of commons, to the position of premier.

While it was expected in official and political circles that Lord Salisbury's retirement would be coincident with the coronation of King Edward, it was scarcely looked for prior to that event. Consequently about the only surprise expressed as the news spread through London was concerning the date rather than the fact of his resignation. The real interest was not so much in reference to Lord Salisbury's withdrawal as it was to the appointment of his successor.

The liveliest speculation is rife as to the personnel of the new cabinet. The most discussed feature of the pending changes is the position of Mr. Chamberlain, the colonial secretary, who, in many quarters, has been regarded as the most promising candidate for the premiership.

A representative of the Associated Press learns that prior to the acceptance of the new office Mr. Balfour first had an interview with Mr. Chamberlain and then consulted with his other cabinet associates. This is regarded as assurance that the future relative positions of Messrs. Balfour and Chamberlain will be satisfactory to both.

Mr. Chamberlain's friends say he always recognized the reversion of the premiership to be Mr. Balfour's right as government leader of the house of commons.

As to Lord Salisbury's withdrawal, the main reason is considered by practically all the best informed persons to have been simply a desire for private life on the part of a man advanced in years whose activities have been unusual, and whose scientific tastes predispose him to study and seclusion. That the retiring premier's health has failed him to some extent is undeniable; but this is not more than, perhaps, is to be expected in a man of his years, and the close of the war in South Africa and the return of the commanding general there is considered as an appropriate time for his withdrawal.

TO EVADE THE "OLEO" LAW.

Packers Will Send Out Coloring Matter With the Butterine.

Washington, July 10.—Manufacturers of Oleomargarine have made the law forced through congress by the dairy interests a dead letter. Recently the internal revenue commissioner decided that oleomargarine having a shade of yellow imparted by some natural product used in its manufacture would not have to pay the ten cents per pound placed on oleomargarine colored in imitation of butter. All the manufacturers have to do is to find the natural product which colors their product and refrain from using artificial coloring matter. Some of them have already solved the problem. The Armour company of Chicago has notified Commissioner Yerkes that it has devised the plan of sending out pure white oleomargarine in packages, each package containing a little pellet of coloring matter with instructions for using. The coloring is to be done by the purchaser and consumer, who has the right to do so under the law, being in no sense a retailer of the product. The keepers of boarding houses are also exempt.

The Armour company informed the commissioner that it did not wish to take this step without his knowledge, and that it stood ready to defend its course in the courts, if necessary. Another communication on the subject was received from a manufacturer who submitted a sample of what is known as "palm oil," a pure vegetable oil. He says that it is more nutritious and cheaper than cottonseed oil, ordinarily used in the manufacture of oleomargarine, and he wants to know whether he has a right to use it instead of cottonseed oil. Palm oil is a rich yellow and will impart a nice yellow to the oleomargarine. Since it is a pure vegetable oil Mr. Yerkes does not see how he can prevent its use. The manufacturer, although turning out a yellow oleomargarine, would be subject to a tax of only one-fourth of a cent a pound.

TO REFUND TAXES.

Order of Treasury Department Helps Whisky Men.

Washington, July 10.—The treasury department has just issued the first order under the new Philippine civil government act. The act provides that all taxes paid upon articles subject to internal revenue tax shipped to the Philippines since November 15, 1901, under the direction of the secretary of the treasury at that date, shall be refunded to the parties who have paid the same under regulations to be prescribed by the secretary of the treasury. Those regulations have now been issued. They provide that:

"Claims shall be prepared upon form issued by the commisioner of internal revenue for the refunding of taxes, known as form 46, and shall be made under oath. The character of the goods shipped, the date of shipment, the amount of taxes paid thereon, the name of the vessel and the name of port to which shipped should be stated in the body of the claim. The claims should be supported where possible by clearance certificates and by an affidavit of the consignee, showing that the goods were actually received at a port of the Philippines. Where neither the clearance certificates nor the affidavit of the consignee can be obtained it will be necessary for the claimant to obtain the affidavit of the master of the vessel upon which the goods were shipped, showing what disposition was made of the goods."

The principal articles upon which the refund will be mode are whiskeys, beer and other vinous spirits, and malt liquors and tobacco. No estimate of the amount of money to be refunded has been made at the treasury department, but it is supposed that it will aggregate several millions.

ACQUITTAL IS LOOKED FOR.

Close of Trial of Captain Ryan, Accused of Needless Cruelty.

Manila, July 12.—The court martial of Captain James A. Ryan of the Fifteenth cavalry, on the charge of unnecessary severity to natives, was concluded yesterday. It is believed that he will be acquitted. The accused during the day's proceedings made a lengthy statement defending his actions, and Major Edwin F. Glenn, Fifth infantry, counsel for the captain, strongly pleaded for his exoneration. He contended that the "water cure" was not torture and asserted that its use had saved more American and Filipino lives than any other expedients of the campaign. The major scored Judge Rhode for making a report that he was unable to substantiate and quoted a score of orders for the execution of guerrillas during the civil war to justify Captain Ryan.

General Maxilon, who has been convicted of treason at Cebu, island of Cebu, has been sentenced to ten years imprisonment and to pay a fine of $2,000.

General Noviso, who was jointly charged with General Maxilon, was sentenced to seven years imprisonment and a similar fine.

General Davis has turned over the command of the American troops in Mindanao island to General Sumner. The two generals are visiting Camp Vickers, where the Americans face the Moros.

The spread of cholera has slightly decreased, possibly on account of the rain. The totals since the outbreak are:

Manilo, 2,181 cases and 1,718 deaths; provinces, 12,475 cases and 9,357 deaths.

200 VICTIMS IN A MINE

RESULT OF AN EXPLOSION AT JOHNSTOWN, PA.

Two Miners Who Escaped Crawled Over Scores of Dead Bodies.

Johnstown, Pa., July 10.—Nearly 200 men, it is thought, were killed or injured yesterday in an explosion in the Cambria Steel Company's rolling mill coal mine under West Mont hill at noon. How many are dead it will take several days to determine.

It was nearly an hour after the explosion before any general knowledge of what had happened got abroad. Men who came from the mines, escaping with their lives, told the news and it spread like wild fire all over the city. Mothers, wives, daughters, sons and relatives were frantic with grief.

Soon after the news of the explosion reached the Cambria officials, Mining Engineer Marshall G. Moore and one of his assistants, Al G. Prosser, made an attempt to enter the mine. They were followed by Mine Superintendent Geo. T. Robinson, but the gasses compelled them to return to the surface.

Mine Foreman Harry Rodgers, his assistant, William Blanch, and Erie Bosses John Whitney, John Retallick and John Thomas were overcome by the gasses and it is feared that they perished in an heroic effort to rescue the miners.

A son of Harry Rodgers then tried to reach his father, but he was quickly overcome by the deadly gasses and was carried out unconscious.

William Subich spent several hours at the Mill creek opening. He said that he believed as many as 450 men were still in the mine. In his opinion from all he could glean, not to exceed 150 men had come out.

About a score of American miners who were at work in the Klondike district noticed the presence of the fire damp in their apartments soon after the explosion occurred and started at once for the main entrance.

They were almost overcome by gas. One of the men said it is not known what caused the explosion. He said that a few days ago the officials issued an order to the employes in the mine not to play with the gas, but that the next day a young Hungarian was seen pushing his naked lamp along the roof of the mine in search of it.

Canvas screens are being used to wall all the side entrances and rooms, so as to force a direct current of pure air ahead of the rescuers.

Engineer A. G. Prosser, who, with Mr. Moore entered the mine at the main opening, came to the surface at Mill creek and immediately set about securing men and material to aid in the rescue.

Several miners who were working near the scene of the explosion reached the surface and say that they saw the bodies of at least fifty men.

The men who came out are foreigners and were so excited that they could not tell a connected story. The mine has been open for about fifty years and is producing 3,000 tons per day.

The mining officials of the Cambria company stated the explosion was one of fire damp.

Outside the "Klondike" the mines are safe and uninjured.

Within the fatal mine walls of masonry three feet through were torn down, the roofs of the mine demolished and not a door remains standing. Miners who left the mine by way of the Mill creek entrance brought horrible stories of crawling over the dead bodies of their comrades. Tom Foster was in his office when the explosion occurred. With the help of Foreman Roberts an effort was made to replace a few of the shattered doors.

Johnstown, Pa., July 12.—Yesterday was a day of rescue at the fated Rolling Mill mine of the Cambria Steel company. Thrilling experiences attended the efforts of the forty daring fellows who went down into the mine with the faint hope that they might be in time to restore life to some of the entombed men. They saved the lives of fouteen men by bringing them out into the sunlight.

Many dead bodies were found, but they were left in the theater of death until every living person had been rescued. That done, the dead were brought up and exposed to morbid gaze on the way to the morgue.

Eighty-seven dead bodies were recovered from the mine between daylight and nightfall. Occasionally word would come to the surface by some mysterious means that another heap of remains had been exposed to the vision of the searchers, three miles inside the mine. Dangerous headings in the Klondike section yet remain unexplored. Many more dead may be found there.

It is thought that 150 is a low estimate of the casualty list.

Johnstown, Pa., July 13.—While the extent of the catastrophe of the rolling mill mine of the Cambria Steel company is almost incomprehensible a careful and complete compilation by the Associated Press shows that 112 is the extent of the list of the dead thus far taken out from the mine. Future explorations of the mine corridors may add a few to this number.

The barber says that a man who shaves himself has a hard cheek.

Even an elastic conscience will sometimes fly back and sting.

The employee of the gas company was excited. "What's the matter," asked the superintendent. "I've just found a street that has not been torn up for nearly ten years," was the reply. "Send a gang of men out there at once," ordered the superintendent.

"How readily and naturally your daughter takes her high C," said Mrs. Oldcastle as she sat in the splendid music room of the new neighbors listening to the practicing of the daughter of the house. "Yes," replied her hostess, "Mamie takes after her pa. I always told Josiah that whenever anything came high he always took it right off. He always was so aristocratical in his tastes."

"My daughter," confides the American magnate to the royal guard while the coronation ceremony is going on, "is inside the building watching the performance. She married the Duke of Scatterbranes." "Hand," ventures the royal guard, "do you not care to go hin hand see the great haffair?" "Lawsee, no!" answers the American magnate; "why, I've got a season ticket to the theayter back home, and I see every comic-opera show that comes to town."

A Fortunate Postmaster.

Kirk, Ark., July 14th.—Mr. William S. Drennan, Postmaster at this office, counts himself a very fortunate man.

Mr. Drennan in addition to being postmaster is a Justice of the Peace, a member of the Christian church and a highly respected and useful citizen.

He has suffered for some time with what some people would call "rickets" or "rigors" of the kidneys—kidney disease in a very painful form. He could not sleep, he had a dull pain over his left kidney, was continually restless, could not lie still, and had to get up through the night several times and was also troubled in this way during the day.

He used a few boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills, a remedy recently introduced in this state and advertised as a cure for Kidney Disease, Rheumatism, Malaria, etc., and in a short time was completely restored to vigorous, good health. He is very grateful to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Supreme Court Sustains the Foot-Ease Trade-Mark.

Justice Laughlin, in Supreme Court, Buffalo, has ordered a permanent injunction, with costs, and a full accounting of sales, to issue against Paul B. Hudson, the manufacturer of the foot powder called "Dr. Clark's Foot Powder," and also against a retail dealer of Brooklyn, restraining them from making or selling the Dr. Clark's Foot Powder, which is declared, in the decision of the Court, an imitation and infringement of "Foot-Ease," the powder to shake into your shoes. Allen S. Olmsted of Le Roy, N. Y., is the owner of the trade-mark "Foot-Ease." Similar suits will be brought against others who are now infringing on the Foot-Ease trademark and common law rights.

HEALTH AND ALL ITS BLESSINGS

Health will come with all its blessings to those who know the way, and it is mainly a question of right-living, with all the term implies, but the efforts which strengthen the system, the games which refresh and the foods which nourish are important, each in a way, while it is also advantageous to have knowledge of the best methods of promoting freedom from unsanitary conditions. To assist nature, when nature needs assistance, it is all important that the medicinal agents used should be of the best quality and of known value, and the one remedy which acts most beneficially and pleasantly, as a laxative, is—Syrup of Figs—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co.

With a proper understanding of the fact that many physical ills are of a transient character and yield promptly to the gentle action of Syrup of Figs, gladness and comfort come to the heart, and if one would remove the torpor and strain and congestion attendant upon a constipated condition of the system, take Syrup of Figs and enjoy freedom from the aches and pains, the colds and headaches and the depression due to inactivity of the bowels. In case of any organic trouble it is well to consult a competent physician, but when a laxative is required remember that the most permanently gratifying results will follow personal cooperation with the beneficial effects of Syrup of Figs. It is for sale by all reliable druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

The excellence of Syrup of Figs comes from the beneficial effects of the plants used in the combination and also from the method of manufacture which ensures that perfect purity and uniformity of product essential in a perfect family laxative. All the members of the family from the youngest to the most advanced in years may use it whenever a laxative is needed and share alike in its beneficial effects. We do not claim that Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of known value, but it possesses this great advantage over all other laxatives that it acts gently and pleasantly without disturbing natural functions, in any way, as it is free from every objectionable quality or substance. To get its beneficial effects it is always necessary to buy the genuine and the full name of the Co.—California Fig Syrup Co.—is printed on the front of every package.

Mother Always Keeps It Handy.

"My mother suffered a long time from distressing pains and general ill health due primarily to indigestion," says L. W. Spalding, Verona, Mo. "Two years ago I got her to try Kodol. She grew better at once and now at the age of seventy-six, eats anything she wants, remarking that she fears no bad effects as she has her bottle of Kodol handy." Don't waste time doctoring symptoms. Go after the cause. If your stomach is sound your health will be good. Kodol rests the stomach and strengthens the body by digesting your food. It is nature's own tonic. J. L. Harr.

Quite an accident happened to Hugh Corning last Sunday, and as a result his face was badly burned with powder. We are not sure as to just how the accident occured, but think an exploded shell and shot gun were the cause. We sincerly hope the injury will not prove serious.

Last Saturday was quite a day of ammusement in Klemme. Something like a Fourth of July celebration Foot races, refreshments and a ball game were the order of the day. In the evening the young people enjoyed a dance in Shoper's implement room. Everyone was quiet and ordley and a nice time was had. A numbr were up from Goodell.

Vacation Days.

Vacation time is here and the children are fairly living out of doors. There could be no healthier place for them. You need only to guard against the accidents incidental to most open air sports. No remedy equals DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve for quickly stopping pain or removing danger of serious consequences. For cuts, scalds and wounds. "I used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve for sores cuts and bruises," says L. B. Johnson, Swift, Tex. "It is the best remedy on the market." Sure cure for piles and skin diseases. Beware of counterfeits. ## MIDGETS LOSE TEN INNING GAME

Klemme Defeated By One Run in a Fast Game of Ball at Clarion Monday.

After a drive of 26 long miles the Klemme Midgets put up one of the best games of the season Monday at Clarion against the strong team at that city, losing the game by a lone marker which was made in the tenth inning. Kluckhohn and Nissen were battery for Klemme and Birdsall and Ltephens for Clarion. Kluckhon pitched giltedge ball, giving only two passes on balls and striking out twelve men. He is also credited with one put-out and three assists. Clarion just escaped a shutout at the hands of our boys, their four runs in the fifth being made after two men were out, and caused by one error. The Midgets went up against a good strong team and certainly played the game for all there was in it. Following is the score by innings:

Poisoning the System.

It is through the bowels that the body is cleansed of impurities. Constipation keeps these poisons in the system, causing headache, dullness and melancholia at first, then unsightly eruptions and finally serious illness unless a remedy is applied. DeWitt's Little Early Risers prevent this trouble by stimulating the liver, and promote easy, healthy action of the bowels. These little pills do not act violently but by strengthening the bowels enable them to perform their own work. Never gripe or distress. J. L. Harr.

We have just received a copy of the new catalog of the Nora Springs Seminary and Business College. It is the best ever sent out by that institution. There several changes worthy of notice, viz: The passing from private to public ownership and the granting of degrees. In this latter respect it is the only school of its kind in Iowa if not in the United States. The courses are stronger, and yet there are short courses for those who desire them. The record of the baseball team was the best of any school in northern Iowa. Judging from the literature we believe the school is in a highly prosperous condition and the outlook hopefull.

HEARING ON RAILROAD ASSESSMENT

Railroad Attorneys Say Land Values Are Not as High as They Should Be.

GOVERNOR DEFINES HIS IDEA

Hon. F. T. Campbell and Henry Wallace Appear for the Public and Argue for an Increase in the Taxes of Railroad Corporations.

Des Moines, July 16.—The executive council met yesterday and commenced listening to the arguments in regard to the railroad assessments. Representatives of railroads were present, including Messrs. Baldwin and Sturgis o. the Burlington, Knight and Carbut of the Illinois Central, Crandon and Stevens of the Northwestern, Carr and Dudley of the Milwaukee, Seevers of the Iowa Central, Woodruff of the Great Western, and Carroll Wright of the Rock Island. The hearing will take several days and it is probable that all the railroad companies will be heard at the same time. Several others will also speak. A representative of the business interests of the state and particularly the shipping interests will be heard and also persons representing counties. The board of supervisors of Clinton county have sent Mr. Miller, an attorney, here, and the county auditor of Hamilton county has written for a date for himself and members of the board.

Judge Stevens of Boone, opened the discussion, speaking for the Northwestern. He laid the basis for his argument by presenting reports from many of the counties along the Northwestern line, being facts gathered by county auditors from the records, which showed the actual average selling price of the lands which have been sold the past six months in these counties to have been about $62 per acre. He referred to the enormous increase in value of farm lands, and said he believed the increase on Iowa farm land had been $7 to $10 since last September. While the statistics were taken from the books showing sales this year, yet a great many of the transfers were merely completion of sales made last year, hence the records do not show as high as land is actually selling for now. Besides, land sold on the market is not the highest priced land, but the cheapest land. He estimated the actual selling price of land in these counties to be not less than $70 per acre. Yet the value assessed by the assessor is only $44 an acre. Similar statistics were given in regard to live stock and other property. As for actual value, not selling value, he contended that it would be nearer $100 an acre, and at that price would actually be a good investment. In thirty years the actual selling price of lands had risen 400 per cent, but the assessment value had gone up but 50 per cent.

Judge Carr, of Des Moines, speaking for the Milwaukee, presented a series of affidavits from leading citizens of ten representative counties in northern Iowa, on actual value of farm lands and assessed values. These affidavits were from county officials, bankers and business men. In Buena Vista the actual estimated value of land was $60 an acre, assessed value $36.51; in Cerro Gordo from $55 to $62, assessed $34.71; Chickasaw, $50, assessed $32.06; Floyd, $60, assessed $37.41; Clay, $50 to $60, assessed $30; Kossuth $55 to $60, assessed $26.92; Lyon $60, assessed $31.06; Sioux $70, assessed $36.97; Shelby, $65, assessed $34.18, and so on. Judge Carr stated that taking the ten counties from which he had received reports the average assessed valuation was about 54 per cent of the averaged actual value.

Addresses along the same lines were also made by Caroll Wright, of Moines; Judge G. W. Sewer, of Oskaloosa, and A. S. Dudley, of Milwaukee.

Des Moines, July 17.—The hearing on taxation before the executive council was marked yesterday by the appearance of Frank T. Campbell of this city, ex-state railroad commissioner, in behalf of the public. Mr. Campbell, in a vigorous speech that lasted an hour and a half, strongly urged a large increase in the railroad assessment. He is the only person who has thus far appeared against the railroads.

Another feature of the hearing, which lasted all day, was a statement by Governor Cummins, in which he defined his idea of railroad valuation. He took the broad ground that railroad property, as any other, is worth just what it will sell for and that in assessing the council had to take into consideration those things that would help to determine the selling price.

The statement of Governor Cummins was regarded as of no little importance by the representatives of the railroads, as it is the first time in the course of the hearing that the governor has to any extent defined his views. He made it plain that he did not share the views advanced by A. S. Dudley of the Milwaukee that the maximum value that can properly be put on a railroad is the cost of reproduction.

Des Moines, July 18.—At the hearing on taxation before the executive council yesterday, W. W. Baldwin of the Burlington presented figures to show that numerous large corporations in the state, not engaged in manufacturing of merchandising, were utterly failing to pay their proper share of taxes. Not only were their assessments too low, in his opinion, but there was no attempt to comply with the law that such corporations shall make a return to the assessors on the amount and value of their capital stock.

Mr. Baldwin cited a number of corporations of Des Moines and of Burlington that were assessed far too low. The Des Moines corporations that he referred to particularly were the street railway company, the Edison Light company, the water company, the Savery Hotel company, and several others. He said these corporations failed to comply with the law and to make returns showing the amount of value of their capital stock as the statute requires.

Another interesting feature of the day's hearing was the appearance of Henry Wallace of this city, who spoke in behalf of the public and for the valuation of the railroads on the basis of the market value of their stocks and bonds.

Albert E. Clarke of Minneapolis, general solicitor for the Minneapolis & St. Louis road, appeared before the council at the morning session. Mr. Clarke urged that "horse" sense be used in assessing railroads the same as in assessing other property. Following Mr. Clarke, Mr. M. C. Woodruff, tax commissioner of the Great Western, read a paper in which he discussed various phases of the railway taxation question.

Des Moines, July 19.—Addresses were made before the executive council by various representatives of the railroads. Just as it was thought the hearing had been concluded, Governor Cummins substituted some questions which have not been discussed, and they acted as a bomb in the railroad camp. They were:

"Has the executive council the right to assess the railroads at less than 25 per cent of their actual value, as the statutes of Iowa seem to require?"

"Can the council act as an equalizing board as well as an assessment body in respect to the valuation of the railroad property and, proceeding on the assumption that real estate and personal property are assessed at less than 25 per cent of their real value, assess the railroad property in Iowa at the same percentage of its real worth?"

The questions will be discussed today.

Des Moines, July 21.—The hearing on taxation before the executive council closed at noon Saturday. It was marked by the informal declaration from Governor Cummins that in his opinion the council was required to assess the railroads at 25 per cent of their actual value, regardless of what might be the assessment of real estate or other property.

This important question was raised by Governor Cummins himself Friday night, just at the close of the railroads in alphabetical order. Arguments in favor of the the view that the council should fix the assessment at less than 25 per cent, if other property was assessed at less, were presented by Judge George H. Carr of Des Moines, Carroll Wright, Judge J. L. Stevens of Boone and others. When nearly all the arguments were presented Governor Cummins made his own position plain. It was in accordance with what he had indicated Friday night in his statements to the railroad representatives that he did not believe the council could go below the ratio of 25 per cent in making the assessment of the railroads.

This declaration of the governor, and his attitude throughout the railway assessment hearing, has induced the railroad representatives to believe that there will be a considerable increase in the assessment. It is said that Secretary of State Martin will stand by the governor in urging a higher assessment, and that neither the state treasurer nor the state auditor will oppose an increase.

DAYS OF GRACE ARE NO MORE.

Such Is the Ruling Made by Attorney General Mullan.

Des Moines, July 18.—The law in Iowa requiring days of grace has been abolished. This is the gist of an opinion that has been prepared by Attorney General Mullan in response to a request for a ruling on the question by Auditor of State Merriam. The negotiable instruments measure, which was enacted by the last general assembly, had the effect to eliminate days of grace from the Iowa law. There have been many inquiries on this subject from bankers and it was because of these that Mr. Merriam sought an opinion from the attorney general.

There have been conflicting opinions on this subject and banks have been given much trouble by the uncertainty. Mr. Mullan has investigated the law thoroughly and says he entertains no doubt whatever that days of grace have been abolished. When the negotiable instruments bill was before the house last spring the question was raised whether it would not have this very effect. Representative Clarke of Dallas, who introduced the bill, held it would not, and little more attention was given it. Had it been known the effect of the measure would be to do away with days of grace there is no doubt an amendment would have been insisted on, inasmuch as a measure to abolish days of grace had been defeated earlier in the session.

ARMY POST BUILDINGS.

Department Orders to Construct Received in Des Moines.

Des Moines, July 19.—Major Turner, quartermaster in charge of the construction of Fort Des Moines, yesterday received an order from the war department directing him to proceed with the erection of eighteen more buildings at Fort Des Moines. Major Turner stated that the plans and specifications will be ready for contractors the last of the month, and bids will be taken and the work pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

The eighteen additional buildings ordered yesterday will make a total of twenty-seven buildings to be constructed this season and when completed will quarter a squadron of cavalry.

The contracts for the nine buildings now in course of construction will require an expenditure of about $167,000. The estimate for the buildings ordered constructed yesterday is approximately twice as much, or about $334,000, making a total of about $500,000 to be expended by the government on buildings at the post at once.

SEE GREAT WESTERN'S HAND.

Opinion It Will Build Diagonally Through State to St. Louis.

Sioux City, July 18.—That the project of building a direct line of railroad from Sioux City, diagonally across Iowa and Missouri, is nearing accomplishment, is becoming evident. That the Great Western is concerned with the project is strongly believed.

The Iowa and St. Louis recently incorporated in Missouri and Iowa, is doing things. It is spending money. It is letting contracts. It is giving most positive evidence that it has money in the treasury. It announces that it wil complete the line into Sioux City in 1904.

The Iowa and St. Louis propose to do exactly the same things that were proposed by the old St. Louis, Iowa and Dakota, to which this town voted a tax about ten years ago. At that time the project was headed as now by Captain T. P. Gere, was financed and on the point of construction of its first section of road. But the outcome of stringent times stopped every such enterprise, and this one has slept ever since.

160 New Rural Mail Route Carriers.

Des Moines, July 17.—One hundred and sixty new rural mail route carriers have been added to the service in Iowa within the last two weeks. There are now about one thousand carriers in the state. The advance in their pay from $50 to $60 per month has induced a larger per cent of the carriers than ever to stick to their job as steady employment, and the efficiency of the service has been greatly increased by reason of this fact.

CHEMIST'S REPORT A SURPRISE.

Not a Trace of Poison Could be Found by Floyd Davis.

Marshalltown, July 18.—Coroner Lierle has received the report of Chemist Floyd Davis on the examination of the internal organs of Mrs Maud Lambert Stubbs, who was found dead in her bed recently and whom the authorities are confident was murdered. It was confidently believed that the woman had been killed by poison, but the report of the chemist states that there was no trace of any poison found in the organs sent for examination. The case has greatly puzzled all who have had the investigation in hand. The physicians can assign no cause for death other than poisoning, which all symptoms indicate. An examination showed that a dog which was found dead on the bed besides Mrs. Lambert had died from morphine poisoning. All theories as to the cause of the woman's death are exploded by the chemist's report. It is still believed by some that the woman died of morphine poison, but that the quantity, though sufficient to cause death, was so small as to leave no trace in the human body. Doctors state that instances are on record where deaths have been caused by morphine and all traces dissipated where an examination was not had immediately. The inquest over the woman's remains was resumed today and several new witnesses have been summoned, who, it is hoped, will be able to shed some light on the mysterious affair. At present, however, it is unlikely that the cause of Mrs. Stubb's death will ever be known.

NEW DIPSOMANIAC LAW.

Norman Blacksmith Sent Up for Treatment.

Lake Mills, July 19.—S. N. Bidne a blacksmith living at Norman, this county, was tried before Judge Kelley at Forest City, under the new law for detention and treatment of dipsomaniacs, inebriates and those addicted to the excessive use of narcotics. Bidne is in the habit of getting drunk when in this condition and sometimes dangerous. Last week he was arrested and lodged in jail on a charge of attempting to shoot a woman. An examination was held before a justice and he was bound over to the grand jury. He was then tried under the inebriate act with the result that he was sentenced to confinement in the hospital for the insane. After the trial the question arose as to which hospital he should be sent. County Attorney Gordon at once telegraphed to the board of control inquiring if provisions had been made for keeping this class of patients. The answer he received was, that no arrangements had yet been made, but would be in a few days. In the meantime bidne was allowed his liberty, as he is under bond to appear in the next term of court. As soon as arrangements are made at one of the insane hospitals for keeping this class of patients, Bidne will be taken there for treatment. This is the first case in this part of the state, if not in the whole state.

GOOD HAUL BY SHERIFF.

Raid on Gambling Houses Yields to City Treasury $966.15.

Des Moines, July 21.—The gambling house over Third and Walnut streets, operated by Frank Johnson and "Shorty" Peters, was raided by the sheriff Saturday, without the aid or consent of the police department, on warrants sworn out by Isaac Finkelstein in Police Judge Silvara's court. Fifty-one men were arrested and fined $15 each. Only thirteen were able to pay their fines. Peters, for the house, paid the fines of the other thirty-eight. The sum of $201.15 was seized from the tables during the raid. The fines amounted to $765. The total revenue to the city by reason of the raid was $966.15. In addition about $2,000 worth of furniture was seized and will be tried in police court the coming week. The owners say that there seems to be no reason why they should spend money defending it.

The raid is the third during the city administration and since the houses opened in Des Moines. Isaac Finkelstein has been the instigator of all three. He served notice on the mayor and police department demanding that the houses be raided last week, but no attention was paid to the notice, "on account of the extra work incurred on account of the flood," said the chief of police a few days ago. In pursuance of the first two notices the police made raids. They managed to capture from four to eight men in each place. The highest number in the eight places searched in the former raids was thirty-eight. In the raid Saturday the record was broken, fifty-one being taken.

REESE IS A CANDIDATE.

Willing to Make the Race Against Major Lacey.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 21.—John P. Reese, president of the United Mine Workers of Iowa, announces that he will accept the democratic nomination for congress in the Sixth district of this state. For two days telegrams have been pouring in on Reese asking him to make the race. The district is republican by 2,500 and is now represented by Major Lacey. There are 5,000 miners in the district.

Reese has steadily refused to enter politics until his friends in the convention urged him to do so in order that the miners and working people generally might in case of his election have a voice in legislation against "government by injunction." It is said tonight that President Mitchell will visit the district during the campaign and speak for Reese; Mother Jones, one of the most persuasive speakers in the labor field, has also promised to go there if it is desired.

EVIDENCES OF MURDER.

Unknown Man Found Near Hampton With His Head Split Open.

Hampton, July 21.—The body of an unknown colored man about 50 years of age was found beside the Iowa Central tracks, three-fourths of a mile south of town. It was suposed at first that he had been killed by the cars, but his head was found to have been split open with a hatchet. It was evident he had been dead for two days. He had been at wark in town two or three days and was last seen Wednesday evening. There is no clue except that suspicion attaches to three negroes seen with the man here, but they have all gone. The man was supposed to have come from St. Louis and was looking for work.

Killed by Lightning.

Maquoketa, July 18.—Peter House, a brother of Judge House, was instantly killed by lightning. He had risen early and was out among the stock on his little farm near the city. Two cows were also killed. He was an old resident of this county, 65 years old, and leaves a wife and four children. This is the third death by accident in his family in three months.

OCEAN GRAVE FOR FOURTEEN

Whaleboat Carrying a Pleasure Party Capsizes Near Star Island.

ONLY THREE LIVES ARE SAVED

Waiters and Waitresses Were Out on a Pleasure Trip When a Sudden Squall Came Up, Bringing Death and Destruction.

Portsmouth, N. H., July 18.—A nineteen foot whaleboat containing sixteen waiters and waitresses employed at the Oceanic house, Star island, Isle of Shoals, who had gone out in the bay yesterday afternoon on a pleasure trip in charge of Skipper Fred Miles, capsized during a sudden squall and fourteen of the occupents were drowned. The other three were rescued by fishermen who put out from shore in their dories.

The names of the drowned are:

Henry Farrington, Cambridge, Mass.
W. A. Alward, Fredericton, N. H.
Bertha Graham, Danvers, Mass.
Minnie McDonald, Cambridgeport, Mass.
Eva and May Adams, Portsmouth, N. H.
Cathering and Elizabeth Boews, Saxonville, Mass.
Bessie Chase, Malden, Mass.
Anna Sheehan, West Medford, Mass.
Eva and May Marshall, Haverhill, Mass.
Isabell Kaouska, Cambridge, Mass.
Laura Gilmore, Exeter, N. H.

The saved are:

Alice Hagerty, Lizzie Bresnahan, Skipper Fred Miles.

The bodies of Farrington, Alward, Bessie Chase, Eva Marshal and Isabel Kaouska have not been recovered. All the others were taken from the water by fishermen and then to the island, where they were worked over for a long time by two doctors, but without success.

Farrington and Alward were both law students at Harvard university, rooming at Forsythe hall. Both were good swimmers and lost their lives in trying to rescue the others.

PREDICTS BUMPER CROP.

Official of Santa Fe Counts on 2,500,000,000 Bushels.

Chicago, July 19.—Pau Morton, 1st vice president of the Santa Fe railroad, predicts a bumper crop of corn for the west and the entire country this season. He estimates the total crop of the country at 2,500,000,000 bushels, and declares that the railroads of the west will have all they can do to take care of the increased traffic that will result therefrom. Mr. Morton's estimate was made after a careful survey of the situation supplemented by personal inspection of western states traversed by the lines of the Santa Fe and by reports given him by agents of the company in nearly every corn bearing state in the union.

"I am convinced," said Mr. Morton, "that this country will have the largest corn yield in its history and that the high mark of 2,200,000,000 bushels will be excelled by at least 300,000,000 bushels."

CORNER IN CORN IS ENDED

LARGE OFFERINGS FORCE GATES SYNDICATE TO SETTLE.

Price of July Corn at Once Drops Over Fifteen Cents Per Bushel.

Chicago, Ill., July 16.—The famous John W. Gates corner in July corn came to an abrupt termination yesterday when it became known that shorts to the extent of a good many million bushels had effected private settlements with Harris-Gates & Co., and the deal was at an end so far as the steel magnate was concerned. The July price responded to the settlement by a quick drop of 15¼ cents. Later it recovered a fraction and closed at 65½ cents, substantially the price of the cash article.

Just how many bushels were subject to private settlement will probably never be known, nor is there much chance that the identity of the "big fellows" in the trade, who doubtless contributed liberally to the fortunes of Mr. Gates and the friends associated with him in the deal, will ever be positively known.

No special excitement attended the premature puncturing of the bubble by the men whose property it was. The only unusual thing in the day prior to the time at which it became known the corner was at an end was the unusual purchasing of July corn in small lots by various commission houses.

The consensus among the outsiders was that Mr. Gates had demanded either 80 or 81 cents from the people who were foolish enough to sell him corn all the way from 60 cents up.

SHOT DRUNKEN MEN.

Jaubert Brothers Killed by the Desperate Wife of One of Them.

Carbondale, Ills., July 19.—The Jaubert brothers, who operate a small coal mine near Oraville, were both shot dead yesterday by the wife of one of the men. They went home intoxicated and demanded supper. Mrs. Jaubert began its preparation and her husband began breaking the dishes and at last attacked her. Mrs. Jaubert and her sister fled to the back room and locked the door. Her husband followed, broke in the door and renewed the assault. The wife fired three shots into his body, one passing through his heart. The brother, who was a witness to the tragedy, took up the quarrel and attempted to strike the woman. Mrs. Jaubert emptied the two remaining chambers into his body, inflicting a wound from which he died. The woman surrendered to the officers. The coroner's jury exonerated her.

LA FOLLETTE IN CONTROL.

Renominated for Governor of Wisconsin—Spooner Indorsed.

Madison, Wis., July 17.—Governor Robert M. La Follette carried the day in the state republican convention, which was the most exciting political gathering ever held in the state.

His adherents succeeded in piloting through the convention last night a platform to his liking which the stalwart republicans in the committee held up for nearly six hours. While the planks favoring primary elections and equalization of taxes were not to the stalwarts' liking, they stood for them and waged a battle against the Spooner plank, which practically called upon the senator to stand upon the principles laid down in the platform.

ADVOCATES ARBITRATION.

Would Revoke Franchises of Corporations Which Refuse It.

Chicago, July 19.—State legislation requiring corporations to submit to arbitration all industrial disputes with their employes, where the employes wish it, under penalty of forfeiture of charter in case of refusal, was advocated by Judge Murray F. Tuley in an address before the Illinois State bar association yesterday.

It is not compulsory arbitration between man and man which Judge Tuley desires, and against that he protests, but so far as corporations are concerned he regards them as the creatures of the state, who may be well required to go at least half way in arbitration for the benefit of the community. As for the laboring man and the unions, the judge believes that they will always be ready to do their share in arbitration, but in case they ever do not, he maks the suggestion that they be compelled to incorporate, and so become themselves amenable to the laws.

Judge Tuley was elected president of the association for the ensuing year. The association recommended to the legislature the passage of amendments to the habeas corpus act, and of the "negotiable instrument act," now in force in twenty states, and it ordered the appointment of a special committee to work for the passage of the latter.

APPEAL TO PUBLIC.

ANTHRACITE MINERS NEED $1,000,000 A MONTH.

Provision Made for Securing a Fund to Aid the Men on a Strike.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 21—The convention of the United Mine Workers of America adjourned after declaring against a general strike, providing for the raising of a fund with which to aid the striking anthracite miners and issuing an appeal to the American people for support. The recommendations unanimously adopted by the convention as brought in by the special committee are practically those suggested by President Mitchell.

The recommendations of the special committee were as follows:

First—That the national secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers be authorized to appropriate $50,000 from the funds of the national treasury for the benefit of the districts 1, 7 and 9 (these are the anthracite districts).

Second—That all districts and local unions be asked to donate whatever they can afford to for the support of the strikers.

Third—That an assessment of 10 per cent be levied on the earnings of the members of the union, and that an assesment of 1 per cent be levied on the members of districts 2, 5, 7, 9, 11, 13, 17 and 19. This assessment is not to be made against unions now on strike.

Fourth—The assessment to be paid direct by the local unions to Secretary-Treasurer Wilson.

Fifth—That 25 per cent be deducted from the salaries of all national district officers and organizers.

Sixth—That the assessments begin from July 16.

Seventh—That all contributions made by the national orgalization be distributed pro rata to the anthracite districts in the ratio shown by the last local reports.

Eighth—That each local union be requested to aid as far as possible in securing work for men now on strike. In this connection the good officers of the American Federation of Labor will be requested.

Ninth—That the circular to our local unions shall include a recommendation that committees be appointed to canvass the business men and other citizens of their locality for subscriptions.

Tenth—That a circular setting forth the cause of the strikers be issued to the American people.

LOSS RUNS INTO MILLIONS.

Keokuk, July 21.— Exploration of the flooded districts of the Mississippi river from Keokuk south shows conditions beyond the appreciation or realization of any but people of long experience with the Father of Waters in its most destructive mood.

The situation is growing worse hourly and a great conflagration in a great city would not be more rapidly destructive of values than the antithesis a hundred miles below Keokuk. There is absolutely not the slightest chance of stopping this dozen times most costly flood in the history of the great river above St. Louis.

The correspondent of the Associated Press went all over the worst damaged area in the steamer Silver Crescent and found everywhere the crops under water deep enough to float a steamboat.

People at the river cities give an immense mass of details, all to be generalized in losses aggregating many million of dollars, hundreds of farmers, rich ten days ago, penniless and homeless and hundreds watching and praying that the great levees may hold, which are now their bulwark against additional millions of loss.

Estimates of the territory covered and generalization of the statements of the best informed people indicate the loss up to today is about $6,000,000, with every prospect of two or three millions additional by the rise above which has not yet reached the lower stretches of the river.

Most of this loss is on the Missouri side of the river between Keokuk and Hannibal.

SOLDIERS WRECK BUILDING.

One Thousand Men Sought Revenge for Stabbing of Comrade.

Leavenworth, Kan., July 21.—About 1,000 soldiers surrounded a resort on Main street and demolished the doors, windows and furniture. This was done in revenge for the fatal stabbing of Eli Loucks, a member of Co. F., Sixth cavalry, by a negro in the resort. Nothing but the walls and roof of the building were left standing. The negroes in the district were panic-stricken and there was a wild exodus.

Policeman Joseph Wager struck a soldier on the head during the riot. He is unconscious and it is believed his neck is broken. The streets were swarming with soldiers.

Loucks, over whom the trouble began, is a barber in the Sixth infantry and Saturday he received his pay. John Graham, a negro, evidently knew of this for he waylaid Loucks near the Missouri Pacific depot and demanded his money. Upon Loucks' refusal Graham drew a knife and stabbed him across the abdomen, inflicting a very serious wound.

Troop F, Fourth cavalry, under command of Captain Tyree, rode into Leavenworth Sunday morning at 2 o'clock fully equipped to quell the riot and disperse the crowd of soldiers.

GENERAL SMITH NOW RETIRED

President Announces Punishment for Kill and Burn Order.

HIS CONDUCT IS CONDEMNED

President and Secretary Root Review Case—Smith's Further Presence in Army Deemed a Bad Influence—Case Commended by President.

Washington, July 17.—Secretary Root brought from Oyster Bay the case of General Jacob H. Smith, tried by court martial at Manila on account of orders issued by Major Waller. General Smith was found guilty of charges by the court and sentenced to be admonished by the reviewing authority. The president has so admonished General Smith and retired him under the law, which provides that officers having reached the age of 64 years may be retired at will by the president. Secretary Root supplements the reprimand of President Roosevelt in a long circular in which he explains the conditions which resulted in the court martial of General Smith and shows that, although Smith issued the "kill and burn" order, as a matter of fact very few persons were killed as a result of that order, the casualties being confined almost wholly to the eleven natives killed under Major Waller's direction.

"White House, Washington, July 1902.—By the president: The findings and sentence of the court are approved. I am well aware of the danger and great difficulty of the task our army has had in the Philippine Islands and of the well nigh intolerable provocations it has received from the cruel treachery and total disregard of the rules and customs of civilized warfare on the part of its foes. I also heartily approve the employment of the strongest measures necessary to put a stop to such atrocities and to bring this war to a close. It would be culpable to show weakness in dealing with such foes or to fail to use all legitimate and honorable methods to overcome them. But the very fact that warfare is of such character as to afford infinite provocation for the commission of acts of cruelty by junior officers and enlisted men must make the officers of high and responsible positions peculiarly careful in their bearing and conduct so as to keep a moral check upon any acts of an improper character on their subordinates. Almost universally the higher officers have so borne themselves as to supply this necessary check; and with but few exceptions the officers and soldiers of the army have shown wonderful kindness and forbearance in dealing with their foes. But there have been exceptions; there have been instances of the use of torture and of improper heartlessness in warfare on the part of the individual or small detachments. In the recent campaign ordered by General Smith the shooting of the native bearers on the orders of Major Waller was an act which sullied the American name and can be but partly excused by Major Waller's mental condition at the time, this mental condition being due to the fearful hardships and suffering which he had undergone in his campaign. It is impossible to tell exactly how much influence language like that used by General Smith may have had in impairing the minds of those under him for the commissions of the deeds which we regret. Loose and violent talk by an officer of high rank is always likely to excite to wrong deeds among his subordinates whose minds are weak or whose passions are strong.

"General Smith has behind him a long career distinguished for gallantry and on the whole for good conduct. Taken in the full, his work has been such as to reflect credit upon the American army and, therefore, on the nation, and it is to be deeply regretted that he should have acted thus in one instance as to interfere with his further usefulness in the army. I therefore direct that he be retired from the active list.

(Signed) "Theodore Roosevelt."

ELEVEN KILLED BY TORNADO

Nine Drowned, One Killed by a Tree and One by Live Wire.

Baltimore, Md., July 21.—A tornado characterized by a storm of extraordinary velocity, thunder, vivid lightning and a heavy rain suddenly burst upon Baltimore at 4:30 p. m. yesterday, coming from the southwest, with the net result that eleven persons lost their lives, hundreds of houses were unroofed, trees in the public parks and streets were torn up by the roots, many buildings damaged and several people injured.

The storm exhausted its fury in less than fifteen minutes. The damage done in the business part of the city was comparatively light, being confined to the blowing down of signs and injuries to roofs. It was in the residence portions of the city, along the river front and in the suburbs where the wind spent its violence.

Of those who perished nine were drowned in the harbor from capsized boats, one killed by a falling tree and one by a live wire.

LETTER SUITS VATICAN.

Cardinal Rampolla Writes to Express Satisfaction With Negotiations.

Rome, July 19.—Governor Taft received a letter from Rampolla, the papal secretary of state, expressing the greatest satisfaction with Secretary Root's last letter and the views of the United States regarding the steps to be taken by the vatican to ameliorate the religious situation in the Philippines and to co-operate in the pacification of the people under American sovereignty.

Rampolla also says representatives of the vatican in the archipelago will at once enter into relations with the authorities in the Philippines on four of the points indicated by Taft at the end of his cablegram, and expresses confidence in the hope of solution of pending questions, celebrating for that noble country the era of peace and true progress.

John W. Mackay Dies.

London, July 21.— John W. Mackay of San Francisco, who had been suffering from heat prostration since Tuesday last, died at his residence, 16 Carlton House terrace at half past 5 o'clock last evening. Mr. Mackay's condition, as stated had a bad night and in the morning a consultation was held by three physicians.

Mr. Mackay grew worse as the day progressed. He was unconscious most of the time and died very peacefully.

The immediate cause of his death was heart failure. The right lung was found to be congested and symptoms indicated pneumonia.

SALISBURY RESIGNS HIGH OFFICE; BALFOUR NOW PRIME MINISTER

Lord Salisbury first became premier in June, 1885, Gladstone having resigned office in consequence of his defeat in the house of commons on the proportional duties on beer and spirits. The conservative minister remained in office until the following February, when Gladstone entered upon his third administration. After an existence of only 178 days the liberal party was badly beaten on the second reading of the Irish home rule bill, in the largest division on record, 656 members out of 670 passing through the division lobbies.

Then came Lord Salisbury's second term of office, which lasted from August, 1886, until August, 1892, when the house of commons gave Gladstone a majority on the home rule question. Lord Salisbury resigned and Gladstone became premier for the fourth and last time. The second home rule bill was thrown out by the house of lords in September, 1894, and in March of the following year Gladstone resigned the seals of office in favor of Earl Rosebery. The liberal cabinet was reconstructed and remained in power three months longer, when it was killed by the famous Cordite division and Salisbury became premier a third time, with a solid majority of 152 in the house of commons. There was a general election in September, 1900, and unionists were again voted to power, with a majority of 134 in the commons.

Salisbury for the fourth time took up the premiership, but he left the foreign secretaryship to Lord Lansdowne and became lord privy seal.

It is significant that Balfour interviewed Chamberlain before consulting the other members of the cabinet in regard to the situation. Many people think that Chamberlain must eventually reach the premiership, and it would give great satisfaction throughout the country if the king had chosen him to step into Salisbury's shoes in the ordinary course of events. His chances of obtaining premier honors are now considerably minimized, as he is many years Balfour's senior. He will, however, be as loyal to his new chief as he was to the old one.

A Patriotic Echo.

"Several years ago," said Gen. St. Clair Mulholland recently, "I spent the Fourth of July on the lakes of Killarney, in Ireland. We had been trying the echo, which in some places is remarkably clear. A short, sharp sentence would be repeated in full, but a longer one would result in the repetition of only the latter part. I had been joking with my boatman, and called to the echo: 'St. Patrick's day is not in the same class with the American Fourth of July!' Of course I expected that the echo would repeat 'Fourth of July,' but it did nothing of the sort. As clearly and distinctly as though answered by a human voice came: 'You lie!' The Irish boatman had the laugh on me after that."—Philadelphia Record.

Won $18,000 on Aces Up.

Jim O'Leary, the Chicago bookmaker, called a bluff for $5,000 in Canfield's Saratoga club house not long ago. There was $18,000 in the pot. The man who made the pot, a New Orleans merchant, took one card and "tapped" himself. O'Leary took one card to aces up, called and won.

The biggest bluff ever known in the west was made in the early seventies in St. Louis. A noted commander of southern troops bet a row of six two-story buildings on the north side of Olive street, between Eleventh and Twelfth. They were put in at $50,000. Gen. James A. Dorris called it and won the row. The other general gave title the next day, and the row was ever after known as Poker Row, and was so scheduled in the Dorris estate when the general died.

YOO MUCH TO BELIEVE.

Story of Ice in June Paralyzed Church Members.

Emerging from the treasury department recently, where he was confronted by the largest load of ice he ever saw, Representative Moody of the North Carolina mountains, was moved to an anecdote.

"Years ago, before railroads were common in that part of the country, I was down in North Georgia," said he. "There I knew a fine old deacon in the Lone Swamp Baptist church. He cured his bacon with hickory and marketed the same in Augusta, whither he hauled his produce in a wagon. On one of his trips to that municipality he sold his bacon for the top price prevailing in the market, was handsomely entertained by the purchasers of his product, and, in short, became very drunk. It was so reported at home, and the church directed a trial.

"Many witnesses were heard and then the deacon himself was called. 'I reckon what they have said is pretty true,' he frankly admitted, 'but I ask the church to pardon me. I sold my bacon for a good price in Augusta to some very nice men. But they asked me into their back office, where some lemon juice and sugar and lots of ice and other ingredients were mixed together. I drank one glass and they urged me to another, in which there was also lots of ice. After drinking that I remember nothing more.'

"At this one of the brethren of the church arose, and with great dignity announced that he believed the deacon should be pardoned for being drunk.

"'But he has lied,' continued this brother. 'He tells us they had ice in Augusta during June, which is preposterous. For that I shall insist that he be dismissed from the Lone Swamp church.'"—New York Times.

What Might Have Been.

Sonoma, Mich., July 21st.—Mr. Delos Hutchins of this place says: "If I could have had Dodd's Kidney Pills 25 years ago I would not now be crippled as I am."

Mr. Hutchins spent from 1861 to 1864 in the swamps of Louisiana as a northern soldier and with the result that he contracted Rheumatism which gave him much pain till Mr. Fred Parker, the local druggist, advised him to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. The first two boxes did not seem to help him very much, but Mr. Parker, knowing that Dodd's Kidney Pills would eventually cure him, pressed Mr. Hutchins to continue and by the time four boxes were used the short, sharp, shooting pains which had tortured his back, hip, and legs were entirely gone. Mr. Hutchins says: "I can not tell you how much better I am feeling. If it were not for the way my hands, feet, and knees are drawn out of shape I would be about as good as ever."

PELVIC CATARRH
CAUSES
Palpitation of the Heart, Cold Hands and Feet, Sinking Feelings---Pe-ru-na Cures Catarrh Wherever Located.

Mrs. X. Schneider.

Mrs. X. Schneider, 2409 Thirty-seventh Place, Chicago, Ill., writes:

"After taking several remedies without result, I began in January, 1901, to take your valuable remedy, Peruna. I was a complete wreck. Had palpitation of the heart, cold hands and feet, female weakness, no appetite, trembling, sinking feeling nearly all the time. You said I was suffering from systemic catarrh, and I believe that I received your help in the nick of time. I followed your directions carefully and can say to-day that I am well again. I cannot thank you enough for my cure. I will always be your debtor. I have already recommended Peruna to my friends and neighbors and they all praise it. I wish that all suffering women would try it. I testify this according to the truth."—Mrs. X. Schneider.

Over half the women have catarrh in some form or another. And yet, probably, not a tenth of the women know that their disease is catarrh. To distinguish catarrh of various organs it has been named very differently.

One woman has dyspepsia, another bronchitis, another Bright's disease, another liver complaint, another consumption, another female complaint. These women would be very much surprised to hear that they are all suffering with chronic catarrh. But it is so, nevertheless.

Each one of these troubles and a great many more are simply catarrh—that is, chronic inflammation of the mucous lining of whichever organ is affected. Any internal remedy that will cure catarrh in one location will cure it in any other. This is why Peruna has become so justly famous in the cure of female diseases. It cures catarrh wherever located. Its cures remain. Peruna does not palliate—it cures.

Hon. Joseph B. Crowley, Congressman from Illinois, writes from Robinson, Ill., the following praise for the great catarrhal tonic Peruna. Congressman Crowley says:

"Mrs. Crowley has taken a number of bottles of Peruna on account of nervous troubles. It has proven a strong tonic and lasting cure. I can cheerfully recommend it."—J. B. Crowley.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

IRONING A SHIRT WAIST.

Not infrequently a young woman finds it necessary to launder a shirt waist at home for some emergency when the laundryman or home servant cannot do it. Hence these directions for ironing the waist: To iron summer shirt waists so that they will look like new it is needful to have them starched evenly with Defiance starch, then made perfectly smooth and rolled tight in a damp cloth, to be laid away two or three hours. When ironing have a bowl of water and a clean piece of muslin beside the ironing board. Have your iron hot, but not sufficiently so to scorch, and absolutely clean. Begin by ironing the back, then the front, sides and the sleeves, followed by the neckband and the cuffs. When wrinkles appear apply the damp cloth and remove them. Always iron from the top of the waist to the bottom. If there are plaits in the front iron them downward, after first raising each one with a blunt knife, and with the edge of the iron follow every line of stitching to give it distinctness. After the shirt waist is ironed it should be well aired by the fire or in the sun before it is folded and put away, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Virtue is its own reward and genius is frequently found in the same class.

BRITT-ISH TAKEN INTO CAMP

Klemme Shows Britt a Few Pointers as to How to Play the National Game.

When the Klemme Midgets lined up against the ball team from Britt here at the Woodman Picnic last Thursday, it did not disconcert them any when they found Cassill and Morrison, the Garner sluggers, in Britt uniforms. It only served to make them go after the visitors' scalps all the harder, and the result was that the combined aggregation from the two would-be county-seats was defeated at the hands of our boys to the doleful tune of 10 to 4.

The Brittish found considerable difficulty in connecting with the ball, while the home boys smashed the sphere almost at will.

In the first three innings, Britt made all her scores, and at this stage of the game, Cassill, the Garner heavy hitter(?) smiled serenely on first. But after that nothing was doing for Britt. Our boys settled down to business and presented the Britt-ish with six little circular things resembling the center of a doughnut. The Britt ish batters seldom broke the monotony by even fouling the ball.

Our boys scored in every inning but two. In the first, Nissen, the first man up, made a pretty single, stole second and scored on a hit by Crawford. In the second, Woodard, Ed and Nissen each crossed the rubber. Then Cassill's smile vanished. The fourth and seventh were the only innings in which Klemme failed to score.

Schoper, Braund and Carlson, our stone-wall out-field, each had one put-out and no errors.

Captain Baumgartner played the bench on account of a sore finger, and Woodard was sent to first, where he played a good game, without an error.

The score by innings:

Britt——1 1 2 0 0 0 0 0 0— 4

Batteries— Klemme, — Flint, Kluckhohn, Nissen. Britt—Hahn and Kuhr. Time of game 1:45. Attendance, 300.

If a Man Lie to You

And say some other salve, ointment lotion, oil or alleged healer is as good as Bucklen's Arnica Salve, tell him thirty years of marvelous cures of piles, burns, boils, corns, felons, ulcers, cuts, scalds, bruises, and skin eruptions prove it's the best and cheapest. 25c at Harr's drug store.

Struck by Lightning.

The following is a dispatch to the Cedar Rapids Rapids Republican dated Goodell, July 26:

TELEGRAPH

[illegible] and electrical storm last [illegible] about 7 o'clock Arthur Ma[illegible], a young farmer living about one and a half miles west of town, was struck by lightning while in his cow barn. He was badly burned about the head and back and feet, but Dr. Gilbert, who went out in the worst of the storm to his assistance succeeded in restoring him to consciousness and has hopes of his recovery.

Acts Immediately.

Colds are sometimes more troublesome in summer than in winter, it's so hard to keep from adding to them while cooling off after exercise. One Minute Cough Cure cures at once. Absolutely safe. Acts immediately. Sure cure for coughs, colds, croup, throat and lung troubles. J. L. Harr.

Sounds Suspicious.

The following three-liner is from the Plymouth Journal, presided over by Howard Africa, who is well known in Klemme:

"Marriage is similar to other troubles. People have a good time while getting into it."

As Howard is supposed to be unmarried we would like to know where he gets his authority. Or perhaps he is just at the point where he is having his "good time." Eh, Pete?

Need More Help.

Often the overtaxed organs of digestion cry out for help by Dyspepsia's pains, nausea, dizziness, headaches, liver complaints, bowel disorders. Such troubles call for prompt use of Dr. King's New Life Pills. They are gentle, thorough and guaranteed to cure. 25c at Harr's drug store.

THE MODERN WOODMAN PICNIC

Held in Klemme Last Thursday was a Very Enjoyable Occasion.

The picnic given by the Klemme Camp, M. W. A., in S. B. Day's grove last Thursday, was not very well attended. The farmers could not turn out very well, most of them being busy in the harvest and hay fields, but those who did attend were well pleased and entertained. The exercises in the grove were carried out in good shape, several little ones giving short recitations.

The address on "Woodcraft" by Rev. E. A. Phelps was well delivered and highly entertaining, although as the speaker said, "the Woodmen present were few and far between." However the address was well received by those present.

A picnic dinner was next in order, and in the afternoon the ball game between Klemme and Britt was pulled off. The spectators numbered between 300 and 400. A report of the game is given elsewhere. A bowery was erected and those who delight in dancing were entertained there in the evening. A goodly number from neighboring towns were present.

Poisoning the System.

It is through the bowels that the body is cleansed of impurities. Constipation keeps these poisons in the system, causing headache, dullness and melancholia at first, then unsightly eruptions and finally serious illness unless a remedy is applied. DeWitt's Little Early Risers prevent this trouble by stimulating the liver, and promote easy, healthy action of the bowels. These little pills do not act violently but by strengthening the bowels enable them to perform their own work. Never gripe or distress. J. L. Harr.

The "Resorter."

Have you yet observed the presence of the "Resorter" in Klemme? He is due now, the biggest man in the summer season, except the fellow who plays the steam calliope in Fourpaugh's circus. He is not a product of the bacillus but is the off-shoot of civilization and ice cream. His name is legion and he plays ping-pong when he can stand the excitement. Along in July he saunters into the postoffice and asks if there are any excursions to Crystal Lake due yet. Thinks he'll leave and see the country. When the last June bride has left with her parasol full of rice, he packs his grip and boards a train with the happiest look he can muster. As the train wanders in to the plank station of the new resort, puffing and snorting, he consults his time card, gets his baggage in first, and steps down into an artificial park. The "cabbies" go for him, but by preserving his mind at the critical instant, he saves himself from being divided into two or three pieces. He gets to a Resort hotel at last, and is allotted a pine-finished room and two mildewed sheets, a tin wash-basin, and a fresh chunk of Ivory soap. His discomfort passes away when he finds that two or three hundred other people dressed in their Sunday clothes have been treated with the same impartiality. That night he sleeps through a nightmare of whistles, ringing bells, roaring water-pipes, slamming doors, shuffling feet and—but we will not refer to the inhabitants of his bed. In the morning he tells seventeen new acquaintances that he did not rest as well last night as common. They all confess a similar experience. Following breakfast and a pot-metal tune on a tin piano in the parlor everybody goes to the lake, the "auditorium" and the "wooded island," and the sun comes down like fun, and there isn't anything to make life worth living but pretty, sweaty girls, dressed in white forget me-not frocks and smiles. After a few days of this, mixed up with nightmares of lectures, military band concerts, and gathering wild flowers, and playing croquet and tennis with friends of twenty-four hours standing the Resorter feels that his system is fixed up pretty nearly as good as new—and so he goes home. How surprising that people say "You don't look as though you had gotten rested much." But he won't own to feeling tired. He's had a supurb time.

DOINGS IN AND NEAR ELL CENTER

Dished up to Suit all Classes by Our Special Correspondent.

Farmers are busy harvesting and help is scarce.

Frank Marshall is helping Harry Rice harvest his mammoth crops.

Charley and Bertie Pomplun of Forest City, visited their brother here Sunday.

Marion Peck, of Garner, was a caller here the first of the week on a business deal.

John Gruetzmacher and a McCormick expert were starting a binder for H. H. Burman Friday.

The high price of land has caused the rents to soar skywards. Some are offering $3 per acre.

The Baack boys were hauling lumber Saturday for an addition to their house, and also a machine shed.

Frank Patterson took out a new steel windmill from Klemme Saturday to put up on the Kluckhohn farm.

Vacation Days.

Vacation time is here and the children are fairly living out of doors. There could be no healthier place for them. You need only to guard against the accidents incidental to most open air sports. No remedy equals DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve for quickly stopping pain or removing danger of serious consequences. For cuts, scalds and wounds. "I used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve for sores cuts and bruises," says L. B. Johnson, Swift, Tex. "It is the best remedy on the market." Sure cure for piles and skin diseases. Beware of counterfeits. J. L. Harr.

Coal Supply Becoming Exhausted.

It is not generally known that coal was first discovered as late as the year 1728. A blacksmith named Hoville, living at Nancy, in France, accidentally learned its properties while attempting to use some of the "black stones" to bank his charcoal forge fire.

In the year 1900 the consumption of coal has increased to over 600,000,000 tons. This stupendous consumption is engaging the attention of scientists, who claim that within fifty years the cost of raising coal from the deep levels of mines will make the price almost prohibitive in many sections. This problem of future supply is well worthy of consideration because of the enormous wastefulness attending its present consumption.

There are however many who claim that in the next few years will be felt the influence of modern improved appliances for heating and cooking. There are for instance now available in the market forms of steam and hot water heating apparatus which extract from each pound of fuel more than double the volume of heat as given off by means of the ordinary forms of stoves or hot air furnaces. The combustion chambers of these modern steam and hot water boilers are correctly proportioned so there will be admitted the right amount of air and fuel to yield perfect results, without wastefulness. These combustion chambers are always surrounded by water, which is the greatest known medium for absorbing and conveying every unit of heat, whether in the form of steam or otherwise, directly to the rooms or place desired to be heated. There are also several forms of automatic regulators which control the room temperature, at will, from 68 to 72 degrees, in any weather. And as these regulators operate the draft and check dampers of the boilers there is no more coal burned than is actually needed to warm the room to the exact degree of warmth desired. Hence the great economy, to say nothing of the comfort, healthfulness and convenience. Truly, we are in an age of improvement.—Facts and Science.

Mother Always Keeps It Handy.

"My mother suffered a long time from distressing pains and general ill health due primarily to indigestion," says L. W. Spalding, Verona, Mo. "Two years ago I got her to try Kodol. She grew better at once and now at the age of seventy-six, eats anything she wants, remarking that she fears no bad effects as she has her bottle of Kodol handy." Don't waste time doctoring symptoms. Go after the cause. If your stomach is sound your health will be good. Kodol rests the stomach and strengthens the body by digesting your food. It is nature's own tonic. J. L. Harr.

RAILWAYS TO POST BULLETINS

Attorney General Mullan Files a Brief at Des Moines Upholding the Constitutionality of the Griswold Law—Assessors Find Much Money.

Des Moines, July 26.—The railroad commission has taken steps to enforce the new law requiring all railroads in Iowa to post in their passenger stations bulletins showing the time of arrival and departure of trains. Senator W. B. Taliman of Warran county was the author of the act, which passed the last general assembly and went into effect the first of July.

The railway commission has allowed nearly a month to elapse, during which time they have noticed evidence of failure to comply with the new provision. Now they are sending out letters to all the railroads in the state calling their attention to the act, and asking that they be advised at once as to what companies have made provision. The letter sent out by the commission is as follows:

"The Twenty-Ninth general assembly of the state of Iowa (1902) passed a law, a copy of which we enclose you herewith, which requires all railroad companies to keep posted in the waiting room of each passenger station a bulletin plainly showing the time of arrival and departure at said station of all trains carrying passengers. Penalty for failing to comply with this law makes the company liable in the sum of $50. The law is known as chapter 87, of the acts of the Twenty-Ninth general assembly. Your attention is called to this statute inasmuch as the members of this board have noticed that in many of the railway depots of this state no such bulletins have been provided, although this law has been in effect since the first day of July, 1902. Will you please advise the board at once whether your company has made provision for the posting of the bulletins required?"

Secretary Lewis of the railway commission stated that the law in question is looked upon as a good one. It is the duty of the commission to enforce its provisions and it will do so.

BIG FIRE AT WATERLOO.

The Loss Is Estimated at From $100,000 to $110,000 or More.

Waterloo, July 28.—A fire which started here at 11 o'clock Saturday night was the worst in the city's history. The loss will exceed $110,000. Three men were injured, one fatally. The injured: Chas. Long, electrician, ten on his head and shoulders, fatally injured; Teddy Haymond, suffocated, not serious; unknown fireman, struck by flying glass and brick, badly hurt. The fire started in the basement of the United States Express company building, corner of East Fourth and Water street. The basement is used by the Waterloo Fruit and Commission company as a storage room and was filled with inflammable materials. A heavy rain began falling shortly before 12 o'clock and greatly aided the firemen in controlling the flames. The fact that no wind was blowing was also providential. The express company saved most of its books and valuables. Its loss will not be heavy. The building was owned by A. Holzer and is entirely ruined. The loss is $30,000. The building occupied by the Hanlon-Towne Undertaking company was also owned by Mr. Holzer. It is valued at $15,000. The Black Dry Goods company owns the building used as the Logan house bowling alley. It is valued at $15,000. Martin Bros., wholesale cigar dealers, with office and storage rooms in the Holzer block, $15,000. In the same building are also located the offices of several physicians and Stark's photograph gallery. Their loss will be considerable. The Waterloo Fruit and Commission company, in the rear of where the fire started, was gutted. It was valued at $10,000. The loss to the Black Dry Goods company will be mostly caused by smoke and water and will probably run to $25,000.

FINE RIDERS IN THE CAVALRY.

Members of the Famous "Sixth" Are With Buffalo Bill.

Des Moines, July 26.—The ex-members of the Sixth U. S. cavalry who are with Buffalo Bill's Wild West show such daring and skillful bareback riding as is equalled by but few "star" circus performers. In fact, they do all of what is technically known as "the jockey act" and very much more, not upon trained, easy-going, moderately paced horses in a ring, but on spirited, half wild steeds, going at a furious gallop over an open field. The Sixth has become famous for the equestrian training of its men. The Wild West will be in Des Moines on July 29, and the great military drills of the foreign bodies of soldiers, the battle scenes, the bucking horses, Indian war dances and all other well known features will be seen. A great mounted street parade will go over the principal streets of the city on the morning of the engagement. Reduced rates on all railroads.

SHOT FIRER IS WOUNDED.

John Olson, of Bussey, Injured by Explosion, and Will Probably Die.

Bussey, July 26.—John Olson, a shot firer in the O. K. mine No. 5, was hit in the head with a piece of flying coal and it is thought fatally injured. The accident was caused by a shot breaking through from one room to another. Olson was warned that the wall of the room was thin, but after lighting the blast went around into the other room and was caught by the explosion. The top of his skull is crushed in and he has been unconscious since the accident happened. Olson is a widower and has one child.

Ten Thousand More for Library.

Iowa City, July 26.—An additional $10,000 has not been appropriated by the city council to increase the Carnegie library fund from $25,000 to $35,000. On the suggestion of Senator George W. Ball and W. P. Coast, action was postponed. The documents included Judge Wades correspondence with Mr. Carnegie's representative; the letter from the architect; the board's appeal to Mr. Carnegie, and finally a plea to the council to give the board $10,000.

General Green Will Attend.

Council Bluffs, July 26.—Secretary Knox of the Philippine encampment committee has been notified that General F. E. V. Greene of New York will be in attendance.

IOWA MILLERS ORGANIZE.

Association Formed at LeMars for Mutual Benefit.

Le Mars, July 26.—A meeting of the northwestern Iowa millers was held at the Union Hotel parlors. They gathered together to form an Iowa association of Iowa millers that they might join the Miller's National federation, an organization which is devoted to advancing the general interests of the milling trade of the United States. H. S. Kennedy, of Chicago, secretary of the federation, was present to explain the plan of operation and the objects of the organization. It was decided to affiliate with the millers of other states and the following officers were elected:

President—H. J. Hutton of Sioux City.

Secretary—C. A. Wemlie of Le Mars.

Directors—Scott Logan, of Sheldon, J. T. Floger of Alton and William Fulton of Sioux Falls.

The delegates chosen to represent the club at the next meeting of the federation were William Smiley of Le Mars and Scott Logan of Sheldon.

The following were in attendance at the meeting: H. S. Kennedy, of Chicago; William Fulton of Sioux Falls, S. D.; H. J. Hulton, of Sioux City; William Smiley, of Le Mars; Edward Getz, of Peterson; William Barr, of Alta; H. W. Aupperle, of Sibley; J. J. Gehler, of Le Mars, and Frank Hoese of Merrill.

The membership of the club will be largely increased before the next meeting, which will be held at Sibley at the call of the officers.

SUICIDE AT CLARINDA.

Harry A. Faber Shoots Himself Over Loss of His Texas Sweetheart.

Clarinda, July 28.—Harry A. Faber, a young man, unmarried, who travels for M. Stearns, wholesale milliners at Keokuk, Iowa, shot and instantly killed himself on the track of the Keokuk & Western railroad at a point on the northeast corner of the city.

His body was found there by Orth Farrens, a 12-year-old boy, who resides with his parents near the place, as he was taking his cows to pasture. The boy saw Faber walking down the track about 8 o'clock and later heard the reports from the man's gun.

Faber came down on the seven o'clock train from Vilisca and went directly to the Linderman hotel, where he registered and got his mail. The mail contained a letter from his betrothed, stating that she had concluded to break their engagement. This seemed to unnerve the young man and he became frantic with grief. After brooding over his trouble for some time, he went to a hardware store where he purchased a revolver with which he took his own life. Faber was 22 years old. His parents reside somewhere in Texas, but his mother and sister are visiting in Keokuk, while his father is in Europe. The coroner's jury came to the conclusion that he came to his death from three pistol shots fired into his breast by his own hand.

FOUND BY ASSESSORS.

More Cash Taxed in Iowa This Year Than Before.

Des Moines, July 24.—The local assessors who went around early this year found more moneys and credits in possession of the Iowa people by nearly eighteen million dollars than they did a year previous. The report from Linn county is not yet in, but all other counties have reported and the reports have gone to the executive council which will take up the review and equalization work as soon as the telephone assessments are certified out.

Some peculiar comparisons have been made. Scott county still has the most of this class of personal property returned for taxation, a total of $7,831,180, which is an increase of $447,445 over the last year. The largest increase was in Polk County, $852,564. Dubuque came next with a gain of $733,939.

Several counties reported less of moneys and credits than in the previous year, for instance, Hardin lost $185,549, Crawford $74,379, and Union $54,993.

Winneshiek county, without any large towns, has a total of $2,137,024 in moneys and credits, while Woodbury county with the Sioux City banks and loan companies, reported less than a million. Clayton made a big gain and reports a total of $3,076,797, and Cerro Gordo jumped up to $3,325,361. Blackhawk, Des Moines and Fayette also made good showings.

NEARING THE 40,000 MARK.

Des Moines Daily and Sunday News Will Celebrate.

Des Moines, July 24.—The Des Moines Daily and Sunday News now has over 38,000 circulation and is rapidly approaching the 40,000 mark, at which points its managers will hold a grand celebration on novel and original lines. The Daily and Sunday News is sent to subscribers for $1.50 a year, $1.00 for 8 mos., 80c for 6 mos., 50c for 3 mos., 25c for 1 mo., and these low prices have done much to give it the largest circulation of any daily newspaper in the world in proportion to the population of its home city. The news is a member of the Associated Press, and also receives the dispatches of the Publishers' Press and the Iowa Evening Press Associations, including daily market reports by wire.

NEW BUILDINGS FOR STATE.

Jas. Rawson & Son, of Iowa City, Successful Bidders.

Iowa City, July 24.—James Rawson & Son, of Iowa City, have been awarded the contract for two college of medicine buildings, by the board of regents of the university. The laboratory building will cost $84,630 and the anatomy building will cost $44,250. They will both be built of stone, and will resemble in general style and effect the new liberal arts building.

The nearest bidder was the Northern Building Company of Davenport.

Dr. James R. Guthrie, of Dubuque, professor of gynecology and obstetrics in the college of medicine, was elected dean of that college, to succeed Dr. W. D. Middleton, (deceased) of Davenport. The chair of surgery will be filled later by the committee on medical college.

ENGINE CRUSHED BUGGY.

Mrs. John Balsinger, Its Only Occupant, Was Killed.

Sioux City, July 26.—The day passenger train on the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha from St. Paul to Sioux City crashed into a buggy driven by Mrs. John Balsinger near LeMars. Mrs. Balsinger was the only occupant, and was killed instantly. The accident occurred on a grade crossing. A driving rain and wind storm was in progress, and it was impossible for the engineer to see but a few feet ahead of him. The body was crushed and mangled, and death must have been instantaneous. Mrs. Balsinger lived near LeMars, and was formerly a trained nurse.

UPHOLDS GRISWOLD LAW.

Attorney General Files a Brief Upholding Constitutionality.

Des Moines, July 24.—Attorney General Mullan has filed a brief in the case of John W. Brady vs. George Mattern, sheriff, the action brought to test the constitutionality of the Griswold law, enacted by the last general assembly, and intended to bring home loan tontine concerns and like copartnerships doing a like business under the building and loan law. Mr. Mullan filed the brief at the request of Judge McVey, who will hear the case Monday. Attorney General Mullan upholds the constitutionality of the law.

There has been talk of the state beginning litigation against concerns that are not complying with the Griswold law. The action of the attorney general in filing this brief is no indication such litigation will not be begun, although it will probably not be started until Judge McVey's decision is announced and it is known whether this is favorable to the state.

The plaintiff in the action holds the law is unconstitutional on six grounds. Mr. Mullan argues on each of these points separately. One of the contentions of the plaintiff is that the act prohibits individuals and unincorporated associations from going into the building and loan business and gives corporations a monopoly of such business. In disposing of this, Mr. Mullan takes the view there is no benefit to the public in allowing such institutions to be conducted. He says:

"From computations which I have procured to be made by those familiar with the business of building and loan associations of this kind, it is exceedingly doubtful whether the contracts entered into will ever mature and fully pay out, and certainly not in less than 50 or 60 years. In either case, the final results and benefits which accrue to the members are very different from those held out by the solicitors for the purpose of securing membership."

Mr. Mullan concludes it is no benefit to a person to have to wait 50 or 60 years to secure enough to build a modest home. The institutions, he holds, are properly subject to state control, as they are detrimental to patrons and beneficial only to promoters. No monopoly is provided for, as the law permits unincorporated associations to engage in the building and loan business if they deposit securities with the auditor.

REESE IS NOMINATED.

Named by Acclamation by Democrats of Sixth District.

Oskaloosa, July 25.—The democrats of the Sixth congressional district met in this city yesterday. The resolutions presented by the majority report reaffirmed the Kansas City platform. Richard Burke of the Oskaloosa Times lead the minority and he reported in favor of substitutinng the minority report, which eliminated reference to the Kansas City platform. Mr. Burke's motion was rejected by the convention by a vote of 112 to 22 and the report of the majority was passed with a whoop.

John P. Reese of Albia, president of the United Mine Workers of Iowa, was then nominated by acclamation. Mr. Reese was called to the platform and made a speech of about one hour's length. Mr. Reese's speech was chiefly devoted to a discussion of organized labor and its relations to politics. He stated that he did not represent organized labor alone, but the farmer, the business man and the general workers of the country. He asked for the votes of all, but particularly the support of the labor organization which he represented. He assured the convention that if he received the support of organized labor and that of his party he would be victorious in November.

IOWA FOR ROOSEVELT.

Hepburn Says Iowa Republicans Will Declare for Him.

New York, July 24.—Representative W. P. Hepburn of Iowa, who has been visiting at President Roosevelt's home in Oyster Bay, said:

"I have been away from home so much that I am not fully in touch with republican plans, but I am confident that our next state convention will surely indorse President Roosevelt's administration.

"I know nothing of any plan to present Congressman Littlefield's name to succeed Speaker Henderson in the next house. I am confident that Gen. Henderson will be chosen again for the speakership."

REGENT HADDOCK RESIGNS.

Ill Health Causes Him to Resign His Official Position.

Iowa City, July 24.—Judge Wm. J Haddock, of this city, has resigned his position as member of the board of regents of the State University. Judge Haddock has been secretary of the board of regents for the past thirty-eight years. He gives ill health as the reason for retiring at this time.

Fell to His Death.

Cedar Falls, July 26.—Dan Condon while intoxicated fell from a 14-foot stairway on Third street, striking the pavement on his face, killing him instantly. The body was found at midnight.

OUTCOME OF DREYFUS CASE.

Order Issued to Enforce Law as to Twenty-Six Paris Institutions.

Paris, July 26.—A cabinet council at the Elysse palace yesterday examined the questions brought up by the application of the law of associations. President Loubet signed a decree submitted by the premier, M. Combes, ordering the forcible closure of twenty-six congregationalist schools in Paris and in the department of the Seine which have refused to disperse voluntarily. Decrees closing forcibly similar schools in other departments will be signed so soon as the prefect's reports are received.

The rioting in Paris during the last few days on account of "the government's enforcement of the law against unauthorized congregations" is puzzling to persons who do not recall the law against religious associations passed by the French parliament last year.

This drastic law is a result of the old struggle in France between the republicans and the clericals, and is, more directly, a fruit of the Dreyfus affair. Prominent among the anti-Dreyfusites were members of religious orders, who fiercely denounced the government because it persisted in granting Dreyfus a measure of justice. They also took the fullest advantage of the national furore to stir up opposition to the republic. The Dreyfus investigations also showed that a large section of the army officers who had been educated in the schools of the religious orders were secretly hostile to the republic they were serving. These manifestations of dangerous strength on the part of the orders together with the alarming growth in the property, especially the land holdings of the orders, caused the republicans to use their power to strike a blow, as they thought, in defense of the economic and political stability of France.

FOR COREAN INDEPENDENCE

England and Japan Unite to Prevent Russian Aggression.

CANADIANS AFTER MORGAN

Canadian Pacific to Oppose Shipping Combine—Announcement Is Hailed in London as "English Combination to Fight American Trusts."

St. Petersburg, July 26.—A special dispatch received here from Seoul, Corea, announces the conclusion of an important agreement between the British and Jaqanese ministers to Corea on one hand and the Japanese Councillor Kato, special advisor of the Corean emperor, on the other, by which Great Britain and Japan mutually guarantee Corea's independence and pledge her their support and assistance in all questions affecting her internal and foreign policy.

Corea in return agrees to raise her military and naval establishments to a footing sufficient for her own defense and also in case of raising a foreign loan she agrees to restrict herself to the markets of Great Britain, Japan and the United States. She further agrees that no foreigners shall be appointed to positions in the Corean state service, that measures shall immediately be taken for the protection of Corean territory and that a protest shall immediately be made against any state or persons attempting to erect works or buildings situated so as to prejudice Corea' scheme for national defense.

In connection with the report of the new agreement, it is pointed out here that the United States already has a treaty of peace, amity, commerce and navigation with Corea, signed in 1882, and providing "that if our powers deal unjustly or oppressively with either government the other will exert their good offices, on being informed of the case, to bring about an amicable arrangement."

The caolegram is regarded in some quarters here as an aftermath of the offensive and defensive alliance entered into between Great Britain and Japan for their interests in the east, and as a further safeguard against territorial aggrandizment by any of the great powers of the orient.

TO OFFSET MORGAN SCHEME.

Canadian Pacific to Oppose Shipping Combine.

London, July 26.—The announcement from Montreal that the Canadian Pacific, had at the request of the Canadian ministers, now in London, offered to establish and work a fast service between Quebec and Liverpool in the summer and between Halifax and Liverpool in the winter with a general freight service, is causing considerable stir in London, and is hailed with delight as being an offset to J. P. Morgan's shipping combine. The evening papers have flaming placards saying "English Combination to Fight American Trust," etc.

The officials of the Canadian Pacific railroad here deny that they have any such request but they as well as others know that the desired fast freight service is finally approaching realization. The chief indication is the fact that the offer was made by the Canadian Pacific railroad at the instance of the Canadian minister and it is said to be known what conditions of the imperial it is prepared to accede.

Lord Strathconna, the Canadian high commissioner said

"While I am unable to add to the published statement it seems reasonable and probable. The members of the dominion government some years ago were authorized by the Canadian parliament to offer a subsidy of $150,000 for this purpose. So far as I know this offer has not been increased. The reports of subsidy of $260,000 shows an advance of the original offer, but it has always been understood Great Britain would supplement Canada's offer though I am not saying to what extent."

STRANGE DINNER IN LONDON.

Most of English Cabinet Present to Consult With Morgan.

London, July 25.—J. Pierpont Morgan was last night the guest of honor at a remarkable dinner given in the house of commons by Archibald White Maconochie, member for the east division of Aberdeenshire. On one side of the host sat Mr. Morgan and on the other Premier Balfour.

The other guests included United States Ambassador Joseph H. Choate, Wm. St. John [illegible] secretary of state for war; [illegible]ry, president of the b[illegible]lture; Sir E. H. Carson[illegible]neral; Sir Charles Dilke, [illegible] B. Finley, attorney general; Clinton Edward Dawkins, one of the partners in the firm of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co.; Sir Thomas Lipton, bart.; Colonel Hunsicker, chairman of the Nickel corporation; George Wyndham, chief secretary for Ireland; Arnold Foster, financial secretary to the admiralty; George Westinghouse, president of the Westinghouse Electrical company, and Gilbert Parker, member of parliament for Gravesend.

The proceedings were informal, and the conversation was peculiarly frank. The South African war, international yacht races, the shipping combine and King Edward's health were all discussed in turn. One of those present said to a representative of the Associated Press

"It was one of the most remarkable gatherings in which I ever took part. Practically a quorum of the cabinet talked over, in the simplest, most open way, the leading American subjects, which now vitally concern both countries. To see Mr. Morgan and Mr. Balfour together, one could scarcely imagine that the former had ever been regarded as a bogey who threatened England's commercial existence. If some things which passed around that table could be repeated it would be an eye-opener to those who are fomenting commercial rivalries between England and America."

Boer Sympathizer Banished.

London, July 24.—Denying a rumor that Dr. Leyds, who was the European agent of the Transvaal, was returning to South Africa, Mr. Chamberlain, the colonial secretary, made the important announcement today that all those not of African birth who had fought against the British would not be allowed to return to South Africa.

"I suppose," observed the curious young mathematical student, as he gazed upon the contortionist in repose beneath the side-show canvas, "that you have solved a great many knotty problems, too?"

OFFICER WAS SCOURGED.

Lieutenant in Life Guards at Windsor Whipped and Ducked.

London, July 28.—Details of the remarkable case of persecution by brother officers of a young lieutenant of the Second Life guards, at Windsor, a regiment of which King Edward is colonel in chief, show that in this crack cavalry organization, like many others, the officers are intolerant of the presence of any one who takes his profession seriously.

Second Lieutenant C. D. Gregson, who secured a commission February 15, 1902, was known to be a hard worker, efficient and popular with his men. On Monday night a number of officers of the regiment chased Lieutenant Gregson out of his quarters, hunted him through the barracks with whips, at the same time using foul language; ducked him in a horse trough until he was half dead, and subsequently wrecked his quarters and destroyed his entire kit. The victim was forced to spend the remainder of the night on the bare floor of his room, wrapped in an overcoat.

There is no question, in view of the lieutenant's record and the king's connection with the regiment, that his majesty will order a strict investigation into the occurrence.

JEFFRIES THE WINNER.

HAD THE WORST OF THE FIGHT FOR SEVEN ROUNDS.

Fitz Stopped to Speak to Jeffries and the Latter Responded With Winning Blows.

Ringside, San Francisco, July 26.—After fighting a battle of eight rounds that was fraught with brilliant and courageous work, Robert Fitzsimmons last night forfeited his last claim upon the heavy weight championship. He was knocked to the floor by James Jeffries and counted out after he had so badly punished the champion that it was a foregone conclusion among the spectators that the Cornishman must win. Bleeding from a number of gashes in the face, apparently weakening, and clearly unable to cope with Fitz's superior skill, Jeff delivered two lucky punches as Fitz paused in his fight to speak to him, and turned the tide. The battle was brief but noteworthy, and will live in pugilistic history.

Fitz tried once to rise from the mat but sank down again in helplessness and heard himself counted out, where out a minute before he had apparently the better of it.

"I will never fight again," said the battlescarred veteran, when he had sufficiently recovered to talk. "The fight was fairly won and to the best man belongs the laurels."

"You are the most dangerous man alive," said Jefferies in return, "and I congratulate myself to have won when I did."

Fitz had been fighting at a furious gait, cool and deliberate, and chopping the champion to pieces with the terrific rights and lefts that have made him famous. It was the draught horse and the racer from the tap of the gong. When the men came together, Fitz appeared rather worried but upon the opening of the first round he assumed an air of absolute confidence, and fought with the deliberation of the general that he is.

As early as the second round Fitz had Jeff bleeding profusely from mouth and nose. Again and again he landed on his burly opponent, getting away in such a clever manner that brought down the house with cheers.

It seemed indeed that Jeff could scarcely weather out the gale. When the eighth round came, and under a series of hot exchanges Fitz paused with his guard down and spoke to the champion, the latter's reply consisted of the two terrific blows that brought back to him the fleeting championship and forever removed the veteran Fitzsimmons from the listic arena. Fitz took his defeat with amazing good cheer. He walked to the center of the ring and raising his hand addressed the multitude, saying, "The best man has won. Had I beaten Jeffries tonight, I would have conceded him the championship and forever retired. I retire just the same now, but without having accomplished my ambition. I am satisfied."

FAMOUS ALIENIST SUICIDES.

The Use of Strong Narcotics Caused Dr. Grissom to Take Life.

Washington, July 28.—Dr. Eugene Grissom, once well known as an alienist and neurologist, committed suicide here yesterday at his son's home, 1227 G street, N. E., by sending a bullet through his brain.

Dr. Grissom has been dejected and morose for several weeks and had become physically and mentally weakened from the use of strong narcotics. He was a native of Granville, North Carolina, served on the Confederate side until wounded during the civil war and afterward was a member of the state legislature.

For twenty-one years he was superintendent of the North Carolina insane asylum at Raleigh and gained a wide reputation as an alienist and lecturer.

Before the American Medical society he delivered a lecture entitled "The Borderland of Insanity" that attracted great attention. He was the author of "True and False Experts," a work devoted to showing the alleged inaccuracies of the expert testimony in insanity cases.

Dr. Grissom was one time first vice president of the American Medical society and several times presiding officer of the association of the superintendents of American insane asylums. He was the president of the convention of 1886. He was a Mason of high degree. He was 71 years of age. Dr. Grissom at one time practiced his profession in Denver, Colo.

PRESIDENT MITCHELL HOPEFUL.

Miners Who Leave Anthracite Field Do So to Work Elsewhere.

Chicago, July 24.—President Mitchell came to Chicago last night on his way to other coal fields, and was in better spirits than he has been for some time.

Asked about the report that many miners are leaving the anthracite field for other coal fields, he said, it was the policy and object of the organization to provide work for its members, and if work at union rates was not to be had in one coal field, the organization did all in its power and means to send them where it was to be had.

He said funds are coming into national headquarters at Indianapolis as rapidly as could be expected, and that not only labor unions and members of unions, but many individuals, among them a number of moneyed men, are sending money to carry on the fight.

Mr. Mitchell also said he believed the reports from Wilkesbarre that dissatisfaction had arisen among the miners over the manner of the distribution of funds and supplies to those on strike are not true.

"I make it a rule," he said, "to learn something every day." "My!" she said, "how fast you must forget."

JAPAN CLAIMS MARCUS ISLAN

Opposes United States' Cl[aim] to Big Dedosits of Guano.

HEPBURN TALKS ON TRU[ST]

After Visiting President He Says He Believes Regular Committees Will [Have] Charge of Trust Legislation—Op[position] to Watered Stock.

Washington, July 25.—The Jap[anese] government has served formal [notice] on the state department that it [claims] possession of Marcus island, [also] which is now headed an Ameri[can] pedition under Captain Rosehill [for] a purpose of exploiting its guan[o] posits. Regarding it as extreme[ly] sirable that no collision occur[s] state department has taken me[asures] to advise Captain Russell, and he [will] offer no resistance if he should [meet] with a Japanese warship headed [for] the island.

Rosehill landed on this island [some] teen years ago. He put up a sign deposited a bottle, setting forth [claim] for the island, erected a flagpole ran up a United States flag, and left the island, leaving it unoccupied a fact which may vitiate his title these facts he informed the state department, but he neglected for years to file in the treasury department the bond required by guano laws. In fact this bond was filed within the last year. Meaning finding a deserted island, some Japanese landed and began to take the guano, and the Japanese hold their title is good.

The Jananese warship carries message from the government to Rosehill, and as it will probably reach Marcus island, distant only 1,000 from Yokohama, before the Rainschooner, which sailed from Honolulu 2,000 miles distant, it is expected there will be no clash between schooner and the Japanese cruiser on the island.

Yokohama, July 25.—It is officially announced that the Japanese minister Kasagi will take the diplomatic affairs of Japan to Marcus. The explanation is that it is the desire of the government to respect the Japanese rights and convince them that Russia's claim is untenable. It is asserted that the island was annexed to Japan in 1898, and it was discovered by a Japanese subject in 1879.

PRESENTS MANY DIFFICUL[TIES]

Colonel Hepburn on the Problem of Anti-Trust Legislation.

Washington, July 25.—Colonel Hepburn was in Washington yesterday fresh from a conference with the president at Oyster Bay, and the significance in his reply to an inquiry if he thought Littlefield had been commissioned to take charge of anti-trust legislation.

"The president is very much interested in the question," said Mr. Hepburn, "but I think that it will be found that he is willing to let the appropriate committee of the house have full jurisdiction of the subject."

As Colonel Hepburn is chairman of the committee on interstate and foreign commerce he probably knows what he is talking about. The colonel frankly acknowledges the difficulties that attach to any effort to deal with the subject by legislation. He said: "It seems to me that we are in the condition of the man out in the country who wanted a rifle that would shoot a deer and miss a calf. We want a law that will hit the pernicious trusts and yet not hamper proper and legitimate combinations of capital. The man who can devise the kind of a law will solve the problem.

"It seems to me," he continued, "that the whole trouble lies in the amount of stock in these vast combinations which does not represent money actually paid in. For instance, I do not believe that Pierpont Morgan would have interested himself in organizing the great steel trust if he had not been for the $1,100,000,000 stock unrepresented by cash. We could tax that kind of stock out of existence just as we tax state bank notes. I believe we might find a remedy, at any rate, I believe there would be found so great an incentive for forming these huge combinations. I would tax all watered stock at all. In many cases these trusts the common stock is all watered. I would tax out of existence all stock that does not represent money actually paid in."

SITUATION IS GRA[VE]

Sturdy Resistence Continues Burning of the Associaton Schools.

Paris, July 28.—The series of official notices closing the unauthorized religious schools began Saturday and was carried out so far as possible unconcerned without any disturbance.

At Mauvaux, department of the Nord, the expulsion of the monks led to a riot, in which two persons were injured. Two police commissioners and ten deputies were involved.

The resistance to the officials in the capital is developing into a farce. The government allowed the sisters in the Rue Salenuve to remain because an orphanage and a home for the aged are attached to the institution. On the other hand, the sisters in the other street who were ordered to leave their mother superior to leave, were prevented from complying by a crowd of fifty enthusiasts, who surrounded them and shut them up in the convent house. The police are being prevented from expelling them by force.

The situation in the provinces is more grave. Telegrams are arriving, petitions for clemency and protests are pouring in on President Loubet from all quarters and telegrams from Nice say the outlook in several towns in the neighboring is serious. Open resistance to the authorities was offered and casualties have been reported.

TERRORIZED BY [CHOLERA]

London, July 26.—In a dispatch from Cairo, Egypt, the correspondent there of the Daily Telegraph says that the utmost consternation prevails owing to the terrifying progress of cholera. All hope of localizing the disease, says the correspondent, has been abandoned and there is no doubt but that Egypt will have a terrible devastating epidemic. The disease appeared Thursday in Cairo for the first time in nearly ever quarter of Cairo, the deaths and cases being recorded. Several persons fell dead at their work. The Cairo hospitals have been emptied and the British troops in Cairo will be moved to camp in the desert at the earliest possible moment. Slight[er] reports, according to the Daily Telegraph correspondent, have been received from upper Egypt.

The total number of cases in Egypt since July 15 is 307, of which 207 have proven fatal.

HERPICIDE

Relieves Dandruff Immediately

and causes thick, glossy hair to grow. It will plant the former thin, brittle hair with new hair.

Newbro's Herpicide performs its work in two ways. "Destroy the germ and the effect," and consequently dandruff and kills off the hair germ which is responsible for investment. diseases. It thus prevents dandruff and falling hair, cures itching, and promotes a luxuriant growth of hair that soon becomes the pride of its owner. Even a bald spot will soon produces hair as thick and luxuriant as anyone could wish for.

One bottle will convince that it is the only hair restorer that really restores.

July 28.—John [illegible] organizer of [illegible]ers of Ameri- contempt of court [illegible]d been on hearing all [illegible] witnesses had testified regarding [illegible]s speeches. He admitted using various expressions against the issuance of the injunction by Federal Judge Jackson.

Judge Jackson released eleven miners charged with contempt and agreed to rescind the warrant issued for the arrest of Secretary Wilson of the United Mine workers.

Consents to Release.

District Attorney Blizzard stated there were eleven more cases pending, but if the accused would agree to refrain from further violations he would consent to their release on their own recognizance. The court agreed to this and they were released.

"Mother" Jones says she will not stop her work among West Virginia miners, but will try to observe the law.

National Vice President Lewis is now in charge in West Virginia.

TO EVICT MINERS.

Men Notified to Return to Work or Quit Premises.

Charleston, W. Va., July 28.—Charleston is crowded with strikers from Loup creek, who are here to attend the trial of President Richards and others charged with having violated the injunctions issued by Federal Judge Keller.

The eviction of strikers occupying company houses is to commence Monday. This notice was posted at all mines in the Kanawha and New river fields:

"All persons desiring to work in the mines at the same prices and under the conditions prevailing on June 7, 1902, must report to the mine boss ready for work Monday morning, July 28. All persons who refuse to work on that day must call at the office, settle their accounts, get their pay, if anything is due them, and quit the respective companies' premises."

MITCHELL IN CHARGE.

Returns to Wilkesbarre and Consults With Leaders.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., July 28.—President Mitchell returned to this city, was met by local leaders, and spent considerable time in consultation with them, getting reports of the conditions in different parts of the region.

Regarding the distribution of the relief funds he had nothing to say except that the plans were in the hands of the local and the district officers. The plan of the union is to give aid only to those strikers who are in direct need of food or clothing. The locals that have money are to be allowed to exhaust their treasuries before they get a portion of the fund.

There is bitter complaint. Many strikers want the money to be distributed share and share alike, but as $500,000 weekly would not suffice to keep the families of all the union officers cannot do it.

The first installment of the strike fund was received by the three anthracite districts. It is supposed to be the division of the $50,000 first received by Secretary Treasurer Wilson, of which the amounts to be divided are as follows: District No. 1, $26,500; district No. 7, $6,000; district No. 9, $17,500.

Reject Michigan Compromise.

Bay City, Mich., July 28.—At a meeting of the Michigan mine operators in this city the proposition prepared by President Williams of the Michigan mine workers was unanimously rejected. The terms of the proposition were not made public by either side. The indications are that the strike will be indefinitely prolonged.

FAULKNER DECLARED GUILTY

Jury Fixes Penalty for Perjury at Two Years in Prison.

St. Louis, Mo., July 28.—The third conviction in the "boodle" cases was reached when the jury returned a verdict of guilty in the case of Harry A. Faulkner, on trial for perjury. His punishment was fixed at two years in the penitentiary. Faulkner is a member of the house of delegates and was one of the combine in that body for whom the suburban railway put up $75,000 in order to secure a franchise.

Cereal and Bakery Company.

Molders on Strike.

Alliance, O., July 25.—Seven hundred molders employed at the plant of the American Steel Casting company went on a strike when asked by the company to stand good for all bad castings.

BRAVE GIRL DROWNS TO SAVE PLAYMATE

Josephine Kastner Could Not Swim and Her Heroic Effort Proves Futile.

St. Paul, Minn., July 28.—Josephine Kastner lost her life in trying to save her playmate, Mary Siler, from drowning. They were 12 and 15 years old, respectively, and with a younger brother of the Kastner girl had gone bathing in Long lake at New Brighton. The trio got aboard a raft near the shore and gradually floated into deep water. Here the Siler girl became frightened and fell into the water. As she sank a second time, Josephine Kastner, forgetting that she could not swim, jumped overboard and grabbed her little playmate. The girls struggled in each other's arms for a few seconds and sank. Willie Kastner, the brother, was rescued by the villagers. The bodies of the girls were recovered.

SIX HANGINGS IN ARKANSAS

Two of Them Were White and All Paid Penalty for Murder.

Little Rock, Ark., July 28.—Six men were hanged in Arkansas, each for murder. Two of them were white. The executions took place during the forenoon, except at Arkansas City, where James Kitts was hanged at 2 p. m.

The executions were:

At Washington, Dec Noland, colored, for the murder of his wife near Wallaceburg; Tom Simms, colored, for the murder of Nancy and Thabita Jutton near Springhill.

At Arkansas City, James Kitts, colored, for the murder of Jim Johnson, colored, Nov. 16, 1901.

At Forest City, Cy Tanner, colored, for the murder of Robert Black, colored.

At Van Buren, Dave McWhorter, white for the murder of his wife near Mulberry, Nov. 15, 1901.

At Center Point, Lath Hembree, white, for the murder of W. M. Willis, white, in Polk county, March 2, 1900.

THIRD NEGRO SHOT TO DEATH

Double Lynching at Womelsdorf, W. Va., Has Bloody Sequel.

Womelsdorf, W. Va., July 28.—Besides the two negroes lynched here for murdering Policeman Wilmoth Woodman, a third negro was followed by a mob of thirty-five and shot to death in the jungles twenty-five miles south of Elkins. After riddling his body it was thrown into Chott river. Negroes are leaving this section.

The board of equalization of St. Louis County, Minnesota, has increased mine assessment valuations 330 per cent.

Officers of the American Bridge Company of Chicago are in Des Moines trying to locate J. L. Barnett, a foreman in charge of the construction of a new bridge there.

Jennings Johnson, 5-year-old son of Andrew Johnson of Galva, Ill., while playing in the switch yards was killed by a freight train.

The premature explosion of a shot in the clay mine at Black Hawk works near New Cumberland, W. Va., instantly killed John Carnahan, aged 45, and Thomas Sheets, aged 30, both married with families.

A judgment in favor of John T. Reed for $282,639 against Riley A. Boges and wife, both of California, was filed in the county clerk's office in Brooklyn, N. Y., as a result of the Empire Consolidated Quicksilver Mining company dispute.

MYSTERY IN REPORTED DEATH

Illinois Woman Plans for Funeral but Accident Is Denied.

Jacksonville, Ill., July 28.—There is mystery surrounding the reported death of George Tefft of this city at East St. Louis. His wife received a telegram that he had been killed by a switch engine and made arrangements for the funeral. In response to her telegram asking for the body Mrs. Tefft received a message from the police of East St. Louis that no such accident had happened there.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, July 26, 1902.

All Iowa telephones in city buildings must be removed by August 1st unless the strike is settled before that time. If the company declines to take out the instruments, the city will employ linemen to do the work and charge the cost to the company. Twenty-five Iowa 'phones are used by the city. The company furnishes them free. Half a dozen offices in the city hall, more in the police department, besides all the fire stations in the city are equipped with Iowa 'phones. Their removal will inconvenience the fire department seriously and may cripple the fire service to some extent. Hundreds of residence and business houses in the city depend for their connection with the fire department wholly upon the Iowa telephone.

The state board of control has issued an order establishing at the Mt. Pleasant state hospital a ward to be designated as the State Hospital for Inebriates. This is in accordance with an act of the last general assembly directing such action. The Mt. Pleasant hospital was selected for this because it is easy of access from all parts of the state and because the physicians and attendants there are more familiar with the treatment than at other state hospitals. The superintendent is directed to set aside a ward or wards to be used exclusively for the treatment of persons sent there because of the use of intoxicants or morphine or other narcotics. The superintendent is directed to keep patients separate from the insane but if a ward is only partially occupied insane patients may be kept there at the direction of the superintendent when he believes that no harm can come from such mingling of the dipsomaniacs and the insane. Patients in the inebriate ward may be given exercise or employment the same as insane persons. The superintendent at Mt. Pleasant hospital has been given notice and the county authorities in each county will be notified that the ward is now ready to receive patients. The state board has had a dozen or more inquires lately in regard to whether or not the dipsomaniac ward had been established, and it is expected that a dozen or twenty patients will be placed there immediately. At the same time the members of the board and the superintendents feel that the new law is likely to give them a good deal of trouble. Unlike in the case of insane persons the board has no power to parole, but that rests with the governor. Paroles cannot be issued until after thirty days. Two years sentences are possible at first, but not more.

The twenty-first annual meeting of the Sheriff's Association of Iowa will meet next year at Dubuque. The exact date has not yet been chosen, but it will probably be the first week of the first full moon of July for Sheriff Steiner has promised the association a moonight excursion on the Mississippi. There was a livey contest between Dubuque and Spirit Lake for the privilege of securing next year's meeting, with Des Moines a third choice. On the first formal ballot, however, Des Moines went ahead of Spirit Lake but Dubuque beat Des Moines two to one. The vote was: Dubuque 23, Des Moines 11, Spirit Laks 9. Next year's officers for the association are: President, F. L. Anderson, of Audubon; vice-president, L. B. Cousins of Council Bluffs; Secretary J. H. Kelley, of Des Moines.

The first information which a great many people will have in regard to the new compulsory education law which has just gone into effect will be when the school census enumerators come around early in September and proceed to make a separate list of all children between the ages of 7 and 14 years, these to be turned over to the public school officers and to be used in keeping tab on the school attendance of these young people. In the annual circular of instructions now being sent to county superintendents by the state superintendent this is specially noted and the school officers are requested to pay particular attention to the same. The compulsory education law has just gone into effect and with the coming school year there will be more attention paid to the attendance of small children than ever before.

Ex-Policeman John Carter, who was recently convicted in the district court on an indictment charging him with extortion, has notified the clerk he will not pay the costs in the case. It will be remembered that Judge Church, of Jefferson, who sentenced Carter, withheld announcement of judgment until after receiving assurance that the costs in the case would be paid. With that understanding Carter was let off with a light fine of $200. The costs amounted to $101, which Carter later refused to pay. When it was learned that the officer did not intend to settle with the state an effort was made to secure a revocation of the sentence, but this was found impossible and the matter was allowed to stand.

In a letter to the state board of control from Dr. M. N. Volding, Superintendent of the new hospital for insane at Cherokee, says the electrical apparatus for the new hospital is in place. The water works plant is in operation, water having been turned on throughout the building. The engines for the steam heating plant are in place, but the connections are still delayed. The switchboard for the electric lighting is not yet in place. Judge Kinne says he thinks August 15th will be the date for the formal opening.

Mrs. Justblessed—"We are going to name him Albert Edward, but we feel sure baby will make a name for himself before he is thirty." Uncle Crusty—"Yes, he'll be lucky if he doesn't have half a dozen aliases by that time."

The Superintendent—"Now, children why do we love to go to the beautiful parks? What do we find there that is always fresher and purer than it is in the city?" Truthful Tommy (with cheerful promptness)—"Pop corn, sir!"

Bragge—"I was knocked senseless by a cricket-ball two years ago." The boy in the corner—"When does yer expect ter get over it?"

"How long has she been on the stage?" "Only about three divorces."

Lady—"Ain't you ashamed to be tying fireworks to that dog's tail" Boy—"Ashamed? Hully gee! Ain't he an English bull dog, and ain't this the Fourth of July?"

Mrs. Smith—"I'll have a glass of orange phosphate, please." Courteous Salesman—"Yes, lady, will you have it sent?" Mrs. Smith—"No, I won't trouble you. I'll take it with me."

"Well, well," remarked Farmer Korntop at the Zoo, "this here lion 'pears to be real good natured." "Mebbe," suggested his good wife, "it's one o' them social lions ye read about in the papers."

AUDITORIUM STOCK CONTEST.

Number of Tickets Sold and Interest in It Increasing Every Day.

Interest in the Auditorium Stock Contest, which was opened in Omaha July 1, has increased steadily every day since that time and the project promises to be a great success in every way. The plan adopted for disposing of a sufficient amount of the common stock of the Omaha Auditorium Company to complete and furnish what will be the largest and handsomest building of its kind in the northwest, is very simple. The common stock has been divided into shares of twenty-five cents each, and with each share the purchaser is given two guesses, one on a special prize and one on a list of 1,001 prizes.

The capital prize of $5,000 in gold, contributed by the Defiance Starch Co. of Omaha, Neb., and 1,000 other prizes, ranging in value from $2.50 up to $3,500, contributed by the business men of Omaha, will be awarded immediately after the election next November, but the contest for them has already opened, and will close October 28, or as much sooner as the shares of stock are sold. The capital prize will be awarded to the person guessing closest to the total vote which will be cast for governor of New York, November 4, 1902, and the other prizes to the 1,000 persons making the next closest guesses. The total vote at the last five elections was: 1891, 1,165,035; 1894, 1,275,671; 1896, 1,434,046; 1898, 1,359,190; 1900, 1,556,520.

There will be seven more special cash prizes, to be awarded the first and fifteenth of each month until November, and persons buying tickets now have one guess with each share of stock on them as well as on the other prizes. Each special prize will be in cash, and not less than $50 nor more than $500. The prize, divided into small bills and "change" will be divided and put into two sacks without being counted, and the person guessing nearest the amount in the larger sack will be given the contents of both sacks. The contest is not confined to residents of Omaha or limited to any number of tickets. Anyone desiring further information or tickets should address Omaha Auditorium Co., Omaha, Nebraska.

Montgomery Ward & Co.
CHICAGO
The house that tells the truth.

In a speech in London, the other day, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman told an admirable story of the advice given by an Englishman, a Scotchman, and an Irishman, respectively, to a gentleman whose servant was constantly breaking articles in the household. The Englishman said, in his blunt, honest way, to the employer: "Oh, get rid of him—dismiss him." The Scotchman's advice was: "Stop the money out of his wages." "But," said the master, "he breaks more than his wages amount to." "Then," said the Irishman, "raise his wages."

An extremely stout, good-tempered Englishwoman once contrived to wedge herself into a gallery seat at the Adelphi Theatre that would have accommodated a person of ordinary size, to the unconcealed annoyance of a smartly dressed youth next to her. She began to peel an orange, and the youth, with a gesture of complaint, removed his silk hat fussily to a safer position. "I suppose," said the good tempered woman, "that you would rather have had a gentleman sitting by the side of you, sir, wouldn't you?" The youth replied, snappishly, in the affirmative. "Ah!" said the woman, thoughtfully, "so would I."

Lip courtesy avails much and costs little.

A Foolish Lift.

Stratford, Wis., July 28th.—William Junemann was working with a farmer near this place last summer and one day they got stuck with a load of grain. Mr. Junemann says: "We had to lift like fools and my back cracked and started to hurt me so that I couldn't stand it any longer. The man I was working with took me home and I went to bed. I saw an advertisement of Dodd's Kidney Pills in the paper and I sent and got one fifty cent box. Before I had this box used up I began to feel better and I kept on and very soon my back was well again.

"I can't say enough for Dodd's Kidney Pills and I cannot understand why anyone should continue to suffer with backache when Dodd's Kidney pills will cure it so quickly."

Nathan Hale is reported to have said: "I am sorry that I am not a cat so that I could give nine lives to my country."

sufficient vitality, an operation for ovarian troubles. Not a very cheerful prospect, to be sure. I, however, was advised to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash; I did so, fortunately for me. Before a month had passed I felt that my general health had improved; in three months more I was cured, and I have been in perfect health since. I did not lose an engagement or miss a meal.

"Your Vegetable Compound is certainly wonderful, and well worthy the praise your admiring friends who have been cured are ready to give you. Through mistake we failed to mention last week the pleasant party given by Miss Amelia Lenz to her young friends, Friday evening, July 18, the occasion being Miss Amelia's 17th birthday. All present had a most enjoyable time.

Oscar Carlson was called to Pilot Mound, Iowa, Monday on account of the serious illness of his father. He returned last evening, accompanied by his brother, Albert, who will visit here about a week. He reports his father much improved.

The Klemme kid ball team drove down to Goodell Monday to meet the kid team of that place in a friendly game of ball. According to our kids' story, they met about half men and half boys. and were defeated by a score of 13 to 14. It was a good close game.

Some genius has classified noses as follows, Roman nose, Grecian nose, snub nose and the turn-up nose. Now it must be confessed that the prejudice goes very strongly in favor of wearing some kind of a nose—and it is equally true that anybody knows that at J. H. Queal & Co's. is the only place to buy your lumber.

B. L. Allen has resigned his position as Rock Island agent at this place, and has taken a position with the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul on their line between Chicago and Council Bluffs. ### About Morningside College

The commencement season of the colleges and universities of our country is just past. The Boards of Regents, Trustees, and kindred bodies have been considering with very great care the work of their respective institutions, which contribute in no small degree to the civilization of our commonwealths. The city of Sioux City has taken commendable pride in the work of Morningside College located in her midst. It would seem very appropriate to recite a few interesting facts developed in the closing days of the College.

The friends of the institution are gratified with its substantial development along all lines during the past year. There are now two commodious buildings splendidly furnished in all departments. College Hall is an elegant building erected in 1900. It is now thoroughly equipped and with the furnishings is worth $100,000. The laboratories for work in physics, chemi-try and biology are among the very best in this section of the country. Much of the material for these departments was imported from Germany and is thoroughly modern and up-to-date. North Hall, a beautiful stone building, is devoted to the work of the Conservatory of Music. The arrangement and equipment of this building furnish splendid facilities for those who study voice culture, piano forte and violin. The entire plant with the campus is valued at $175,000. It is confidently hoped by the friends of the institution that by January 1, 1905, there will not remain a dollar of debt against the institution.

The roster shows a total attendance of 480 students during the last year. There were graduated from the Academy 39 young people who are now prepared to enter the Freshman class of the College. * * *

The faculty is composed of 24 cultured men and women who represent the spirit and training of many of the great institutions of learning of our own and other lands. The following is a partial list of the great centers of learning which have contributed to the equipment of the faculty of the College. Oxford, England, University of Leipsic, Germany, University of Paris, France, Harvard University, Smith College, University of Wisconsin, University of Pennsylvania, Chicago University, Johns Hopkins University, Wellesley College.—Sioux City Journal.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS

The Algona Advance has again changed hands.

Improvements are being made in the Kanawha schoolhouse.

Sam Schneider is now cashier of the First National Bank at Titonka.

The Crystal Lake post office has been moved into the State Bank building.

Monday evening near Kanawha occurred the marriage of Clarence A. Gramley and Miss Jessie Mable Huyck.

Nettie and Lela Haskin, of Klemme, visited from Friday until Monday with their little friend, Mildred Zook, of our city.—Goodell Globe.

The society column in a Kansas paper announces the wedding of John Plum and Ellen Peach. May heaven preserve them from family jars.

Monday afternoon, July 28, at her home southwest of Goodell, occurred the death of Mrs. Charley Trumbell, resulting from tuberculosis of the bronchial tubes.

Julius Henschen and wife, of Klemme, are visiting here. Julius will attend Fred Jurgens separator this season. They expect to start tomorrow at Fred Gorton's.—Kanawha Record.

One of the most successful Teachers Institutes ever held in the county is the one conducted by Supt. Devoe here in Britt. There was a very large enrollment and an efficient corps of instructors who did much good work. The two lectures were well attended. —Britt Tribune.

The home of Mr. Ridley, one of the anti-saloon men of Estherville, was burned to the ground one day last week. The feeling between the saloon and anti-saloon factions in Estherville for the past two years has been very bitter, and the burning of the house is blamed to the saloon faction.

The Crystal Lake Reflector is a little behind the times. In last week's paper it mentions that another post-office fight is on in Algona, due to the resignation of Harvey Ingham. The new postmaster was appointed about three weeks ago and has already taken charge of the office. His name is 'Gus' Peek.

Arthur E. Mason, one of Hancock county's best citizens, died at his home 2 miles west of Goodell at 3 o'clock p. m Sunday, July 27th. 1902, aged 37 years, 11 mos. and 22 days. Deceased was struck by lightning on Friday evening, July 25th, and was thought at first to have been killed instantly, but after medical aid reached him he rallied and all that loving friends and relatives could do was done, but he finally succumbed to the grim monster, Death, at the time above mentioned.—Globe.

Look Pleasant, Please

Photographer C. C. Harlan, Eaton, O., can do so now, though for years he couldn't, because he suffered untold agony from the worst form of indigestion. All physicians and medicines failed to help him till he tried Electric Bitters, which worked such wonders for him that he declares they are a godsend to sufferers from dyspepsia and stomach troubles. Before One Starts the Hot Air Furnace

People who live in hot air furnace-heated houses may have noticed the prevalence of supposed colds, coughs, and throat ailments immediately after the furnace has been started in the fall. As a matter of fact experts declare that these epidemics are largely caused by the dust and germs which gather in the registers and hot air pipes during the summer and are blown out into the air of the house when the furnace is started. In addition to the ordinary dust which is certain to settle in such places during the summer months there is also danger that it may become impregnated with poisonous vapors from the cellar which may be released by the current of hot air rising from the cellar. The question of properly cleaning the pipes may have an important influence on the public health. The question is certainly one which deserves the attention of every householder who wishes to avoid the usual fall epidemic of bad colds and coughs.

Of course where steam or hot water heating system is used, the boiler, piping and radiators are all solidly connected by threaded joints. Because of the substantial and absolutely tight condition of the apparatus, there is no escapement. The radiators are the only part of the apparatus exposed in the living rooms, and their smooth surface can be kept easily and thoroughly dusted.—Chicago Tribune.

MIDGETS DROP ONE TO BRITTISH

Klemme Is Defeated In a Nice Game at Britt Tuesday, Score 4 to 0.

It is a sad tale to tell, but we feel that we must break the news, and promise to do it as gently as possible. The Midgets drove over to Britt Tuesday with the determination to give Britt another exhibition of ball playing and again show them how the thing is "properly did," but alas, things did not hitch properly and Klemme was shut out, at least that's what the score card showed.

The game was good from the start. Britt scored one run in the second on errors, and were then blanked until the eighth, when they made three runs, all three being presented to them by Klemme errors.

George Duryea was in the box for Britt and Joe Nissen was the only Midget who could land on him safely. Klemme did not have a ghost of a chance to score until the ninth, when Flint reached first on a fumble by Williams and stole second. Woodard then hit to Williams, who threw to first. Flint started for third and the ball was returned from first passing under Williams and serenely sailing on by. Flint went home and was safe by twenty minutes but the Britt umpire called him out. It was a decayed decision as any one could see, and our boys saw there was no show against such heavy odds. This makes a game apiece for these teams and it is probable that the third will be played on the Garner diamond next week.

Drew the Line at Feeding the Baby Eggshells.

Elsa is the name of the new nursemaid who has been installed as custodian of a certain infant of my acquaintance. She is a flaxen-haired young person of dumpy figure, given to wearing hideous pink and blue ribbons about her throat and inclined to a view of life which is serious, to put it mildly. A day or so ago the baby's mother was obliged to be away from the house for several hours, and by invitation Elsa and her charge became guests of a neighbor who had agreed to keep a kindly eye on the two. When luncheon was served the neighbor was worried over a suitable meal for the baby and appealed to Elsa.

"Vat does he eat?" repeated the nursemaid, phlegmatically; "a little milk would be good, and a little bread, perhaps."

"Why not a soft-boiled egg?" urged the hospitable hostess; "bread and milk seem such slim fare even for a baby. Couldn't she have an egg, Elsa?"

Elsa considered the problem.

"Perhaps," she assented, at last, "a little egg with some salt. But," anxiously and with an air of imparting profound knowledge, "she must not eat the shell."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Powers of London's Mayor.

The city of London invests its chief magistrate with the most extraordinary powers and prerogatives. He is not only chief criminal and civil judge of the city, but likewise generalissimo of the city militia and admiral of the port of London. But before entering upon his 12 months' term of office, it compels him to sign a bond of $1,000,000 for the safekeeping of the jewels, forming part of his insignia of office.

Decrease in Pauperism.

It is satisfactory to learn from the latest report of the English local government board that there continues to be a steady decrease in pauperism. The total number of paupers relieved last year was 807,471, which means that one person in every 39 in the kingdom is a pauper. This year the proportion is less than that, and 50 years ago one person in every 16 instead of every 39 was in receipt of relief.

DEFALCATION IS $580,000.

And to Cap the Climax Perkins Had Given no Bond.

Cedar Rapids, August 1.—It is now discovered that Chas. W. Perkins never gave any sort of bond to General Munger of the Northwestern Life Insurance Co., whose funds Perkins used to the tune of from $60,000 to $80,000 in the past ten years. Perkins has not been arrested. He turned over his real and personal property, at least part of it, to avoid financial loss. It seems that the general agent must stand good for Perkins' shortage, to the Northwestern company. It is also known that Perkins told Munger of his embezzlements or shortages on June 16, yet the matter was kept from the public until a few days ago when the general agent tried to realize on certain securities and had to sell real estate that Perkins had turned over to him. The banks have known of the shortage for several weeks. It is also said that Perkins has signed a statement that the amount embezzled was $80,000. Further interest is occasioned by the report that the securities that he turned over to Munger were of such character that they show that Perkins had speculated, not only in real estate, but bought mine securities in Cripple Creek and Cape Nome. He turned over his handsome residence at 1228 Third avenue in this city, which he estimates at $15,000; a fifty-acre olive and orange ranch in Arizona, the value of which he places at $25,000; a tract of land in Arkansas valued at $2,000; certain mining properties and a block of stock in a Mexican coffee and rubber plantation, and other personal property upon which Mr. Perkins refused to place an estimate.

Just how Perkins fooled the inspectors or auditors, who are semi-annually sent to go through his books, is a puzzle. Few persons have intimated that they were "fixed," but most business men appear to believe that Perkins simply manipulated the books and accounts in such skillful manner that everybody was fooled. Mr. Munger is in Milwaukee conferring with the Northwestern officers and just what the next move will be is the topic of general discussion in this city.

INJURED IN CYCLONE.

Mr. and Mrs. Shaw of Hanna Siding are at the Point of Death.

Fort Dodge, Aug. 3.—A cyclone struck the little village of Hanna Siding, just east of Luverne on the Minneapolis & St. Louis yesterday. H. A. Shaw and wife lie at the point of death from injuries received from the timbers of falling houses and several others were slightly injured. The elevator of Way, Johnson & Co. was demolished and many buildings destroyed. The violent windstorm extended south from Algona to Luverne a distance of twenty miles, and was nine miles broad. The damage to crops is said to be incalculable. Corn is prostrated and small grain ruined. The damage will reach thousands of dollars.

It is stated at Hanna that Mrs. Shaw is likely to recover. The Shaws hired man and the agent of the elevator company, who boarded with them, were also badly injured.

The school house about a half mile west of the Shaw house was blown to pieces. At Joe Brunner's place about a mile east of Hanna, all of his barns and outhouses were blown away. The grain in this vicinity was nearly all cut, but the hail threshed it nearly al out; the corn is all stripped, and it looks doubtful of its making any corn.

South of Corwith five miles the school house was blown off its foundation and slid on the grass to the fence, which seems to have stopped it Small outbuildings, wind mills and corn cribs were blown down.

About three miles south of Corwith the barns on the farm occupied by R. B. Johnson was blown away.

There are numerous other instances of buildings and windmills being blown away, covering a large part of the territory tributary to this town and extending far beyond that.

Where the hail was the worst, farmers say there is little left of the corn, and the small grain in shock is badly damaged.

The large stained glass window on the west side of the Baptist church in Corwith was blown in, completely demolishing it and scattering the broken glass to the pulpit on the opposite side of the church.

JOHN F. DUNCOMBE IS DEAD.

Prominent in Legal and Political Circles for Many Years.

Fort Dodge, Aug. 4.—John Francis Duncombe, a pioneer settler of Fort Dodge and prominent in legal and political circles throughout the state, died at his home here at 10:40 Saturday night, aged 71 years. The cause of his death was a stroke of apoplexy, following a general breaking down of his system. He had been unconscious for a week before the final dissolution, and died without regaining consciousness. He was surrounded by all the members of his family when he passed away.

Mr. Duncombe had been a resident of Fort Dodge for forty years. He was considered one of the most able lawyers in the state, and has been connected with several famous trials.

One of the greatest tributes ever paid to his legal attainments was in his selection as one of the three counsel for the state to defend the legality of the prohibitory amendment to the constitution. Judge C. C. Nourse of Des Moines and Senator James F. Wilson acted with him; both were ardent republicans and prohibitionists. Mr. Duncombe was a democrat and an anti-prohibitionist, selected because of his legal abilities.

For years he was district attorney for the Illinois Central railroad. For thirty years he was prominent as a leader of Iowa democracy, has served as state senator and representative, and has been a candidate for lieutenant governor, supreme judge and representative to congress. He was twice chairman of the Iowa delegation to the national democratic convention and has held many positions of trust. Mr. Duncombe leaves a widow and five children.

Livery Barn Brawl.

Webster City, July 31.—In a livery barn brawl Frank Mallow struck M. Boughton with a piece of iron pipe about a foot and a half long. The fight started over a small dray bill which Boughton attempted to collect from Mallow. Boughton is seriously injured and under the care of a physician. Two long gashes were cut in the back of his head. Mallow plead guilty to the assault and was fined $20.

RAILROAD ASSESSMENT FIXED

$51,112,814 Is Fixed as the Total Valuation—Increase in the Northwestern Is $1,100,549, the Largest on Any Road—Total Increase Is $4,041,556.

Des Moines, August 1.—The executive council has raised the railroad assessment to $51,112,814, an increase of $4,041 556 over the assessment of 1901. This is the largest assessment ever made upon the roads of Iowa and the largest increase ever made over a preceding year's assessment except in 1897. In that year through the exertions of Governor Larrabee, the assessment was increased more than $5,000,000 over what it was in 1886.

The Chicago & Northwestern and the Milwaukee systems will have to bear half of the increase. The increase on the Northwestern line amounts to $1,100,549. That on the Milwaukee is $900,826. The C. B. & Q. is also called upon to bear a largely enhanced assessment, its increase being $665,457.

The increase falls almost entirely on the larger systems or trunk lines. All but $68,763 of the total rise is borne by nine large systems. The following table shows how the increase is distributed:

| | |
|---|---|
| B., C. R. & N. | $ 253,560 |
| C., B. & Q. | 665,457 |
| C. G. W. | 250,158 |
| C., M. & St. P. | 900,826 |
| C. & N. W. | 1,100,549 |
| C., R. I. & P. | 300,759 |
| Omaha & St. Louis | 225,700 |
| Dubuque & S. C. | 250,016 |
| Minneapolis & St. Louis | 25,732 |
| Other lines | 68,763 |
| Total | $4,041,556 |
| Assessment, 1901 | $47,071,258 |
| Assessment, 1902 | 51,112,814 |

No changes were made in the assessments of the Iowa Central and the Wabash systems. Of the total assessment, but $192,000 is made on new track.

While actually there has been a large increase in the assessment, as compared with the gross earnings, there has been but a small relative raise. The total assessment a year ago was $47,071,258. The gross earnings the preceding year were $52,354,817. The percentage of assessment to gross earnings was 89.9. The gross earnings reported this year for 1901 were $56,079,943. The percentage of this year's assessment to the gross earnings of the roads is a little over 91 per cent. In other words, on the basis of gross earnings, the assessment of this year is one per cent greater than it was a year ago.

Des Moines, Aug. 2.—Computations made yesterday indicate that the executive council arrived at the total of the railroad assessment by using the capitalization of net earnings method. This is the process that was advocated by Lieutenant Governor John Herriott last winter in his famous communication to the senate ways and means committee. It is also one of the ways of arriving at valuations that was most severely criticised by the railroad attorneys and tax auditors in the public hearings before the executive council.

A study of the assessment makes it plain by what means the council arrived at the total valuation of the roads. When that body set to work on the assessment, the first step taken was to ascertain the gross assessment. Taking the total net earnings of the roads, amounting to $16,460,975.82, the council appears to have capitalized this at 6 per cent. The result thus obtained was $274,349,597. Supposedly, this represented the total actual valuation of railroad property in Iowa. The council then took 18½ per cent as the average assessment of real estate of the state and assessed the roads at the same ratio. There was a slight variation of a few hundred thousand dollars from the sum so obtained, but in a general way this was the process of arriving at the total of the assessment.

The council in using this process and taking 18½ per cent of the valuation of the railroad property as the taxable value, seemingly accepted the view of the railroad representatives that real estate was assessed no higher and that the assessment on railroad property could not be greater. After arriving at the total assessment to be placed on the roads, the council proceeded to make the distribution. In distributing, gross earnings, physical condition and other facts were taken into consideration.

ASKS DIVORCE AND ALIMONY.

Sensational Suit Filed in Audubon County Court.

Audubon, July 31.—Lucinda B. Robson has filed a petition for a divorce from Joseph Robson, and the case will come up in the October term of the district court. The wife alleges cruel and inhuman treatment and asks for $20,000 alimony. She is the second wife of Joseph Robson and married him only two years ago. She claims that he has abused her at various times since, beating and pounding her and forcing her to do farm work and the housework as well. The case promise to be a very salacious one. Mr. Robson is a well-to-do farmer living in Audubon township, the owner of 480 acres of land and lots of personal property. Mrs. Robson asks for $20,000 alimony and $5,000 attorney's fees.

Tracey Has Iowa Imitator.

Albia, Aug. 4.—A man calling himself Harry Tracey held up Husses' barber shop with two large Colt's revolvers and made them shave him, and then told them if they came outside of the shop in thirty minutes he would blow their heads off. He answers Tracey's description almost identically. He has not been seen since, and the town is in great excitement.

Fire at Rock Valley.

Rock Valley, July 31.—Fire of unknown origin entirely consumed the Terwilliger-Dwight Bros. elevator containing 2,000 bushels of wheat and one car of wheat on the track, which had been accepted by the railway. The wind was in the south and fear that the blaze might spread to the business portion of the town was general until the walls fell in.

Fatality at Lenox.

Creston, Aug. 4.—Eugene Cameron, a 16-year-old boy living a short way from Lenox, a small town south of here, is not expected to live from the effects of a revolver wound accidentally inflicted by his younger brother.

TOOK LAUDANUM ROUTE.

Former Representative Potter Commits Suicide at Des Moines.

Des Moines, Aug. 4.—Former State Representative Albert M. Potter, recently of Waverly, Iowa, died at Mercy hospital in Des Moines Saturday afternoon. He was found unconscious in his room, No. 85, at the Kirkwood hotel Saturday morning at 5 o'clock, and was removed to the hospital at once, but died without regaining consciousness.

Potter, who had been drinking with a man named Scott of Muscatine, went to the Kirkwood hotel about 11 o'clock Friday night, after having left Scott, and at that time was not perceptibly intoxicated. He had been in the city since Tuesday or Wednesday. After he left Scott Friday evening he visited the drug store run by Dr. Harry Crawfod at Fourth and Locust streets, where he spent five or ten minutes, and then went to the Oxford restaurant, where he had a lunch. He went to bed at 11 and was found unconscious at 5 in the morning Dr. Wilton McCarthy attempted in vain to resuscitate him.

The detectives were completely in the dark until yesterday, when it was learned that Potter bought an ounce of laudanum at the Savery hotel drug store Friday afternoon, and the empty bottle was found last night beneath the window of the room at the Kirkwood hotel in which he was found. There is no known motive for the suicide.

GOVERNOR HAS DOUBT ABOUT REORGANIZATION.

If Iowa Law is Effective He Will Endeavor to Stop Merger.

Des Moines, August 2.—Governor Cummins has announced that he has instituted an inquiry into the new consolidation and reorganization scheme of the Rock Island company to determine whether or not it is in violation of law and if it can be stopped. The governor states that he is of the opinion that it is contrary to the letter and spirit of the Iowa law, that the inflation of stock is unlawful and is a question whether or not the New Jersey corporation can own and control stock of an Iowa corporation in the manner comtemplated.

If he can do so the governor will institute legal proceedings to prevent the merger.

Governor Cummins made this announcement yesterday after having read over carefully the press dispatches relating to the proposals of the new owners of the Rock Island property. He is intensely in earnest in this matter and has already instituted an inquiry to determine what is being done and what can be done if the scheme is contrary to law and public policy.

"I believe," said the governor, "that this reorganization scheme is as repugnant to the people who are holders of large investments and to the owners of railroads as to the outsiders. If this form of inflation and stock issuing is to go on and the plans of the organizers to issue different kinds of stock with different powers and all that sort of thing is to go on indefinitely, there can be but one result—an explosion. What will be the effect of that inevitable explosion no man can tell. But it is certain that very many who are entirely innocent and who have had no part in these high handed proceedings will suffer. I shall investigate to see if some way cannot be found to stop it."

The plan of the Rock Island organizers is to turn over the stock of the Rock Island Railway, the present company, amounting now to $75,000,000, to the financiers, and for each share of stock of the old company, par value $100, the owner is to get a gold bond for $100 at 4 per cent interest, also $100 common stock in the New Jersey Rock Island Company, and $70 preferred stock in the same company. The gold bonds are of the new Rock Island Railroad company, $75,000,000 being issued, representing the $75,000,000 of the old company stock. The stock of the new Rock Island company are to be deposited with a trust company as collateral security for the gold bonds. The New Jersey company, which is the "Rock Island Company," is to issue $150,000,000 of stock, of which $54,000,000 is preferred stock and $96,000,00 common stock. The intention is also that the holders of the preferred stock shall alone have control of the property and elect directors and that the New Jersey corporation shall own and hold the stock of the new Iowa company, which will be put up as a collateral for the bond issue.

By this arrangement the holders of the preferred stock of a New Jersey corporation can control an Iowa company organized for operating purposes. The New Jersey company issue no bonds.

"There are two propositions that need to be looked into in this matter," said Governor Cummins. "One is whether or not the enormous inflation of the stock of the Iowa company by the process of organizing a new company and issuing new stock is lawful. Unfortunately there is no penalty under the Iowa law for issuing stock for which value has not been received, the only penalty being the increased liability of the stock holder for debts.

"The other branch of the inquiry relates to whether or not the laws will permit of a New Jersey corporation which owns nothing and whose stock represents nothing can own and control an Iowa corporation in the manner which appears to be contemplated. It is the boldest proposition of the kind which has yet come to my notice. If I can do any thing to prevent such a proposition from becoming accepted I will do so.

"You can now readily understand," continued the governor, "why there was such desire to have passed last winter the bill which I vetoed. If that bill had become a law the bonds which it is proposed shall be issued could have been issued without any increase of capital stock of the old company, on a million dollars worth, or $10,000 worth of stock. Now the reorganizers propose to accomplish the same thing in another way."

IOWA PAPER LEADS THE WORLD.

Has the Largest Proportional Circulation Yet Known.

Des Moines, July 31.—The honor of having the largest circulation of any daily newspaper in the world in proportion to the population of the home city is now accorded to the Des Moines Daily and Sunday News, which has over 38,000 circulation though published in a city of less than 75,000, or more than one subscriber for every two men, women and children in the city. The enormous circulation of the News is attributed partly to the low subscription price—$3.50 a year, $1.00 for 8 mos., 80c for 6 mos. 50c for 3 mos, 25c for 1 mo., for both daily and Sunday editions. The wonderful success of the News is shown by the recent sale of 280 shares of its stock at $416.66 per share—the highest price ever paid for the stock of an Iowa corporation. The News is a member of the Asociated Press and publishes the full leased wire dispatches, including daily markets by wire.

STATUS OF ISLANDERS.

Rules Issued Apply Immigration Laws to Porto Ricans and Filipinos.

Washington, Aug. 4.—Commissioner General Sargent, of the immigration bureau, with the approval of secretary Shaw, has issued a circular prohibiting the coming to the United States of residents and natives of Porto Rico and the Philippines, except after the same examination as is enforced against other alien immigrants.

The circular is as follows:

"To collectors of customs, immigrant inspectors, Chinese inspectors and other officers charged with the administration of the immigration and Chinese exclusion laws:

"Under the provisions of the acts of congress, approved April 12, 1900, and July 1, 1902, the people of the island of Porto Rico and of the Philippine islands have been declared to be citizens of those islands respectively, and as such are entitled to the protection of the United States.

"You are, therefore, advised that the laws regulating immigration, including those which prescribe payment of the head tax, apply to the residents and natives of Porto Rico and the Philippine islands, and, moreover, that the provisions of the law relating to the exclusion of the Chinese apply to all of such persons as are of the Chinese race. The citizens and residents of the said islands, therefore, should be admitted to the United States on the same conditions and subject to the same examinations as are enforced against people from countries over which the United States claims no right of sovereignty whatever."

SMITH DEFENDS HIMSELF.

Had Only Tried to Do His Duty and Retirement Was a Surprise.

San Francisco, Aug. 4.—General Jacob H. Smith, who returned last Friday from Manila, will spend several days in this city and then go to his home in Portsmouth, Ohio. Speaking one the subject for the first time since his arrival, General Smith said his forced retirement from the army was a surprise He did not expect more than reprimand as a result of the verdict in the court martial. General Smith said he had always tried to do his duty and conduct himself as a soldier. Some natives of Samar, he said, are nothing but savages and cannot be treated like civilized people. "They all would resort to most barbarous methods of warfare at times. Instances of the torture and slaughter of American soldiers were very numerous. Any one of my commands knows that they were not unduly severe with the natives. I have always tried to conduct my campaigns according to military regulations."

MINNEAPOLIS MAYOR RESIGNS.

Move of Executive the Climax of Police Corruption Case.

Minneapolis, August 2.—Mayor A. A. Ames has resigned his office, and he has counseled his brother, Col. Fred W. Ames, to resign also as chief of police. This is the climax of the police corruption cases which have agitated Minneapolis and occupied the grand jury and the courts for two months. Mayor Ames is in failing health and may not return to Minneapolis at all unless ordered to do so by the courts. The mayor's resignation does not take effect until September 6, but he will permit Alderman Bowers to conduct the city's affairs.

When the case of Chief of Police Ames was called, his attorneys moved to quash the inqictment on the ground that the grand jury was prejudiced and biased. The court denied the motion, whereupon Chief of Police Ames pleaded not guilty and the case was set for trial next Tuesday. A demurrer to the indictment may be filed.

COL. LYNCH DENIES GUILT.

Makes a Long Statement in the Bow Street Court.

London, August 2.—Col. Arthur Lynch, the nationalist, accused of high treason, during the boer war, was taken to Bow street police court yesterday. Before the court committed him for trial, Col. Lynch made a long statement in which he said that he had gone to South Africa under contract with the Paris Journal and that he had not expected to stay any more than two months. He also arranged to serve the Century magazine, Collier's Weekly, and several other American magazines. He denied that he saw Dr. Leyds, the Boer agent, before starting, and he declared that he had no mission from Leyds to the Transvaal. At the close of the statement Lynch was committed for trial.

Before going to court Col. Lynch was visited in his prison cell by W. H. K. Redmond and other nationalist leaders.

LESS CHOLERA IN MANILA.

Scourge Is Spreading With Great Fatality in the Provinces.

Manila, Aug. 4.—While cholera is decreasing in Manila, the reports received from the provinces show a large number of cases and deaths. Last Saturday there were 605 cases and 525 deaths from cholera in the provinces. Since the outbreak of the epidemic there have been throughout the archipelago a total of 21,408 cases of cholera and 16,106 deaths. It is believed that many cases were not reported, and the total number of cases is estimated at 28,000. Forty-eight Americans and eighteen Europeans have died in Manila since the outbreak.

The United States transport General Alava will leave here for Singapore, Straits settlements, next Tuesday to meet Governor Taft, who is returning from Rome, and bring him to Manila.

YOUNG KING'S MISSION.

Victor Emmanuel Seeking Reduction in Continental Armaments.

Berlin, Aug. 4.—The object of the visit of the king of Italy to the German emperor at the end of this month is to propose a reduction in continental armaments. This was the purpose of his visit to the czar, from whom he received every encouragement. He will come to the emperor with Russia's full support.

Frank Vanderlip, formerly assistant secretary of the treasury of the United States and now vice-president of the National City bank of New York, who has just arrived here from Italy and who gives the Associated Press this information, says that the great Italian bankers believe something will come of Victor Emmanuel's project. The young king has taken the step on his own initiative.

CANADA'S BIG WHEAT CROP.

Causes United States to Become Decidedly Apprehensive.

Washington, August 1.—People of the northwest are beginning to get worried about the increasing production of wheat in Canada. Last year's yield was close to 50,000,000 bushels, which was a jump of 20,000,000, and now ex-Premier Greenway of Canada, predicts that this year's yield will not be far from 70,000,000 bushels

CHAPTER XI.

Hot Shot.

One look told Charlie that his friend had good news.

Artemus was fairly bubbling over with the intelligence he had picked up.

Such a smile upon the face of Barnaby looked bad for Capt. Brand and his great game; the foundations of his Spanish castle were getting shaky, and possibly the whole tremendous structure must come crashing down, engulfing him in the ruins.

"What's the word?" asked Artemus.

"All goes on serenely, so far as I know."

Artemus shut one eye.

"There's some high old fun in prospect."

"Well, yes, I suppose so; St. Patrick's day is always booming with good cheer in New York."

"Ah! I mean for us; for our friend the captain."

"That strikes closer home. Now, I knew you were the bearer of good news when I saw you enter."

"I always said I was born under a lucky star, and this settles it beyond peradventure."

"Well, tell me your adventures, and how good fortune attended you. All of which shall be to the glory of our cause, the vindication of truth and right, and the utter demoralization of Capt. Brand."

"Come over here, where comfort and velvet chairs await us, and prepare yourself for a surprise that will, I guess, surpass anything you ever heard."

So they settled down.

Charlie endeavored to retain his composure and possess his soul in patience.

He knew Artemus of old and that a ceremony had to be gone through with ere he would disgorge the secrets he possessed, such as would not disgrace the cross-questioning in one of the higher courts.

"Well, now, you know what hopes I had with regard to the fellows on the Rialto; how I built up air-castles concerning the finding of one or more among them who knew Macauley by heart, and would, for a proper consideration, take pleasure in denouncing him to his face.

"I only ran across one man who had played upon the boards with the great Macauley; he declared he would know him under any disguise; that his mannerisms must always betray his individuality even though he represented an Arab or a heathen Chinee."

"Ah; that's the man we want," said Charlie.

"And the [illegible] & T. A.. [illegible]e won't get. You see [illegible] Division [illegible]perience with Macauley [illegible] P.. [illegible] day he declares the me[illegible] man always sends a chill up and down his spinal column. In a word, he fears him worse than the devil fears holy water, and neither bribes nor pleading could induce him to say he would open his batteries on Brand. The most I could get him to promise was to see the other from a safe hiding-place and then secretly give us his opinion, with the iron-bound proviso that his name would never appear in the matter."

Charlie elevated his eyebrows.

"I should say that man was a little bashful."

"He admitted the soft impeachment, and confessed to a ghastly fear. No Macauley for him, thank you. A burnt child dreads the fire, you know."

"It might be some satisfaction to us if he added the weight of his secret testimony to our own strong convictions in the matter; that is, it would perhaps influence Lady Arline."

"No doubt, no doubt."

"Will it pay to summon him, then?"

This direct method of questioning was the best way of assisting Artemus along.

It compelled an answer, and thus necessitated the unmasking of his strong batteries.

"I hardly think so."

"You know best, but I should hear your reasons for refusing small favors the gods throw way."

"And you shall, Charlie, m[illegible] In the first place, it would har[illegible]ay us to depend at all upon such secret testimony. If we could inject some alcoholic fluid into this low comedian, to give him backbone, so that he would face Brand and finish the game in a blaze of glory, it would do very well; but I fear the only thing that would give the poor devil artificial courage, would at the same time steal away his senses, so that our cause would hardly make much progress. Don't you agree with me?"

Charlie nodded in the affirmative.

"That is one reason, you see. It wouldn't pay to bother with such a witness; time and labor and good point I wish to make. His evidence isn't needed."

"Ah!"

"Since I have found another way of ensnaring the wonderful Capt. Brand in a net which must render him utterly helpless. When the Rialto prospects grew dim, I had in my mind another alternative, by which I meant to make one last, desperate move, you know. It was suggested by something you said a long time back, in case business took us to London.

"First of all, I began to make diligent inquiries among the various shipping houses down in the region about Fulton market, and soon struck oil.

"One man remembered the Hespasia and her sad fate perfectly. He had sailed a voyage on her, and was later on connected in some clerical way with the American branch of the house in whose interests she was sailed up to the time of her loss.

"That branch house is still in existence and only a block away from where we stood talking at the moment; if interested in the Hespasia or her gallant captain, I could not do better than to turn in and make inquiries there.

"When I opened my business with a little gray-headed chap, who was resident agent, I wish you could have seen him jump about six inches off the floor, while the look of astonishment on his face was quite killing. For, as he presently informed me, as luck would have it, I had come asking about a vessel lost many years ago, about which no vestige had ever been discovered, in the very hour that the sole survivor of the luckless Hespasia had been sitting there in the same chair I occupied, and telling the most thrilling tales of his adventures in the deserts of Africa—the most exciting that ever fell from the lips of mortal man."

"That was quite a unique situation—to sit in the same chair and this survivor of the Hespasia wreck had occupied within the hour. How it must have stirred your blood and set your nerves tingling! And then, just to think what rollicking adventures he had to tell of his life in Africa. By the way, haven't we heard something in that line before? I have an indistinct recollection of listening to some very entertaining reminiscences that rivaled the feats of old Munchausen. Perhaps, after all, it was only a dream."

"Plainly, then, you think the boy has been up to his tricks, spinning his yarns to a fresh audience," Artemus remarked.

"I confess that thought came to me."

"Well, it struck me that way—at first."

"Ah! then you found occasion to change your mind?"

"I did."

"And it wasn't the ogre?" breathlessly.

"Not a bit of it."

Then Charlie gave vent to a whistle.

There were two Richmonds in the field.

The man they knew as Capt. Brand had a rival for the honors.

It was growing decidedly interesting, and Charlie Stuart realized that his friend had certainly stumbled upon news of importance.

Here, then, was Mate Ben Hazen, come to the surface after his long exile.

Yes, it was a grand stroke of luck.

They could doubtless easily prevail upon the mate to meet the imposter face to face, and tear away the mask with which he had all this time concealed his identity.

Surely he would be willing to do this for the sake of his old captain's daughter.

No wonder Charlie felt pleased.

"Well," he said, at length, "it begins to look like business, I declare."

"Very much so,' remarked Artemus.

"I can readily see there is some great fun in prospect if we can bring these two wonderful African travelers into contact."

"Oh! glorious!"

"And if we can get the mate to denounce this old ogre, our end is gained."

"Who is to denounce him?"

"Why, Ben Hazen, the mate, of course."

"Ah! where will you find him?"

"I thought—that is, I understood, or, at least, I took it for granted, you had found him."

Artemus slowly shook his head in the most tantalizing manner.

"I never said so."

"Then I jumped at conclusions, and was wrong?"

"You were."

"If Ben Hazen is out of the question, I suppose this is one of the crew who has turned up?"

Artemus lay back in his chair, with thumbs in the armholes of his vest. His attitude was consequential and triumphant; it plainly gave warning that he was about to fire a volley.

"Guess again."

"I am at my wits' ends."

"How about the genuine Simon Pure captain?"

Charlie caught his breath.

"Good Heavens! that would be the most stupendous thing on record — coincidence without a parallel. But see here," as he detected a quizzical gleam in the other's fun-loving eyes, "this is too serious a thing to joke about, you know, my dear fellow."

"You bet it is."

"And you are in dead earnest?"

"Never move so in all my life—[illegible]y heart if it isn't so."

Charlie realized that he could [illegible] him.

"Tell me," he said, eagerly, "were [illegible] incredulous at first?"

"Rather."

"And how did you set about proving matters?"

"I saw only one way—that was to look up this new claimant for the honors."

"You did it?"

"I had to. You see, I couldn't rid myself of the idea that it might after all be Macauley, our ogre, spinning his spider web."

"That would have struck me the first thing."

"Well, with me it was somewhat different, for the case stood out so clearly. You see, he came to the agency in company with the captain of the English steamer that picked him up in a small boat off the coast of Africa—he having at last escaped from the Arabs who held him prisoner so many years.

"This steamer was bound from Cape Town to New York, and had been thrown out of her regular course by a series of terrible southern storms.

"They wanted to put him aboard some vessel bound for London; but, strange to say, spoke none during their subsequent voyage, so that he has been landed here."

"Most remarkable. What a surprise for Arline! I truly hope this papa will prove more acceptable than the ogre has been," said Stuart, reflectively.

"I think he will," remarked Artemus, calmly.

"What grounds have you for believing so?"

"The evidence of my judgment as brought to bear upon [illegible]tter by eyes and ears that are to the average."

"Then you have see[illegible]

The smallest man in the world is Major Gantz, of Fairfield, Iowa. His age is thirty-six years, he weighs 30 pounds and is eighteen inches in height. His parents reside in Fairfield and are of average stature.

Vereschagin, the famous Russian artist, noted for the vividness of his battle scenes, has suffered several injuries to his right hand. A leopard bit off the thumb, a rifle ball struck the middle finger during a battle, and the other fingers were crushed by a sledge accident.

The convicts of Sing Sing prison issue a weekly paper. A recent issue contained the following bit of news: and quaint comment: "Mr. Meredith, the novelist, is no longer able to take long walks in the country, writes a correspondent. Mr. Meredith has our sympathy. We have been thus afflicted for several years."

The oldest man in Michigan died recently in Orville, Saginaw county, at the age of 111 years and four months. His name was Daniel Smith, and he chewed tobacco day and night for 96 years. Intoxicants he never used, saying that he had too high a regard for his stomach to burn it with vile beverages.

Physicians Puzzled.

St. Aubert, Mo., Aug. 4th.—Mr. E. R. Langendorfer of this place suffered very severely with a peculiar case of Kidney Trouble which completely baffled the skill of the local physicians and instead of getting any better he was gradually growing worse. He says: "A friend advised me to take Dodd's Kidney Pills and after I had used two boxes I was entirely cured and have not since had the slightest symptoms of the return of my trouble.

"I had tried all the surrounding physicians but they did me no good and instead of getting better I grew worse till I used Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I can sincerely say to everyone suffering with Kidney Trouble that Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure them for they cured me satisfactorily and completely when all the doctors had failed."

Since the awarding on July 16, of the first special semi-monthly prize in the Auditorium stock contest at Omaha, interest in it has been increasing rapidly. The prize, which was contributed by the employing printers of Omaha, was $160.50 cash and was won by Ed. J. Hamilton of Wilsonville, Neb. The money forming the special semi-monthly prizes is made up of gold, silver, nickel, copper and paper money, and then divided and put into two sacks without being counted. Mr. Hamilton's guess was $133.33, which was the closest to the amount $132.54—in the larger of the two sacks.

August 1 the Commercial prize, contributed by members of the Omaha Commercial club, will be awarded to the person guessing the closest to the amount in the larger of the two sacks into which it has been divided. Each special prize is not less than $50, nor more than $500, and under the plan adopted there is absolutely no one who can tell what amount is in the larger sack until after it is unsealed.

Aside from the special semi-monthly prizes, however, there is a great deal of interest being taken in the Auditorium stock contest. This could hardly fail to be the case when there are 1,001 prizes hung up, headed with the $5,000 cash prize given by the Defiance Starch Co. of Omaha, and the stock tickets are only twenty-five cents. Of course only one person will win the $5,000, and only one person will win a $3,500 house and lot in Omaha, but 999 other persons will also win prizes, every one of which will be worth many times the price of a guess. Persons securing tickets now also have, free, an extra guess on the next special semi-monthly prize.

The regular prizes will be awarded immediately after the election next November, in the order of their value, to the 1,001 persons guessing closest to the total votes cast for all candidates for governor in New York state November 4, 1902. The votes for all candidates at the last five elections for governor, from which estimates of the 1902 vote can be made, were: In 1891, 1,165,085; 1894, 1,275,671; 1896, 1,434,046; 1898, 1,359,190; 1900, 1,556,520. Stock tickets, entitling the holder to one share of common stock in the Omaha Auditorium company, with two guessing blanks, may be obtained at twenty-five cents each by addressing the Omaha Auditorium company, Omaha, Neb. In towns in Nebraska and adjoining states arrangements may be made by responsible persons to represent the Auditorium company.

Des Moines, July 31, 1902.

"There will be a large exhibit of cattle at the state fair," said former Governor S. B. Packard of Marshalltown in an interview. "I am satisfied the exhibit will be larger than it was a year ago. I have received applications for entries from several new herds. All the old herds I expect to see back. The Hereford association will have a fine lot of stock here, I suppose. Secretary Thomas, secretary of the association, will be here this week on Wednesday, I believe, to make arrangements for the sale." Mr. Packard has announced the list of judges in the cattle department, of which he is superintendent. This is the first announcement of the judges that has been made. They will be as follows: Professors C. F. Curtiss, Kennedy and Marshall of Ames; Dr. M. B. Wood of Mankato, Minn., J. B. Imboden of Decatur, Ill.; Thomas Clark of Beecher, Ill. Dr. Wood will probably judge the dairy herds. The judging of cattle will begin Tuesday morning of fair week and will continue all day Tuesday and on Wednesday and Thursday forenoons. Wednesday and Thursday afternoons will be given over to the sale of Herefords under the auspices of the Hereford breeders' national association.

Plans have been completed for seventy-two buildings at the Des Moines army post. These are sufficient in size and number to quarter a full regiment of cavalry. The plans have been approved by the war department and returned to Major Turner. The approval of the plans by the war department is taken to mean that at the next session of congress in the army appropriation bill the secretary of war will make request for a further appropriation for building operations at this point. So far funds have been provided for twenty-seven buildings, enough to accommodate a squadron of cavalry, but the plans for the hospital buildings, which is to be let, call for a structure sufficient to care for the needs of a regimental post. It will be impossible to do more building until congress makes another appropriation. It is probable that the war department next winter will ask for an appropriation sufficient to provide quarters for a second squadron of cavalry. On the basis of estimates made for buildings now under construction, or to be let this year, this will mean a further appropriation of about $300,000 for the post. It is expected that about this amount will be expended each year until the post is fully equipped for the accommodation of a full regiment.

The Rock Island reorganizers have paid the state of Iowa $125,016.20 for the privilege of being an Iowa corporation and doing business in Iowa under Iowa law. The new company is called the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad company. The head office is in Des Moines with branch offices in New York, Chicago and other towns. The shares are each of $100 each, and the capital $125,000,000. The articles of incorporation were filed first with the recorder of Polk county then immediately filed with the secretary of state. The fee for Polk county was small.

J. W. Ragsdale of Iowa, consul general at Tien Tsin, China, has been selected by the United States government as distributing agent for the $25,000,000 which the Chinese government must pay the United States government as idemnity for the recent outbreaks and troubles in that country. Consul Ragsdale has already gone to Pekin to take charge of the work of disbursement, leaving Bert Ragsdale of Des Moines in charge of the United States consulate at Tien Tsin. By the terms of the compact with China that government pays the United States the sum of $25,000,000 idemnity for the recent outbreaks and destruction of American lives and porperty. The principal of the idemnity is to be paid within twenty-five years, and in the meantime the accruing interest is being collected and forwarded to the United States for disbursement among the individual losers in China. It is this work which Consul Ragsdale has been called upon to perform, one of the most important and difficult tasks in the diplomatic service. Consul Ragsdale is well known in Iowa, having lived in Corning for many years and spending considerable time in Des Moines, where his brother lives.

F. H. Hoeppner, a wealthy farmer of Black Hawk county, has filed a bill for divorce from his wife, whom he married April 16. After one month under his roof she packed up and left. He says on the way from the wedding she began to abuse him and has kept it up. She threw pokers, rolling pins and whatever came handy at him and from loss of sleep and in self defense his health was impaired. He asks absolute divorce and such advice as the court is pleased to offer.

Patrick Monehan, who says he came from Des Moines, attempted to commit suicide in the city jail at Waterloo by hanging himself to the top of his cell with a rope made of his overalls. Other inmates were attracted by the noise and called the police just in time to save him. He was arrested for drunkenness. After being chained to the side of the cell he begged piteously for a razor or poison to end his life. He is about 40 years old and above ordinary intelligence. He refuses to tell of his home or relatives and has nothing by which to identify him. He appears to be despondent over some crime or deed. The police are unable to find any facts concerning him. They do not think Des Moines his home.

He—"Have you bought my new book yet?" She—"Yes, and its the prettiest thing on my center-table."

"I've just been reading some statistics of births and deaths. Extraordinary thing! Every time I breathe a man dies." "Great Scott! why don't you chew cloves?"

"I'd just noticed that my new landlady's daughter's hair is red." "Well?" "And then a white automobile suddenly darted around the corner."

Askit—"Who was that girl you introduced me to who uses so much slang?" Tellit—"Oh, she is a friend of mine who is taking a post-graduate course in English at a female seminary."

Marry in haste and repent in the court room.

First Caddie—"I saw ye carrying for the minister yesterday, Donald, what kin' o' ployer is he?" Second Caddie—"Man, he'll never make a gowffer! D'ye ken what he says when he misses the ba'?" First Caddie—"No, what does he say?" Second Caddie (disgustedly)—"Tut, tut."

"What I object to," said the young woman who wants to vote, "is taxation without representation." "If it's all the same to you," said the young man who is too bashful to propose directly, "I should be only too happy to represent your sentiments at the polls at every election."

The police stations in London are not equipped with telephones. Even Scotland Yard, the headquarters of the detective department, is without one.

It is stated that from the mouth to the source of the Rhine, 725 castles, formerly the homes of warlike chiefs, are to be found overlooking its waters.

Doctors' coachmen in Berlin wear white hats. This is to enable the public to promptly recognize a physician's vehicle in case his services are suddenly needed.

A panel of jurors was summoned in Justice Brigham's court, London. Sixty-two of them answered to the name of Clark. A jury of twelve were drawn, and eleven of them were Clark. The twelfth man was G. H. Clarkson.

Black and white austrich plumes come from the male bird, the gray from the female. The feathers are not plucked out as one might imagine but are clipped off with a sharp knife leaving the end of the quill in the flesh where it remains for two or three months until it "dies" when it is pulled out with forceps.

The wails of an unhappy cat aroused the curiosity and sympathy of some workmen engaged in erecting a house at First and Neil avenues, Columbus Ohio. They found her wedged between the plastered walls, and there was evidence to prove that she had been there three weeks. To sustain herself during this period she had eaten her tail off, bit by bit.

A plate of hash proved more deadly to Alfred Hobgood than four years' experience as a soldier in the War of the Rebellion. He was present at the recent Confederate reunion in Dallas, Texas, and regaled himself with a breakfast, the chief dish of which was hash. It chanced to have in it a piece of shoestring with a brass tip at the end. The brass tip caused a fatal attack of blood poisoning.

Shortly after F. C. Burnand, who was recently knighted by King Edward, became editor of Punch, he was urged by his friends to take an appointment to a remunerative sinecure in Australia. It was not to his taste however, for he answered promptly: "A B'urn 'and's worth two in the Bush."

When Senator Mason met Postmaster General Payne the other day the latter said: "Mr. Mason I hear you have a presidential boom." "I am now engaged in running down a rumor to that effect," said the senator, "and if there is anything in it I will know how to conduct myself. My wife and the cook have declared for me, I know, and there may be others."

To the housewife who has not yet become acquainted with the new things of everyday use in the market and who is reasonably satisfied with the old, we would suggest that a trial of Defiance Cold Water Starch be made at once. Not alone because it is guaranteed by the manufacturers to be superior to any other brand, but because each 10c package contains 16 ozs., while all the other kinds contain but 12 ozs. It is safe to say that the lady who once uses Defiance Starch will use no other. Quality and quantity must win.

CONGRESSMAN ALDRICH ENDORSES THE TONIC, PERUNA

Says: "It Will Build Up a Depleted System Rapidly."

Hon. W. F. Aldrich.

Hon. W. F. Aldrich, Congressman from Alabama, writes from Washington, D. C.

"This is to certify that Peruna, manufactured by The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, O., has been used in my family with success. It is a fine tonic and will build up a depleted system rapidly. I can recommend it to those who need a safe vegetable remedy for debility."—W. F. Aldrich.

H. S. Emory, Vice Chancellor and Master of Arms, K. P.'s, of Omaha, Neb., writes from 213 North Sixteenth street, the following words of praise for Peruna as a tonic. He says:

Catarrh of Stomach.

"It is with pleasure I recommend Peruna as a tonic of unusual merit. A large number of prominent members of the different Orders with which I have been connected have been cured by the use of Peruna of cases of catarrh of the stomach and head; also in kidney complaint and weakness of the pelvic organs.

"It tones up the system, aids digestion, induces sleep, and is well worthy the confidence of sufferers of the above complaints."—H. S. Emory.

Nervous Debility.

Everyone who is in the least degree subject to nervousness, sleeplessness, prostration, mental fatigue or nervous debility in any form, finds the hot weather of June, July and August very hard to bear, if not dangerous.

The only safe course to take is to keep the blood pure, digestion good, and sleep regular. No remedy equals, in all respects, Peruna for these purposes. If the system is run down and weakened by catarrh, Peruna renovates and rejuvenates the nerves and brain.

A book on the catarrhal diseases of summer will be mailed to any address, upon request, by the Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

The above testimonials are only two of 50,000 letters received touching the merits of Peruna as a catarrhal tonic. No more useful remedy to tone up the system has ever been devised by the medical profession.

Omaha Auditorium Stock Contest
July 1, 1902, to October 28, 1902.

Tickets Twenty-five Cents
One Thousand and One Prizes

Each Ticket Entitles the Purchaser to One Share of Common Stock in the Omaha Auditorium Company and to Two Chances to Win a Prize.

CAPITAL PRIZE
$5,000.00 IN GOLD Contributed by the Defiance Starch Company of Omaha—Seven Hundred and Three Smaller Cash Prizes, Ranging from $2.50 to $50.00

OTHER PRIZES.—House and lot in Omaha, value, $3,500; Omaha City Lot, $700; Grand Kimball Piano; Chapel Organ; round trip tickets to cities on the Pacific Coast, Gulf of Mexico, the Great Lakes, and the Inland Pleasure Resorts; Sealskin Garments; Buggies, Saddles, Sets of Double and Single Harness, Engines, Guns, Silver and Glass Tableware, and many other useful and ornamental articles.

Six More Semi-Monthly Special Cash Prizes.

Awarding of Regular Prizes.—The $5,000 Capital Prize and 1,000 other Regular Prizes will be Awarded in the order of their Value to the 1,001 Persons making the 1,001 closest estimates of the total number of votes which will be cast for all candidates for governor in New York State, November 4, 1902.

These are the figures for the last five elections and will aid you in making your estimates: 1891, 1,165,085; 1894, 1,275,671; 1896, 1,434,046; 1898, 1,359,190; 1900, 1,556,520. What will the figures be this year?

Awarding of Semi-monthly Special Cash Prizes.—These prizes will each be not less than $50, nor more than $500, and will be paid every two weeks during the progress of the contest. They will be paid to the persons making the closest estimates, during the two weeks preceding each date, of the amount of the bank clearings of the city of Omaha on August 16, September 1, September 16, October 1, October 16, and November 1. These figures of the bank clearings of Omaha on dates named will assist you in making your estimates:

1901: July 1, $1,233,488; July 16, $1,063,599; August 1st, $823,138; August 16th, $1,036,132; September 1st, $1,171,613; September 16th, $1,127,988; October 1st, $955,266; October 16th, $1,030,742; November 1st, $1,205,423.

NOW Is the Time to Send in Your Estimates.—One Person Stands Just as Good a Chance as Any Other Person to Make Prize Winning Estimates. An Estimate Made Now is as Likely to Win $5,000 or One of the Other 1,000 Regular Prizes as One Made in October. For No One Can Tell the Number of Votes Cast Until After They are Counted. Contest Closes October 28.

Some one is going to win $5,000 for twenty-five cents. Why not you? And others are going to win 1,006 other regular and special prizes ranging from $2.50 to $3,500. You may be one of them if you make an estimate.

DON'T FORGET THE SPECIAL CASH PRIZES AWARDED EVERY TWO WEEKS

Such Opportunities are not often offered—a share of stock and two chances to win big prizes for twenty-five cents.

But remember that a dozen hooks will catch more fish than one hook. One ticket and two estimates are good, but a dozen tickets and two dozen estimates are better, and will more likely land one of the big or some of the smaller prizes.

Send in your Quarters and your Estimates—and Better Send Them in Now.

Bert Crawford and his crew of carpenters are this week engaged in remodeling and raising Wm. Schaper's farm residence.

We are told that never before in the history of the county has corn made such rapid progress as during the past three weeks. Prospects are good for a bumper corn crop.

Following are the democratic nominees for the county offices: For supervisor, 3rd district—Andrew Anderson, Goodell. Auditor, Thomas Monehagen, Goodell. Recorder, Miss Kate Donahue, Woden. County attorney, W. H. Hnghes, Garner.

Sunday's Iowa papers reported a bad storm at Algona and south to LuVerne last Saturday morning The small town of Hanna Siding was destroyed and two people there seriously, and perhaps fatally injured. Crops in the path of the storm were severely damaged and corn is laying flat on the ground. The loss to property will reach thousands of dollars.

Three of the members of the Faculty of the School of Music of Nora Springs were invited to take part on the Artists' programs at the Iowa Music Teachers Association in June. This certainly was a very high compliment to the School. It has only been organized a year and yet has been wonderfully successful. The Piano course leading to the degree of A. Mus. is particularly strong. The work in Voice, Elocution, Art, etc., is in the hands of specialists.

Last Sunday at the Germantown German M. E. church, the ladies of the church rendered a very fine program at the morning service, and the Epworth League gave an interesting program in the evening. Both of these programs were followed by an address by Mr. Tsai, of Kinkiang, China, which addresses were very interesting and instructive. He spoke in the morning on the subject "Mission work and foot binding," and used as a text "Our labor is not in vain in the Lord." In the evening the subject of his address was "Religion, Schools and Marriage Customs." Large audiences greetrd each of these talks and all were pleased. The total collection of the day was $16.00. Mr. Tsai was professor in William Nest College in China five years and preached three years. He is now attending the Charles City College and expects to continue there three years more, when he will return to his native land and preach the gospel.

DOINGS IN AND NEAR ELL CENTER

Dished up to Suit all Classes by Our Special Correspondent.

Joe Stork has built an addition onto his granary.

The more - rain – more - rest weather still continues.

Harry Rice and John Christie were Goodell callers last Thursday.

Clarence Pomplun returned to his home near Forest City this week.

Fred Ufford and wife visited friends in Franklin county over Sunday.

B. Richards has rented Edward Haskin's farm for $3.80 per acre.

Frank and Sid. Patterson witnessed the wrestle at Klemme Saturday evening.

Miss Maggie Taylor, of Britt, is visiting at the home of her uncle, Tom Marshall, this week.

Little Charlton Stork is very low at this writing and grave fears are entertained for his recovery.

John Stork has decided to quit farming and has rented his farm and will move to town some time in the future.

This time last year everyone was praying for rain. Now a prayer in the opposite direction would not be a bad thing.

H. H. Burman, E. Braund, Joe and H. Lawhorn and Frank Patterson represented Ell Center at the ball game last Thursday and all pronounced it a No. 1 game.

L. C. Whittaker, of Goodell, was through here last week with Watkins' Remedies. These medicines are supposed to cure all diseases the human race is heir to except a broken neck or heart.

When first he came to see her she showed a timid heart, and even when the lights were low they sat—this—far—apart. But as their love grew warmer they learned the joy and bliss, and knocked out all the spaces and sat upcloselikethis.

White, formerly of Goodell, but now residing at Tonkawa, Oklahoma, recently lost his grain elevator at that place by fire—caused from the exploding of the gasoline engine. Mr. White will be quite a heavy loser although the property was partly insured.—Goodell Globe.

To My Friends.

It is with joy I tell you what Kodol did for me. I was troubled with my stomach for several months. Upon being advised to use Kodol. I did so, and words cannot tell the good it has done me. A neighbor had dyspepsia so that he had tried most everything. I told him to use Kodol. Words of gratitude have come to me from him because I recommended it.—Geo. W. Fry, Viola, Ia. Health and strength of mind and body depedd on the stomach, and normal activity of the digestive organs. Kodol, the great reconstructive tonic, cures all stomach and bowel troubles, indigestion, dyspepsia. Kodol digests any good food you eat. Take a dose after meals. J. L. Harr.

The town of Clear Lake will be the defendant in a $5,000 law suit at the September term of court. Mrs. David Tuttle of that place was severely injured on account of a defective sidewalk, and brings suit for the above amount. The sum it will take to defend this suit would probably have repaired the defection several times, and if Mrs. Tuttle gets a judgment it will probably be for such an amount as would repair the sidewalks in that town for several years. Cases of this nature are very easily won as there is no excuse for poor sidewalks. All towns have full power to repair them and tax the cost up to the adjoining property. It does not pay any town to allow sidewalks to remain in a poor condition.—Britt News.

A Necessary Precaution.

Don't neglect a cold. It is worse than unpleasant. It is dangerous. By using One Minute Cough Cure you can cure it at once. Allays inflamation, clears the head, soothes and strengthens the mucous membrane. Cures cough, croup, throat and lung troubles. Absolutely safe. Acts immediately. Children like it. J. L. Harr.

Put-in-Bay, Ohio.

A good time to go to Put-in-Bay, O. is during the Knights of Columbus Outing held Aug. 15-17, as there will be on sale for this meeting at all C. R. I. & P. ticket offices in this territory round trip excursion tickets at ONE FARE, with good return limit. Apply to C. R. I. & P. agents for particulars. aug17

It Needs a Tonic.

There are times when your liver needs a tonic. Don't give purgatives that gripe and weaken. DeWitt's Little Early Risers expel all poison from the system and act as tonic to the liver. W. Scott, 531 Highland ave. Milton, Pa., says. "I have carried DeWitt's Little Early Risers with me for several years and would not be without them." Small and easy to take. Purely vegetable. They never gripe or distress. J. L. Harr.

A PITTSBURGH FERRY MAID.

Girl of Sixteen Supports Mother, Brother and Sister.

Young in years, but full of vigor and buoyancy of youth, pretty Bertha Walz, a girl of 16, has a career as a ferry maid on the Ohio river that for the novelty of its features is rarely surpassed.

For months the young girl has been the sole support of her mother, younger sister and brother. Week in and week out, unaided and alone, she has plied her big ferry skiff back and forth across the Ohio to secure means for providing for her helpless mother and sister.

Bertha lives with her mother in an old, but neat appearing, houseboat on the banks of the Ohio river, near the Pressed Steel Car company's works, in lower Allegheny, says the Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph. This boat has been her home for the past six years.

The idea of running a regular ferry came to her through the suggestions of mill men, who cross the river at this point to the McKee's Rocks side to and from their work in the big mills.

Partly through the efforts of generous contributors a skiff was procured, and the girl entered upon a new career. She found her task rather arduous at first, and her fair young hands were covered with many a blister at the end of a day's toil. But soon the muscles of her arms bade fair to rival those of the crack oarsmen of a 'versity crew. Now she thinks nothing of rowing six or eight stalwart men over the river on a single trip. Some days she makes as many as 40 trips, and has been known to take in as much as three dollars a day as the result of her toil.

The widespread popularity of her ferry, however, aroused the ire of less favored ferrymen living in shanty boats near by. First, her best skiff was stolen, and later a new one was turned loose on the river. Finally she was not permitted to land her skiff on the McKee's Rocks shore at the large landing, but was made to run her boat in at some obscure point. Considerable trouble arose over the ownership and use of a pair of wooden steps leading down the river embankment to the shore. The climax was reached one night. Richard Griffeths, a ferryman, tried to lay violent hands on her. Only the timely appearance of a mill hand and the presence of her faithful dog, which usually accompanies her for protection, saved her from serious injury at his hands. As a result suit was promptly entered against Griffeths on a charge of disorderly conduct before Alderman Lynch. At the hearing Griffeths was fined ten dollars and costs or 20 days in jail. The steps claimed by Griffeths as personal property were declared to be government property, and it was decreed that the fair prosecutor was fully entitled to their use.

His Sight Threatened.

"While picnicking last month my 11-year-old boy was poisoned by some weed or plant," says W. H. Dibble, of Sioux City, Ia. "He rubbed the poison off his hands into his eyes and for a while we were afraid he would lose his sight. Finally a neighbor recommended DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve The first application helped him and in a few days he was as well as ever." For skin diseases, cuts, burns, scalds, wounds, insect bites, DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is sure cure. Relieves piles at once. Beware of counterfeits. J. L. Harr.

Reduced Rates for Laborers

For harvest hands and laborers, the M. & St. L. R. R. will sell tickets to points in Minnesota and North and South Dakota at greatly reduced one-way rates to and including August 19, 1902. See your local ticket agent.

Homeseekers Excursions.

Homeseeker's tickets to nearly all points on sale at low rates by Chicago Great Western Ry. on first and third Tuesday of each month, June to October inclusive. For particulars apply to any Great Western agent, or J. P Elmer, G. P. A., Chicago, Ill. Oct20

Look Pleasant, Please

Photographer C. C. Harlan, Eaton, O., can do so now, though for years he couldn't, because he suffered untold agony from the worst form of indigestion. All physicians and medicines failed to help him till he tried Electric Bitters, which worked such wonders for him that he declares they are a godsend to sufferers from dyspepsia and stomach troubles. Unrivalled for diseases of the stomach, liver and kidneys, they build up and give new life to the whole system. Try them. Only 50c. Guaranteed by J. L. Harr, druggist.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, August 18, 1902.

Dr. G. A. Newman of the state G. A. R. has received a general order from the national commander at Minneapolis. One of the matters touched on in the order is the announcement of the appointment of a committee to represent the national G. A. R. in the organization of the department of history of the Memorial university of the S. of V. at Mason City. The committee consists of James O. Pierce of Minneapolis, L. B. Raymond of Hampton, Governor S. R. Van Sant of St. Paul, T. D. Wallace of Chicago and William H. Armstrong of Indianapolis. Announcement is made that the university will be opened September 10 with from 100 to 200 students. The order says it is hoped the president of the United States will be present.

A number of Iowa farmers are making an effort to hold the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad responsible for damage resulting from the unusually heavy rains of the past few weeks, and the decisions in the test cases to be brought will be of great interest and importance. The contention of the farmers is that the railroad has not provided culverts sufficiently large to carry off the floods following up the heavy rains, and as a result the embankments of the company have held back the water, flooded the fields and ruined the crops. It will be extremely difficult to fix a standard size of openings for culverts in various locations and circumstances, and the claim agents of the Iowa roads await with much interest the finding of the courts.

Tax ferrets in Clayton county have been busy during the past few months and as a consequence have in hand for the state treasury collections that amount to $2,837.03. This is the state's share of the collections made in Clayton county by the tax ferrets and is a wholly unexpected contribution to the general revenue, as welcome as unexpected. The auditor's office has been apprised of the collections which will be turned over in cash in the near future.

The state board of control has reappointed Superintendent H. W. Rothert as the head of the school for the deaf at Council Bluffs. The new term of Superintendent Rothert begins Aug. 30 and will extend over a period of four years. The board has also reappointed Dr. Max E. Witte as superintendent of the Clarinda hospital, his term being four years and beginning September 30.

The board of control has disposed of the question of insane infants as far as the board is able to do so. Recently a board of insanity in Muscatine county declared one Homer D. Johnson, a baby of 9 years, to be insane and ordered him committed to the hospital at Mt. Pleasant. The superintendent of the hospital refused to receive the child when it was taken to the hospital and told the people from Muscatine county that he had no provisions for taking care of infants in that hospital. The child was taken back to Muscatine and later the board received a letter from the county authorities of Muscatine county reciting the facts and asking what would be necessary to secure the admission of the insane infant to the state hospital for insane at Mt. Pleasant. The letter stated that the child was regularly declared insane by a competent board and was properly committed to the hospital. The board replied to the letter stating that the law makes no distinction as to the age of the persons who may be admitted to the hospitals, and if an infant is committed properly the state must care for it the same as for an adult. But the board suggested to the Muscatine authorities that for a child of four years its home is a better place than a state hospital where there can be no provision for a kindergarten department.

Attorney General Mullan has rendered an opinion in which he holds that a district judge, appointed to serve out the unexpired term of a judge who was elected before the increase in salaries took effect, cannot have the benefit of the increase in salary during the time he serves as the appointee of the governor. The state auditor asked for the opinion in the case of Judge George W. Dyer, who was recently appointed by Governor Cummins to succeed Wm. S. Kenyon of Fort Dodge, who resigned from the bench in the Eleventh judicial district.

Gladstone once made a prophecy about the industrial supremacy of the United States that he almost lived to see fulfilled. Writing twenty-five years ago, the St. James Gazette says, of the "menace which, in the prospective development of her resources America offers to the commercial preeminence of England," the "grand old man" predicted that America and America alone, "can, and probably will, wrest from us that commercial supremacy. We have no title, I have no inclination, to murmur at the prospect. If she acquires it, she will make the acquisition by the right of the strongest; but, in this instance, the strongest means the best. She will probably became what we are now, the head servant in the great household of the world, the employer of all employed; because her service will be the most and ablest. We have no more title against her than Venice, or Genoa, or Holland has had against us."

How True?

"Say Jinks, Where 's that fine gold watch you used to sport? I see now you're wearing a plain affair in a nickle-plated case."

"Well, you know circumstances alter cases."

A Safeguard.

"Women are certainly queer creatures," remarked an old physician.

"What is it now," asked the druggist.

"Why," answered the old pill dispenser, "I just received a postal card from a woman patient marked 'Personal.'"

ARMY OF THE PHILIPPINES

Veterans Hold Annual Encampment at Council Bluffs—Welcomed in an Address By Governor Cummins—Strong Sentiment for General Smith.

Council Bluffs, Aug. 14.—The third annual reunion of the Society of the Army of the Philippines opened in this city yesterday amid circumstances the most auspicious.

The first meeting of the society was held at 1:30 o'clock in the Royal Arcanum hall. The gathering was called to order by Brigadier General Irving Hale of Denver, president of the national society. The business of the afternoon was chiefly routine. The reports of the president and other officers were made. These were significant for the excellent showing made as to the growth of the society. Since last year, Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota and Colorado have organized state societies. Wyoming will soon organize and organizations are being perfected in New York, Tennessee and Pennsylvania. Members are being added whose locations are in Cuba, Porto Rico, the Philippines and Alaska. A rapidly growing feeling of friendliness toward the organization is being manifested in the regular army.

A number of distinguished officers are among the numbers assembled. One of the first to arrive was General Charles King, the novelist. While here, General King is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest E. Hart. General Hale was an early arrival.

Governor Cummins, in the presence of a magnificent assemblage last night, welcomed the National Society Army of the Philippines to the state. The governor was given a most cordial reception. He spoke eloquently of the work of the army and declared the American people trusted it to maintain the honor of the republic. "We would have been satisfied with the army's conduct," he said, "if it had found it necessary to leave nothing standing in the Philippines, but the palms to salute the breezes of the Pacific."

Other addresses were by Generals Hale, King, Frost and Metcalfe and Governor Savage of Nebraska. Captain Culver, a personal friend of General Smith, brought a personal greeting from him. The demonstration in Smith's favor is such that it is likely to break out in the resolutions in strong language.

Council Bluffs, Aug. 15.—The feature of the second day of the reunion of the Society of the Army of the Philippines, was the military parade which occurred during the forenoon.

The parade was headed by Governors Cummins and Savage and their staffs, and was participated in by regular army troops from Fort Crook, the Nebraska and Iowa national guard, high school cadets from this city and Omaha and the veterans of the Philippine war. The marchers were reviewed by the two governors and the two generals, Hale and King. The general society met during the afternoon, at which was taken up the routine business begun Wednesday.

Yesterday's program of the reunion closed with a sham battle at Lake Manawa, in which a battalion of the Twenty-second infantry and several guard companies took part. Fully 25,000 people from Council Bluffs and Omaha witnessed the event.

Council Bluffs, Aug. 15.—The report of the nominating committee, naming the officers for the ensuing year, was unanimously adopted as follows:

President—General Irving Hale, Denver.

First Vice President—Lieutenant Donald MacRae, Council Bluffs.

Second Vice President—Brevet Brigadier General Alfred S. Frost, Evanston, Ill.

Third Vice President—Brigadier General Chas. King, Milwaukee.

Fourth Vice President—Colonel J. W. Pope, Colorado.

Fifth Vice President—Brevet Brigadier General Wilder S. Metcalf, Lawrence, Kas.

Sixth Vice President—Captain H. A. Crow, Connellsville, Pa.

Secretary—F. M. Schutte, St. Paul.

Treasurer—C. B. Lewis, Colorado.

Chaplain—Rev. Charles Mailley, Nebraska.

St. Paul was chosen as the place for next year's meeting and the executive committee was given authority to change the date of the reunion for next year, if deemed advisable, to the first Tuesday in September. After passing a resolution of thanks to the local committees, municipal officers and citizens, the convention adjourned sine die.

FOR A BIG CANAL.

Board of Engineers Meets to Consider New Ship Canal.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—The first step toward the realization of the long talked of ship canal from Chicago to St. Louis was taken yesterday, when the board of army engineers appointed by the federal government to conduct a survey of the route held its first meeting. Among those present at the meeting were Lieutenant Colonel Charles J. Allen, who arrived in Chicago from Washington today, and Major Thomas L. Casey of St. Louis.

The discussion at yesterday's session showed that the members of the board consider the canal feasible. Its opinions cannot be made public, however, until a formal report is presented to congress.

The route decided upon is from Lockport by way of the Des Plaines and Illinois rivers to the mouth of the latter stream and thence down the Mississippi to St. Louis. A continuous fourteen-foot channel the entire route is the end sought. This will permit of the passage of large freighters to St. Louis.

"The report will not be ready for the next session of congress," said Lieutenant Colonel Oswald H. Ernest of Chicago, who presided over the meeting, "but it will be ready for the session of next year."

Boy Mutilated by Dog.

Fort Dodge, Aug. 15.—The little son of LeRoy Pooler, living in the country near Fort Dodge, was terribly bitten by a violent dog. The animal attacked the little fellow, threw him down and lacerated his face terribly before the cries of the victim brought rescue. It is not known whether or not the dog was mad

A CHANGE IN PLANS.

Constructon Plans for Ames Modified as a Result of Inspection.

Des Moines, Aug. 16.—W. T. Proudfoot, of Proudfoot & Bird, architects for the proposed new $300,000 building for the State Agricultural college at Ames, arrived home yesterday from a tour of inspection of college buildings he has been making with Professors Curtiss and Dickinson of the college.

"While we were away," said Mr. Proudfoot, "we visited some of the best institutions in America. We went through the buildings of the Dominion Agricultural schools at Guelph, Ontario, those of the Wisconsin school at Madison, the Chicago university buildings, the Illinois agricultural school, the buildings of Toronto university and those of Washington university in St. Louis. We have not fully decided upon the plan for the building, but I believe there will be some changes from those mapped out before we went away.

"It was intended originally to erect one big building to cost $300,000, to be known as the main building, and to replace the structure damaged by fire two years ago and the destruction of which was completed yesterday morning. The ground plan has been mapped out. This was to be a stone building 300 by 160 feet and four stories high, and was to contain the administration offices, and the agricultural, botanical, mathematical and language departments. The probabilities now are that two buildings will be erected instead of one. It is our idea that the agricultural department, which would have occupied the major portion of the space in the proposed building, is large enough to occupy a building by itself. It is likely a building to be known as the agricultural building will be erected, and that it will be large enough to provide for future growth. Until all of it is needed for this department the surplus space would be used for the administration offices. Another building for the departments of language, botany and mathematics will in all probability be built at this time."

COLLEGE BUILDING BURNED.

South Wing of Agricultural College Destroyed.

Ames, Aug. 15.—The south wing of the old Main building at the Iowa State College of Agriculture and Mechanical Arts was completely destroyed by fire at an early hour yesterday morning. The fire razed to the ground all that was left of the Main building by the disastrous fire of December, 1900. The furniture and the valuable botanical collection and equipment were saved.

The building had already been condemned by the state architect and was to have been torn down soon to be replaced by the splendid new Main building to be erected. The loss, aside from the building will not be over $2,000. The loss to the building can hardly be estimated, because the trustees did not consider it a valuable piece of property, as it was soon to have been wrecked. Perhaps $5,000 would cover the loss to the structure itself.

The fire was discovered at 4 o'clock by the night watchman while making his usual rounds. He at once turned in an alarm and the college fire department and the few students in the buildings and members of the faculty, assistants and helpers at the college and others turned out to the rescue. The flames had such a start, however, that it was soon seen that it would be impossible to save the structure, and every energy was bent toward saving the valuable contents, which includes the great botanical collection and equipment, worth several thousands of dollars, and the furniture in the offices and recitation rooms.

The fire started in the freight elevator shaft in the rear of the south side of the building, and ascended the shaft to the top of the three stories in less than half an hour after it was discovered. Its origin is a mystery, as there were no fires in the building in vacation time. The boiler house, some little distance to the rear of the building, was saved.

The fire was the third disastrous fire at the college within the last 20 months. In December, 1900, the major portion of the main building was destroyed, the loss being in the neighborhood of $100,000. About a year ago the fine large barn of the experimental station was burned, entailing a loss of about $10,000, and now the remaining portion of the largest building on the campus has been wiped out, with a loss of from $7,000 to $10,000. There was no insurance on any of these buildings, the board of control believing that the state could better afford to stand its own loss than to pay the premiums on the amounts of insurance necessary.

RIOT AMONG MINERS.

Deputies Fire Upon Strikers Who Attempt to Enter a Barricade.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Aug. 15.—A riot occurred at the Warnke washery yesterday. A number of strikers attempted to enter the barricade where the sheriff's deputies were standing. One of the deputies fired into the crowd and shot a Slav in the leg. At the sight of blood the crowd of men and boys retreated. The deputies were prepared to fire a volley when the barricade was cleared of all intruders. All is quiet now.

The man who was shot was removed to a house nearby and given medical attention. The physician in attendance said the wound was not a serious one. Two other men had close calls, bullets passing through their coats. The deputies on guard at the mines explained they had been annoyed all morning by stone throwing and one of their number was struck on the head by a rock. They were tempted then to fire a volley at the crowd on the outside of the barricade.

MR. AND MRS. FAIR KILLED.

Their Fast Automobile Ran Into a Tree Near Everaux.

Evereux, France, Aug. 15.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fair, Americans, were returning to Paris from Trouville yesterday when their automobile swerved and crashed into a tree fifteen miles from here. Both were killed. The chauffeur became insane as a consequence of the shock.

Mr. and Mrs. Fair had been staying at Trouville during racing week. They had a very fast 45-horse power automobile, which attracted considerable attention and with which they were highly pleased. Mr. Fair had been from Trouville to Paris and back again in one day on the machine.

San Francisco, Aug. 15.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fair left San Francisco in the latter part of May last for a trip to Europe. Charles Fair was the son of the late Senator Fair and was one of the heirs to the immense estate of the late Senator Fair.

TO BE GREATEST IOWA STATE FAIR

Preparations for Show Now Practically Complete---Everything Ready.

THE FINE CATTLE EXHIBIT.

More Than 750 Entries Expected. 100 More Than at Chicago's Winter Show---Indications Are That This Will Be the Greatest Fair of Recent Years.

The state fair will open Friday of this week, and with but a few days to elapse before the opening, the preparations for the event are for the most part completed, and the outlook for a splendid exhibition was never better. Among the great features of the fair this year will be the stock show, the machinery display, a series of races that promise to be unusually speedy, the attractions furnished by the Pain company, including "The Last Days of Pompeii," and the programmes of old soldiers' day and of the dedication of the stock pavilion.

The cattle show this year will undoubtedly be the finest ever seen in Iowa. It will eclipse the exhibition of a year ago, which up to that time was a record breaker and was compared to the great exhibitions of Chicago and Kansas City. It is not yet possible to give a complete list of the entries in the cattle department. There will be about 750 entries, 100 more than at the International Show at Chicago. The Hereford and Shorthorn breeds will be especially numerous. There will also be a remarkable showing of Galloways. "The Galloway showing at the fair this year," said Secretary Simpson "will be the biggest exhibition of Galloways ever seen in this country. I am not giving this on my own judgment alone, but I am so informed by leading stockmen."

The various improvements at the fair grounds have been practically completed. The roof is now on the stock pavilion, the seating is completed, the windows are in, and all that remains to be done is to finish the putting of tan bark on the arena and to decorate the building for the dedication. Flags and bunting in abundance have been secured for this occasion. The new cattle barn is entirely finished. The grounds have been cleaned up and cleared of all rubbish. They are in especially fine condition this year, owing to the abundant rains, and present noting of that dried, parched appearance that so seriously marred the beauty and attractiveness of the place a year ago.

Secretary Simpson is enthusiastic over the entries for the races. The list of good trotters and pacers entered is a good one. It includes William Mack, who last week made a mile in 2:07¾, and a number of other horses with excellent records.

HIGHWAYMEN IN TROUBLE.

Attempt to Hold Up a Train, But Get Arrested.

Waterloo, Aug. 16.—A bold attempt at a hold-up on a Rock Island train occurred here yesterday morning. The passenger train from the south was about nine miles from the city when two strange men made their appearance and compelled the train to stop. Their plan was evidently to bring the train to a stop and then go through the train from end to end and secure all valuables which the passengers were terrified so they could not resist. But the trainmen were too quick for them and the would-be desperadoes failed to board the train until they were placed under arrest and disarmed. Both of them are held for trial. They are strangers and have refused to talk of their plans.

KOSKUBA UNDER ARREST.

He Is Charged With Attempting the Life of William Brand.

Marshalltown, Aug. 15.—Because William Brand, a farmer living east of Ferguson, would not assist Joseph Koskuba to search for his missing son, Koskuba attempted Brand's life by firing at him point blank the charge of an old shotgun. Koskuba's aim was not good and Brand escaped without injury. Koskuba was arrested and brought to the city. He was arraigned before Justice B. L. Burritt, charged with assault with intent to commit murder. He pleaded not guilty. The amount of bonds was fixed at $3,000 and pending the proper signatures Koskuba will remain in jail.

BAD GANG BROKEN UP.

Two Men Caught Robbing a House at Mt. Pleasant.

Burlington, Aug. 15.—Burlington and Mt. Pleasant police have succeeded in rounding up what is thought to be a notorious gang of thieves who have been operating in this part of the state recently. The Mt. Pleasant police captured two of the men in the act of robbing a house there. After an exchange of shots the third member of the gang escaped, came to Burlington and was captured here. A woman with him was also taken into custody. It develops that the whole gang had been staying here this week, making trips to surrounding towns. The men gave their names as Housted, McGuire and Griffith. There is no question but what the capture is an important one.

EXPOSED BIG POLICE SCANDAL

City Officials at Minneapolis Arraigned for Conspiracy.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 14.—Ex-Chief of Police Fred W. Ames, ex-Detective Chris. Norbeck and Irwin A Gardner have been arraigned on a blanket indictment charging conspiracy. Joseph Cohen and Mayor A. A Ames are away and could not be arraigned. The first indictment did not include Norbeck or Gardner, but was against Ames and Cohen, charging them with conspiracy for having agreed to commit the crime of extortion from persons keeping unlawful resorts within the city.

The next indictment embraced the names of Mayor A. A. Ames, Fred Ames, Norbeck and Gardner. The date of this conspiracy was fixed as Oct. 1, 1901, at which time the persons named are accused of having conspired to commit the crimes of extortion and bribery.

It is claimed that there were thirty five women who were to pay between $15 and $30 per month for protection.

A WARRIOR BOLD.

By ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE,

Author of "Little Miss Millions," "The Spider's Web," "Dr. Jack's Widow," "Miss Caprice," etc.

Copyright, 1901, Street and Smith, New York.

"We must have another duel, that's all. Perhaps a better and more generous lover will appear the next time—one who will appreciate little favors at their true value. You can consider yourself dismissed," with a wave of the hand that should have struck dumb terror into the heart the other, but which, on the contrary, only excited his secret mirth.

"Thanks, but I shall take my discharge only from the proper authority, and in this case that does not happen to be—ahem!—Capt. Brand."

"Very good. Remember, I am her father, and the rightful custodia of our family honor. Perhaps I may resort to other and more drastic measures should you continue to force your unwelcome attentions upon my daughter."

"You would find me ready and willing to give you back as good as you send, sir."

"Why, you young scamp, I could break every bone in your body, if I chose," almost frothing at the mouth with rage.

"Better not try it, captain. In New York state they electrocute for murder, and it's a worse fate than hanging, which you know has terrors enough never to be forgotten."

Charlie, acting upon the spur of the moment, could not help giving him this little thrust.

It was a keen one.

The other's jaw dropped, his eyes momentarily rolled in a spasm of agony, and the sweat seemed to break out upon his brow.

Charlie saw and was satisfied.

He had given the conscienceless wretch a body-blow in return for his vile threats.

Capt. Brand's spasm lasted but a brief space of time, and then he recovered his self-possession.

There was a peculiarity about the captain that seemed very marked—when in a rage his eyes became quite bloodshot, and glowed like the orbs of a hyena upon the deserts of which he loved to talk.

And just now they were fiery, indeed.

The look he gave Stuart had murder in it, though Charlie showed no sign of alarm.

Besides, Charlie possessed the idea that he could hold his own at any time against the fellow. True, he was smaller than the captain, but a life devoted to occasional dissipation must have sapped some of the astonishing powers which a generous nature had originally bestowed upon the worthy man of many faces.

But Capt. Brand restrained himself—reason had not quite deserted him.

He smiled grimly, and there was a world of meaning in his sardonic look.

"Very good, my hearty! You have chosen to throw down the glove, and from this hour it's war to the knife between us. You may live to rue day you made an enemy out of who held out the olive branch. Depend upon it, Arline Brand is not for you. A fond parent must guard interests of his sweet child. Go your way, young sir; and when next we meet it will be as foes to the death. I wash my hands of you."

CHAPTER XIII.

The Fateful Hour.

Charlie looked after the retreating figure of Capt. Brand, and was in doubt whether to take him seriously or consider his threat a huge joke, but soon resolved to dismiss from his mind Capt. Brand and all he typified, and seek repose.

He gained the sanctity of his room, and, lighting the gas, sat down to have a last deliberation ere retiring.

All seemed capable of running in a smooth groove, but "the best laid schemes of mice and men gang aft agley," Bobby Burns tells us, and who has not found it true in his own experience?

Charlie retired. Whether he kept soundly or not concerns us little, but under the circumstances it is highly probable that his slumber was very refreshing.

There was too great a load on his mind.

He felt very much as a man might who stands upon the brink of precipice.

Success or failure—his whole future depended upon one little word—was balanced in the hollow of a girl's hand.

Charlie's previous bitter experience had caused him to feel more or less caution, with a shade of distrust toward the gentle sex, and against this he had to fight.

Could he have known what lay before him, under what fearful conditions he was fated to win his sweetheart, even his bold warrior spirit might have quailed a little.

It is just as well perhaps, that these things are mercifully hidden from our view—just as well that we need only grapple with each difficulty as it appears in view, instead of crossing bridges before we come to them.

The day dawned.

There was more or less a bustle in the air.

New York contains more sons of Erin than probably any Irish city outside of Dublin.

And these patriotic sons never neglect to fittingly celebrate St. Patrick's day, no matter what the weather may be.

Charlie felt he must have something to distract his attention. Artemus was not in sight, the day paper had been exhausted, and as a last resort he sauntered out to watch the crowds.

Never once did he wander far from the hotel, which fact, later on, he was inclined to believe was a special dispensation of Providence.

The magnet was the thing that held him.

He smoked and waited, and so the time dragged by until the hour of fate arrived.

Charlie, better to see and be out of the anticipated jam, had mounted a convenient carriage-stone standing in front of a dwelling house half a block from the hotel.

Great as was the excitement around him, it seemed to be doubly intensified further along the line of march, especially in front of the hotel.

He saw the procession break at this point—melt away as it were.

Men ran toward the hotel in squads, waving their arms wildly.

Was it an opportunity to quench the thirst that frequently burns Irish throats on this glorious holiday?

Charlie knew more than of yore all about the battle of the Boyne, and how an orange flag arouses the hatred of a red. St. Patrick's day parader even as the red flag stirs the maddened bull to frenzy.

Had some bold and incautious soul dared to invite imprecation by thus flaunting in their faces the color they despised?

He supposed this must be the case. To his surprise, however, the excitement spread—the crowd pressed forward—mounted officers could not, gaping, [illegible]

[illegible] went, and appealed frantically to [illegible] cool-headed man beseeching him, for heaven's sake, to tell them where the stairs could be found.

Nor did he fail to direct them, one by one, even while he pushed on to the next flight.

Up, up, he went, still finding [illegible] circling along the halls, through which women staggered, shrieking their appalling distress.

It was a terrifying picture.

There were comical elements injected into it, of course, but no one had the heart to laugh.

Charlie knew in his heart a dreadful calamity was impending—nothing short of a miracle could save the great structure now, and the days of miracles appear to be [illegible]

Perhaps scores [illegible] would be sacrificed [illegible] fire—mostly hotel employes or guests [illegible] ing the parade from windows.

The mere fact [illegible] passed through [illegible] open windows [illegible]

But as yet he had not found the one he sought.

But as yet he had not found [illegible]

Even in that smoke-laden atmosphere he knew he could not see her figure, while one note from her voice must have thrilled him through and through.

Lumberman's Business

[illegible] your wants in the lumber line, give us a want and when you want it. Now we try to do it we can do this in every instance for stock we have broken and lumber [illegible] hard to get. But we do claim we can come nearer—the [illegible] than any one else in the county. This certificate [illegible] soul was [illegible] structure, perhaps [illegible] to be a greater [illegible] under when the influence of an opium [illegible] he had a wakeful night with an aching [illegible]

At last his blood seemed congealed [illegible]

Charlie did not waste time in reflecting [illegible]

It was worth more than money now with all the world to him.

He had leaped to the pavement like a greyhound, and dashed toward the [illegible] in great bounds.

Some men would have lost their wits, but it seemed that the greater the emergency the keener became his mind [illegible]

[illegible] as he ran and elbowed his way through the excited crowd with irresistible force, he was mapping out a line of campaign.

Finally there seems no limit to the human mind—its capacity is astonishing—it rises to meet the emergency regardless of what is needed.

Now, even when thus fighting his way through the crowd, Charlie saw the hopelessness of attempting to reach the main entrance on the avenue.

The space for half a block was densely packed with a whooping mass of humanity, partly imbued with the finger curiosity that always distinguishes crowds the world over, and at the same time a chivalrous desire to be of use somehow.

If he desired to reach that door he must perforce walk over the heads of the packed crowd.

A better plan suggested itself.

He remembered a side entrance which would admit him much more easily.

Now he was at the corner.

He took one look up and around.

The picture was impressed upon the tablets of his memory forever.

No longer were handkerchiefs and green ribbons waving from the numerous windows of the hotel— instead, panic-stricken girls threw out their arms appealingly and shrieked in terror.

The wand of an evil magician had touched the scene, and transformed it in a twinkling.

Smoke already oozed from several openings, proving to Charlie that the hopes of the fire being trifling were groundless.

It was most serious.

The holocaust of the Paris Charite Bazar was about to be repeated in New York; and that St. Patrick's day would be marked as the most grewsome Gotham had ever known.

Charlie now had a better chance to push ahead.

Already he feared he had delayed too long.

There were many people and much excitement in the side street, but it was of course not to be compared with the avenue where the crowds had gathered to witness the parade.

Straight to the door [illegible] dashed.

A man stood there endeavoring to keep out those who had no business inside, for it is well known that daring thieves will take advantage of such occasions to ply their dangerous trade, even if they do not find times even create the opportunity.

Ten men could not have kept our Charlie from pushing in.

He shouted that he was a guest, and then rushed inside; not until the man, after one look at his [illegible]gard face, attempt to say him nay.

Charlie avoided the [illegible] where men swarmed, and orders were shouted that could never be obeyed.

His business was aloft.

She was there exposed to frightful death, and he felt that he lived but to save her!

So up he bounded, three steps at a time.

One thing he must remember—the Windsor was famous as a caravansary where a stranger could easily lose himself in the mazes.

To do so now would be fatal to all his hopes.

He found smoke everywhere, and even fancied he could hear the crackling of flames, though the place was in such a turmoil he could not be sure of this.

He also met numerous persons, flying this way and that, armed with fear.

Some hardly knew [illegible] they

The Talk of Children.

It has been said that children speak the best English in the world, that their idea is expressed in the fewest words and to the point.

Mr. Andrew Simonds, of Chatham, is convinced that their power of vernacular are superior to his own for intelligible description.

He was one day trying to amuse his little girl, nearly 3 years old, by telling her stories of the circus, her love of horses and was particularly impressed by the feats of the bare riders.

"Now," he said, taking a chair as illustration, "this is the ring. A man comes in on him and rides around the ring standing on the back of any saddle or bridle. Then he rides another horse comes in (putting another chair in front), and the man rides him first in the same way, until there are four horses, and he rides them all round the ring at the same time. And a row of four chairs represent the four horses. Now, what fine?"

The little one looked up grave, her eyes full of the doubt and credulity that so often puzzles man.

"Yes—he had many legs, man."

"And I had to go all over the ring again, said Mr. Simonds.

Human Pack Horses in Mexico.

A striking feature of these towns is the number of human "beasts of burden" you meet. The roads are so bad that there is very considerable trouble in conveying goods of any kind, and both to the goods and the packer that carries them; consequently large numbers of Indians make a living by carrying. The Mexican Indian straps his load on his back, slung by a broad leather belt across the forehead, while all his limbs are perfectly free. Each carries a long, light stick, like a miniature penstock, to steady himself in climbing down steep places or in crossing streams. These men will, in fine weather, carry a load from 100 to 150 pounds over the worst of roads a distance of twenty to twenty-five miles a day. They wear no clothes except a pair of cotton breeches, reaching half way up the thighs, and sandals on the feet; sometimes a man carries a blanket to roll himself up in at night. They eat very little, their only food being posole (boiled maize ground and mixed with water and then rolled into a ball and eaten moist). This they break into small pieces of water, mix up well to the consistency of thin gruel, and drink. Sometimes their only food consists of this posole and tortillas. The power of endurance displayed by these carriers is wonderful.

Ancient Iberian Temple.

Dr. Sieglin, professor of ancient history at the University of Berlin, has discovered during his recent visit in southern Spain what is believed to be the oldest temple of the ancient Iberians, at the confluence of the rivers Odial and Rio Tinto, near Huelva. The temple was dedicated to the goddess of the Lower World, and was connected with two caves, which are filled with debris.

True Greatness.

True greatness, first of all, is a thing of the heart. It is all a matter of robust and generous sympathy. It is neither behind its age nor too much before it. It is up with its time, not ahead of it only just so far as is profitable to lead its march. It is not a slumber, for activity is a necessity of its existence. It is no reservoir, but a fountain.—Roswell D. Hitchcock.

"I SUFFERED TERRIBLY WITH FEMALE WEAKNESS;"

SAYS MRS. ESTHER M. MILNER.

"I Had the Headache Continually---Could Not Do My Work---Pe-ru-na Cured."

Mrs. Esther M. Milner, DeGraff, Ohio, writes:

"I was a terrible sufferer from female weakness and had the headache continually. I was not able to do my housework for my husband and myself. I wrote you and described my condition as near as possible. You recommended Peruna. I took four bottles and was completely cured. I think Peruna a wonderful medicine and have recommended it to my friends with best results." ---Mrs. E. M. Milner.

Miss Mamie Groth, Platteville, Wis., writes: "Accept a grateful girl's thanks for the wonderful help I have received through the use of Peruna. Although I looked well and strong I have for several years suffered with frequent backache and would for several days have splitting headaches. I did not wish to fill my system with poisonous drugs, and so when several of my friends advised me to take Peruna, I asked my physician what he thought of it. He recommended it and so I took it and am entirely without pain of any kind now." —Miss Mamie Groth.

Dr. S. B. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, has had over fifty years experience in the treatment of female catarrhal diseases. He advises women free of charge. If you are suffering from any female derangement write him a description of your symptoms and he will give you the benefit of his experience in the treatment of women's diseases.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

ALARM IS FELT BY FOREIGNERS

Insurgents Continue Their Pillaging of the City of Barcelona.

QUIET HAS BEEN RESTORED

The State Department Does Not Think Foreign Interests Are Being Injured—The Cincinnati Is Now in the Harbor at Barcelona.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Under date of Wednesday, the 13th, Minister Bowen at Caracas, reports to the state department that the situation there is very critical. At the time of filing his dispatch he had heard nothing from the Cincinnati or the Marietta. He says the sacking of Barcelona continues and that much valuable property is being destroyed.

At the navy department a cablegram has been received from Commander McLean reporting the arrival of the Cincinnati at Barcelona. The Marietta is at Port of Spain, Trinidad, and is subject to the orders of Commander McLean.

Commander McLean's dispatch to the department was in part, as follows:

"Barcelona occupied by revolutionists. They have imprisoned all civil Venezuelan officials and military officers are in possession of entire district. Some pillaging done, but everything now quiet. Twenty-nine business houses sacked; also fifteen private dwellings."

The navy department also received a cablegram from Commander McCrea of theMachias, dated St. Hatien, Wednesday, announcing that the blockade established by Admiral Killick was admitted to be ineffectual and had been abandoned.

The fact that the navy department received the above dispatch direct from Commander McLean, at Barcelona, shows that Minister Bowen's dispatch of yesterday from Caracas saying that the Barcelona cable had been cut was incorrect. The presumption at the naval department is that the revolutionists who are in control at Barcelona refused to allow messages to go through to Caracas, where Castro has his headquarters and that this accounted for the report from the Venezuelan capital that the Barcelona cable had been severed.

The naval department officials cannot conceive that Commander McLean would have failed to report so important a fact, if they had been tampered with. They are inclined to think after studying Commander McLean's report that the revolutionists sacking the town seized what they could lay their hands on, but were very careful not to disturb the interests of Americans or others whose governments might make trouble for them. Minister Bowen in the dispatch, the contents of which the state department made public today, says he is advised by the United States consul at Barcelona that the revolutionists are sacking that town and searching private houses. They are demanding money from foreigners in exchange for guarantee of safety, lives and property."

The dispatch from Commander McLean was sent since that of Minister Bowen.

MUST BE NO EXTORTION.

China Warns Viceroys Not to Fill Their Own Pockets.

Washington, Aug. 16.—Minister Conger at Pekin has transmitted to the state department the imperial decree concerning the raising of funds in the several provinces for the payment of indemnity exacted by the powers as a result of the Boxer uprising. The decree directs that there shall be no extortion and that the people must not be irritated. The viceroys are commanded to do away with what will cause friction and needless trouble.

The decree declares that if any are "Found out in their old tricks" and "Filling their own pockets," they will be severely dealt with.

Minister Conger also sends a proclamation of the viceroy of Chi-Li in which the people are warned against carrying arms. Reference is made to the Boxers troubles and the viceroy says old scores must not be raked up. "The people and the Christians must not retaliate against each other," concludes the proclamation, "but forever be at peace with each other. Tremble and obey!"

DATES NOW KNOWN.

President Roosevelt to Be in Des Moines September 30, 2 to 4 P. M.

Des Moines, Aug. 14.—At last it can be definitely announced that President Roosevelt will visit Des Moines this fall. He will be here September 30, and will remain in the city two hours—from 2 to 4 in the afternoon. From here the president will probably go to St. Louis to speak at the meeting of the League of Republican clubs. Governor Cummins, also on the program at the St. Louis meeting, will accompany him south.

For over a month it has been considered probable that the president would visit Des Moines on his western itinerary. Only yesterday, however, was it definitely known that he would come and the day and hour of his arrival. The present information comes through authentic Washington sources.

Treasures for University.

Iowa City, Aug. 15.—Prof. C. C. Nutting received four boxes of very valuable material from the Hawaiian seas. The collection comprises the birds, corals and ethnological specimens he collected while abroad. The series of albatrosses he secured on the island of Laysan has no duplicate in America. The Smithsonian museum at Washington, D. C., and the Leland Stanford university will receive similar collections later—as they were represented in the expedition—but no other museums in the United States will have their equal. Prof. Nutting says the series is of inestimable value from a scientific standpoint.

Senator Berry Has Broken Arm.

Indianola, Aug. 16.—Former State Senator W. H. Berry had his left arm broken yesterday while inspecting the new building of the Conservatory of Music at Simpson College. Senator Berry was walking about at the building, which is not yet finished, when he slipped and was thrown heavily to the ground, breaking his left arm a short distance above the wrist. He was badly bruised by the fall, and also suffered a slight gash across the face.

NAVAL BATTLE FOUGHT.

Gunboat Boyaca Captured by Colombian Insurgents.

San Jose de Costa Rica, Aug. 16.—News has reached here from the camp of the Colombian revolutionists in the Agua Dulce district that after a naval engagement the Colombian government gunboat Boyaca was captured by the Colombian revolutionists. Three hundred government soldiers and Generals Ortiz and Henao and supplies of munitions of war and provisions were captured with the Boyaca. The Colombian revolutionists also are said to have secured a gasoline launch which was in the government service.

According to advices received here from the isthmus the Boyaca left Panama July 29 with 300 troops of the Colombian government on board, destined to reinforce the command of the government, General Morales Berti at Augu Dulce. The Boyaca was said to have been attacked by the revolutionary fleet and obliged to retreat, since when nothing has been heard of the vessel on the isthmus.

One Thousand Persons Drown.

London, Aug. 16.—In a dispatch from Hong Kong the correspondent of the Daily Express says there have been terrible floods in Kwang Si province in which a thousand persons were drowned. Several houses collapsed at Hong Kong and twenty persons were drowned.

BOER GENERALS GIVEN OVATION.

Famous Generals Reach London on Their Way to United States.

London, Aug. 16.—Generals Botha, DeWet and Delarey arrived at Southampton this morning and met with a great reception from government officials and the public. Soon after landing they boarded the steamship Nigeria, where Joseph Chamberlain, the colonial secretary; Earl Roberts and General Lord Kitchener greeted them. They were also introduced to Mrs Chamberlain and Lady Roberts, with whom they chatted for some time. General De Wet, in conversation here, confirmed the statement that he and his companions will visit the United States before returning to South Africa.

The Boer generals reached London in the course of the afternoon and were loudly cheered in the streets. Asked why they had declined the government's invitation to witness the naval review, the visitors remarked that they were "too tired after the long war and needed a rest."

General De Wet's secretary stated tonight that the Boer generals had accepted an invitation to visit King Edward at Cowes tomorrow. Afterwards he said the generals expected to give out a statement of their views and plans. The main object of their tour was the collection of a fund for the families of the Boers who died in behalf of their country. He added that a circular would be drafted clearly stating the Boer case to the British public.

RECENT OUTBREAK.

Moros From Barcolod Surprise American Outpost and Murder Two.

Manila, Aug. 17.—The Moro situation in Mindanao is considered critical. It is believed that American troops will soon move against Bacolod, where the recent murder of two men of the Twenty-seventh infantry was plotted.

A small party of Moros surprised an outpost of the Twenty-seventh at Camp McVicar, Mindanao, August 12, and succeeded in killing two and wounding one American before they escaped.

They were from Barcolod, which has a strong fort and other defences. Bitter opposition to the Americans exists at Barcolod, and Captain John J. Pershing of the Fifteenth cavalry, commanding the American forces at Lake Lanar, has recommended the reduction of the Bacolod fort.

General Chaffee, who left Manila August 12 on a final tour of the southern islands, reached Zambanagoa, island of Mindanao, last Friday.

In a conference with the local commander General Chaffee argued that unless the American forces shall move decisively against the hostiles they will lose the support of the friendly Moros.

AGE OF SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.

Compulsory Law Does Not Apply After Child is 14 Years Old.

Des Moines, Aug. 14.—Attorney General Mullan, in response to a request from State Superintendent Barrett, has passed on a law point in the new compulsory education law. He holds that the reference to children "of the age of 7 to 14 years inclusive" means that they shall have become 7 years old and the law applies until they have completed their thirteenth year and are 14 years old, not until they have completed their fourteenth year. This provision," says Attorney General Mullan, "requires a child in physical and mental condition to attend school from the time he becomes 7 years of age until he reaches the age of 14 years. The language of the section 'to 14 years' cannot be construed to extend beyond the time when the child becomes 14 years of age. The word 'inclusive' following clearly applies to the time intervening between the ages of 7 and 14 years. No other construction can, in my judgment, be placed upon it."

PUSHING THE SCOFIELD CASE.

Des Moines News Insists on Vigorous Prosecutions.

Des Moines, Aug. 14.—The Des Moines Daily and Sunday News is making a strong fight for the prosecution of the murderers of Mabel Scofield, the Peterson Children, and Isaac Finkelstein, insisting that no life is safe while murderers go unpunished. The News is winning great popularity by its policy on this question, and its circulation is rapidly increasing. This is partly due, of course, to its low price of $1.50 a year for both its daily and Sunday editions.

KILLED HIS FATHER.

Son Shoots Father to Save the Life of His Mother.

Ottumwa, Aug. 14.—J. H. Sims, a wealthy former, was shot and killed by his son John, when endeavoring to murder his wife with a butcher knife. The dead man was intoxicated and attacked his wife for a fancied wrong and the son interfered in time to save her life.

An English temperance advocate was once arguing the case of public-house reform. Pressing the matter home he thus addressed Lord Salisbury: "At least, my lord, you will admit that a great increase in the number of drinking places in a given locality is an additional temptation to over indulgence." "Not at all," retorted Salisbury, "If I visit in a home with forty bed rooms I feel no greater inclination to sleep."

Admiral Jouett tells an amusing story of his early days as a cadet. "I was a sociable youngster," he says, "and when I went to my first assignment, the Independence, and saw the Stars and Stripes floating over it, I remembered my mother had taught me that my first duty was to the flag, so I attempted some conversation on this line with the executive officer, who had received me when I came on board, and who was one of the strictest disciplinarians in the navy of that day. 'Silence, sir!' he roared at my first question, his face red with anger; 'silence, sir! Who gave you permission to speak? Let me hear only six words from you while you are on this ship—port, starboard; yes, sir, and no, sir.' And this was my first discipline in the navy."

Couldn't Live Without Them.

New York City, Aug. 18th.—Mr. Charles Back of 64 Rue de la Victorie, Paris, France, relates a most interesting experience:

"Ever since I was about three years of age I have suffered severely with Kidney Disease.

"Last year I spent some time at the baths at Carlsbad (Bohemia), but I came back after five weeks' treatment with a severe pain still in my Kidneys.

"My doctors in Paris and Hamburg could do nothing for me.

"I was obliged to start from Paris to Montreal, Canada, and when I arrived in the Canadian city I was half dead.

"I read an advertisement of Dodd's Kidney Pills in a newspaper there and began to use this remedy and after two days' treatment I felt that my pains were leaving me and in a week I had no pains at all.

"Dodd's Kidney Pills are the most wonderful remedy in the world. I keep them always with me for I believe I could not live without them."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surfaces.

INSIST ON GETTING IT.

Some grocers say they don't keep Defiance Starch. This is because they have a stock on hand of other brands containing only 12 oz. in a package, which they won't be able to sell first, because Defiance contains 16 oz. for the same money. Do you want 16 oz. instead of 12 oz. for same money? Then buy Defiance Starch. Requires no cooking.

At a dinner recently, ex-Speaker Thomas B. Reed gave a definition of fame: "It is largely a matter of accident. Being in the right place at the right time, and doing the right thing, or better still, making people think you are doing the right thing, is about all there is to fame."

Funeral services were conducted yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Ell township German Reform church. The sympathy of our community is with the afflicted ones.

No Commercial College in Iowa offers a broader course, or so many splendidly furnished rooms, or such a number of practical, thorough, experienced teachers, as U. I. U. Commercial College of Fayette. Every young man on the farm doubles his efficiency and influence by a thorough Business course. For description of our whole plans, write G. A. Oliver.

The Chicago Weekly Inter Ocean is the only weekly newspaper published in Chicago in connection with the great daily papers. It contains a judiciously selected summary of the news of the nation and world, the best stories, home, farm, women's, and other special departments, and fair, patriotic, able editorials, written from a Republican view point. It is by far the best general newspaper of the western states. The regular price for the Weekly Inter Ocean is $1.00 and for the TIMES $1.00, but subscriptions will be received at this office for the two papers in combination for one year for only $1.45.

Mrs. Brockmeyer and daughter, Matie, of Colesburg, Ia., are visiting this week with Mrs. Schwichtenberg and the Neef children.

The Britt papers are still scraping over fireworks and jassacks. It may be fun for the writers, but we doubt very much if it interests their readers.

Klemme and Britt are scheduled to play a game of ball at Garner on Illinois Day, Sept. 3. Each team has won a game and this is to be the "rubber." No doubt it will be an interesting game.

The new sheds of the Northern Lumber Co. are just about completed, and this week the office building was moved west and north to the line of the lots. Nels will soon have things as neat as a pin around there.

The Teachers' Review Term at the Nora Springs Seminary promises to be as popular as ever. The high grade work by instructors who have been engaged in institute work and who know the needs of teachers, together with delightful surroundings and low expenses, make the Seminary an ideal school for teachers desiring to review their work for a higher grade of certificate.

Married, at the residence of J. P. Larson in Klemme, Tuesday evening, August 19, at nine o'clock, Mr. Wm. Terhufen and Miss Nellie Benbo, Justice of the Peace Butterfield officiating. The contracting parties in this event are well known here and are well thought of by all their acquaintances. The Times joins with their host of friends in wishing them a happy life.

Last Saturday evening's passenger run into a steer belonging to Aug. Barz, about one mile out of town, while they were running at full speed. The front trucks of the engine were derailed and the engine run quite a little distance on the ties. It was a narrow escape from a bad wreck, and the train was delayed about half an hour. Fragments of steer were scattered along the track for half a mile.

The wrestling match between Wm. Terhufen, of Klemme, and J. H. Gallentin, of Clarion, held in the Woodman Hall last Saturday evening was declared a draw, for reasons best known to the participants. Gallentin got the first fall in three-quarters of a minute, Terhufen securing the second in seven and one-half minutes. After wrestling about five minutes on the third round the wrestlers agreed between themselves to call it a draw, for reasons we are unable to give. A fair sized crowd was in attendance and the exhibition was good.

LOCAL OVERFLOW.

Mrs. Kluckhohn was down from Garner Tuesday.

Our citizens were treated to a fistic encounter Tuesday. No one was killed.

J. S. Pritchard, of Belmond, visited at the home of John Hartfelder last week.

Joe Nissen was helping Frank Kluckhohn in the store the fore part of the week.

John Hartfelder sold and delivered to J. S. Pritchard a fine bunch of steers last week.

Chris Lau and Henry Schoper were angling for the finny tribe in Clear Lake last Thursday and Friday.

Mrs. W. J. Suckow and two daughters, of Ft. Dodge, visited this week at the home of Geo. Kluckhohn.

Fred Baumgartner and family were down from Garner Sunday visiting at the home of John Baumgartner.

Customers are coming twenty miles to buy harnesses from Frank Gruetzmacher. They know where to get first class goods.

Misses Bessie and Orphy Gray, from Illinois, are visiting this week at the homes of J. S. Hartfelder and Henry and Jay Greggs.

Root for Klemme at Garner next Wednesday. Klemme goes up against Britt, the strongest team in the county if they beat Klemme.

Fred Ridder, Chas. Gruetzmacher, G. W. Kluckhohn and H. E. Peitzke are taking in the sights of the State Fair at Des Moines.

A number of Klemme sports took in the ball game at Goodell Sunday between Belmond and Meservey, the former winning by a score of 6 to 2.

The ladies of the Germantown Epworth League will render a program Aug. 31, 1902, at the German M. E. church assisted by Rev A. Ganger, of Garner. Everybody cordially invited.

Don't forget the Hancock County Fair to be held at Britt Sept., 16, 17 and 18. Help the fair by your attendance and make an exhibit. A number of good attractions have been secured.

Klemme rooters should accompany our ball team to Garner next Wednesdayand help them defeat Britt. The Britt team will have the support of the Britt and Garner rooters and our boys need some encouragement.

"The Four Weeks Trial Offer Free" made by the Nora Springs Seminary and Business College is no "catch" to win students. It is a bona fide offer. Its representatives do not sell scholarships and take your note, and then collect your money for a year's tuition whether you get the benefit of the tuition or not. The Business College does not give written contracts guaranteeing positions, which is the practice of educational sharks. The eleven years of success with a clean honest record for open manly dealing is its best advertisement. You can depend on getting in the Seminary, Business College and School of Music just what they advertise or your money will be cheerfully refunded.

All Were Saved.

"For years I suffered such untold misery from bronchitis," writes J. H. Johnston, of Broughton, Ga., "that often I was unable to work. Then, when everything else failed, I was wholly cured by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. My wife suffered intensely from asthma, till it cured her, and all our experience goes to show it is the best Croup medicine in the world." A trial will convince you its unrivalled for throat and lung diseases. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00, Trial bottles free at Harr's.

DOINGS IN AND NEAR ELL CENTER

Dished up to Suit all Classes by Our Special Correspondent.

Prairie chickens will be ripe next Monday.

Tom Marshall drove over to Britt Sunday.

Miss Cora Lawhorn visited friends in Garner last week.

Otto and Jennie Frei were callers at H. Lawhorn's Sunday.

John Hazard of Garner, attended the hop at E. Braund's Friday evening.

Frank Flint had a valuable colt ruined last week by getting cut in a barb wire fence.

The Center School will convene next Monday with Miss Winnie Christie as teacher.

Threshing is anything but a pleasant job this year. Nearly every machine gets stuck in the mud and has to be hauled out with horses.

TAKEN UP—On my place, 10 head of 2 year old cattle. Owner can have the same by paying damages and paying for this notice. H. H. BURMAN.

A Necessary Precaution.

Don't neglect a cold. It is worse than unpleasant. It is dangerous. By using One Minute Cough Cure you can cure it at once. Allays inflamation, clears the head. soothes and strengthens the mucous membrane. Cures cough, croup, throat and lung troubles. Absolutely safe. Acts immediately. Children like it. J.L.Harr.

A boy was recently asked in one of the schools whether George Washington was a soldier or a sailor. "A soldier," the boy promptly replied. "How do you know he was not a sailor?" the teacher asked. "Cause I saw a picture of him crossing the Deleware and any sailor would know enough not to stand up in a boat."

Shatters All Records.

Twice in hospital, F. A. Gulledge, Verbena, Ala., paid a vast sum to doctors to cure a severe case of piles, causing 24 tumors. When all failed, Bucklen's Arnica Salve soon cured him. Subdues inflamation, conquers aches, kills pains. Best salve in the world. 25c at Harr's drug store.

A newspaper whose columns overflow with advertisements of business men has more influence in attracting attention to build up a town than any other agency that can be employed. People go where there is business. Capital and labor go where there is an enterprising community. No power on earth is so strong to build up a town so well as a paper well patronized, and its power should be appreciated. The man who overlooks his town paper injures himself by injuring his town and townsmen.—wanamaker.

His Sight Threatened.

"While picnicking last month my 11-year-old boy was poisoned by some weed or plant," says W. H. Dibble, of Sioux City, Ia. "He rubbed the poison off his hands into his eyes and for a while we were afraid he would lose his sight. Finally a neighbor recommended DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve The first application helped him and in a few days he was as well as ever." For skin diseases, cuts, burns, scalds, wounds, insect bites, DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is sure cure. Relieves piles at once. Beware of counterfeits. J. L. Harr.

If you talk about there being better land than there is in this county every potato slyly winks its eye, every cabbage shakes its head, every beet gets red in the face, every onion feels stronger, every grain field is shocked, every cob of corn sticks up its ear, and every foot of land kicks.

One Fare to Boston and Return

Via the C. R. I. & P Ry. For the Brotherhood of St. Andrew Convention at Boston, Mass., October 9-12, round trip tickets at ONE FARE rate will be on sale at all C. R. I. & P. stations in this territory. This will be a good opportunity for you to visit the east, and a good return limit may be secured. See C. R. I. & P. agents for particulars. oct12

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS

Our people still continue to show their faith in Foxhome land. Last week H. H. Porter bought 560 acres near that place, and G. H. Oxley traded his 20 just south of Corwith for 240 acres.—Corwith Hustler.

On Wednesday real estate in Crystal Lake changed hands "awhooping" In the forenoon Chas. Lawler traded his residence property to W. C. Harding for his implement business, and in the afternoon W. C. sold his newly acquired property to John Opperman. All parties interested seem perfectly satisfied with their deals.—Crystal Lake Reflector.

Geo. Dempsey has disposed of his entire property interests here to the real estate firm of Walker & Bailey, of Redfield, S. D. He gets in exchange 479 acres of lank in Spink county, S. D. Possession is given within 30 days. Mr. Dempsey and family will move to Mason City, and for the next few months will deal in real estate for the firm he traded with. The new owners of the furniture store, being non-residents, will probably not retain possession any length of time.—Kanawha Record.

A farmer near Kanawha has a son Dale, who is very hard to get out of bed mornings. When called the boy has a habit of answering, "Yes sir," and going to sleep again. A few mornings ago the father called him, got the usual "Yes sir," then quietly slipped upstairs, and gave him a lively spanking. It happened that on that night the hired girl was given the boy's room, when the tumult was over the farmer sat down behind the barn and drafted an apology to the hired girl.—Cor. in Kanawha Record.

Threshing has been delayed in this vicinity for about two weeks by the heavy rains. Farmers and Threshermen are begining to feel a little dubius about the small grain. Corn is fine, but if these rains keep up it will be good for nothing but pulp to make a poor grade or paper for newspaper men.—Meservey Messenger.

Threshing has begun in some neighborhoods of this section and from reports the oats crop will yield from 40 to 65 busoels per acre. Wheat is very poor and the yield will not be over 5 bushels per acre. Barley is reported as being an extra crop.—Titonka Topic.

Look Pleasant, Please

Photographer C. C. Harlan, Eaton, O., can do so now, though for years he couldn't, because he suffered untold agony from the worst form of indigestion. All physicians and medicines failed to help him till he tried Electric Bitters. which worked such wonders for him that he declares they are a godsend to sufferers from dyspepsia and stomach troubles. Unrivalled for diseases of the stomach. liver and kidneys, they build up and give new life to the whole system. Try them. Only 50c. Guaranteed by J. L. Harr, druggist.

The Corwith and Woden ball teams will cross bats at Garner in the forenoon of "Illinois Day" and Klemme and Britt in the afternoon. The date is Sept. 3.

Homeseekers Excursions.

Homeseeker's tickets to nearly all points on sale at low rates by Chicago Great Western Ry. on first and third Tuesday of each month, June to October inclusive. For particulars apply to any Great Western agent, or J. P. Elmer, G. P. A., Chicago, Ill. Oct20

Notice of Application For Permit.

In the matter of the application of J. L. Harr, a Registered Pharmacist for a permit to buy, keep and sell intoxicating liquors. September Term. 1902.

To Whom It May Concern:

Notice is hereby given that the application of the undersigned, J. L. ## NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, August 25, 1902.

Private Secretary John Briar of the governor's office returned yesterday form Okoboji where he has been for several days.

Articles of incorporation have been filed with the secretary of state of Reiner Bros., of Keokuk, with a capital of $10,000.

The Citizens' State bank of Promise City, Wayne county, has been chartered, capital $25,000. J. A. Bradley, president; F. M. Hazlewood, cashier.

A certificate was issued yesterday by the auditor of the state for the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance company of San Francisco to write health insurance in this state.

Wednesday the state auditor chartered the Rockford State Bank of Floyd county with a capital of $25,000. R. M. Potter is president of the new institution and B. A. Wallace is cashier.

Hon. E. A. Dawson, of Waverly, railroad commissioner, is back from Minneapolis where he has been for several days with his wife who is at the bedside of her sick mother. Mrs. Dawson's mother is not expected to live. Mrs. Dawson is an only daughter and the two have been almost inseparable.

Secretary Greene of the state horticultural society has gone to Asheville, N. C., where he will attend the national meeting of the American florists. Mr. Greene will be in St. Louis today as a delegate from the state horticultural society to the meeting of the Mississippi Valley Apple Growers. The organization is planning on a national meeting of apple growers at an early date.

The appointment of James Horrabin to the position of deputy revenue collector, has been the bane of existence to the members of the board of public works today. Mr. Horrabin's new position leaves vacant his former position as sewer inspector and candidates by the score have been calling upon Messrs. Hanger and Stout, the members of the board. The appointment will probably not be made until September 1. Among those who are said to be candidates for the position are H. G. McElderry, S. C. McQuimby, J. W. Campbell and George Witmer.

Col. J. D. Palmer, railroad commissioner, John Harriott, lieutenant governor, and Judge Prouty, have gone to Lovilia to attend the reunion of old soldiers. This was planned to be a big affair, lasting today and tomorrow. Governor Cummins is supposed to have gone also. Among others who were on the bill for speeches were Father Nugent, Rev. Frank Evans, John F. Lacey, N. E. Kendall, Cato Sells, Lafe Young, John P. Reese, Rev. Jesse Cole, Rev. S. R. Furgeson, J. C. Babry and George Woodson. The band of the Fifty-first Iowa regiment in the guards was to furnish the music.

The family of the late Senator J. F. Wilson of Fairfield, has turned over to Charles Aldrich for preservation in the state historical department, the manuscript written by President Lincoln of his speech of acceptance of the second nomination for the presidency. The speech which was brief was written out by President Lincoln and delivered in response to a notification from a committee from congress after the electoral vote had been canvassed. Senator Wilson was one of the committee and secured the manuscript, which has remained in the family up to this time. The manuscript is an interesting one and is highly prized by Mr. Aldrich.

Out of a class of forty-five who took the last examination before the state pharmacy commission eighteen were successful and will receive state certificates. The successful candidates include G. O. Wilhelm of Whiting, Harry E. Williams of Solon, Rex L. Shannon of Shellsbery, W. A. Richards of Bristow, John Plitt of Wapello, A. Z. Miner of Pleasantville, J. A. Mathews of Mt. Union, Arthur Lee of Gladbrook, N. J. Lease of Crawfordsville, A. W. Larson of Spencer, Chas. F. Long of Whitten, Clarence R. Jeffries of Des Moines, Frank H. Grimm of Dubuque, S. P. Clark of Ogden, W. H. Cooley of Jesup, J. M. Caldwallder of Ottumwa, R. S. Alexander of What Cheer and H. Clay Adams of Keota.

Wednesday Hon. Chas. Aldrich of the state historical department, received from Dr. J. F. Kennedy, secretary of the state board of health, a complete record of vital statistics in Iowa covering the period from 1880 up to the present year, and embracing the most complete record of marriages, births and deaths in the state that is in existence. There are over two hundred volumes in the contribution which Mr. Aldrich looks upon as one of the most valuable that could be added to the state's present collection of biographical and genealogical works on Iowa. These records have been gathered by the state board of health according to law, but the board is not made their custodian and it is thought best to place them in the custody of the curator of the historical department. The statistics cover every county in the state and in some instances represent those of counties where the original records have been burned. There are hundreds of thousands of names included in them. Hereafter all such statistics compiled by the board will be turned over to the historical department.

Bees and Ants.

Bees will place their honeycombs in any place regularly or irregularly shaped, and when they come to corners and angles they seem to stop and consider. Then they vary the shape of the cell so that the space is exactly filled. It could not be done more satisfactorily if the whole thing had been worked out on paper beforehand. Ants make hard and smooth roads and drive tunnels compared to which man's efforts in making such things are insignificant.

A bright little fellow who had only been asleep five minutes had a dream that covered a period of nearly a week. On being told how long a time he had slept he exclaimed: "My goodness, but it takes an awful long time to sleep five minutes!"

An Ancient Engine.

The oldest steam engine now at work is believed to be the Newcomen winding engine at Farme colliery, Ruthergien, near Glasgow. It was built in 1809, and has worked continuously to the present time.

MAN DRAGGED TO DEATH.

Joseph Palmer Meets Untimely Fate at Colfax—Team Became Frightened and Ran Away Dragging Him to Death—Other Iowa News.

Newton, Aug. 22.—Joseph Palmer, a farmer living near Colfax, was dragged to death by his horses and met a horrible death. Palmer had gone to the pasture to catch a team of horses and he had haltered them and tied the straps together when in some unknown way the straps became tangled around the man's body, dragging him to death. He was found in the pasture and probably had also been kicked by the horses.

TWICE POISONED FAMILY.

Ray Eisminger, Aged 13, Confesses to Putting Strychnine in Food.

Oskaloosa, Aug. 25.—Ray Eisminger, a 13-year-old boy, confessed to having twice poisoned the food of the family of a farmer named Anderson, who live in Harrison township, this county. The boy is a son of Mrs. Charity Eisminger of 812 South D street, Oskaloosa. The lad, a bright, cheerful little fellow, has been working for the Andersons. Twice the family has been poisoned through their food, neither attempt resulting fatally. Suspicion directed itself toward the Eisminger boy and he was subjected to a rigid cross-examination. The boy was very loath to tell his story in the presence of his mother, but by slow degrees it was drawn from him and was substantially as follows:

The Andersons had a bottle of strychnine in the house which they had bought some time ago to poison some troublesome crows. They kept the bottle in the lower part of the clock and almost forgotten of its existence. The boy said that after the family was gone he had on both occasions taken the bottle and put poison in their food.

When asked if he knew the stuff in the bottle would kill he said he did. He answered "no" when asked if he wanted to kill Mr. Anderson or his family, and said that he had nothing against any of them, and they treated him well. He would give no reason for attempting to poison the family, and hardly seemed to know what he did it for.

The inference is that his mind has become morbid through reading. He has been much interested in the Tracey trouble and in other criminals who have become notorious from time to time. He will be brought before Judge Scott when he arrives next Monday and will probably be taken to the reform school.

STATE TICKET AT WATERLOO.

Prohibtionists Name Full State Ticket.

Waterloo, Aug. 21.—The prohibition state convention today made the following nominations: Secretary of state W. W. Howard, Marshalltown; auditor of state, John W. Leedy, Waverly; treasurer of state, E. P. Fetter, Oakland; railroad commissioner, E. H. Albright, Des Moines county; attorney general, J. B. Ferguson, Cedar county; judge of supreme court, E. A. Graves, Mitchell county; reporter supreme court, W. P. Briggs, Hartley.

Nominees for congress: First district, W. C. Shepard, Fairfield; Second district, Francis Bacon, Wilton Junction; Third district, John A. Earl, Waterloo; Fourth district, D. McGregor, Mason City; Fifth district, Malcom Smith, Cedar Rapids; Seventh district, J. D. C. Mcfarland, Des Moines; Tenth district, W. D. Elwell of Bancroft.

The nominations for congress in the sixth, eighth, ninth and eleventh districts will be made later.

AN INVESTIGATION DEMANDED.

Family Is Not Satisfied W. J. Elliott Committed Suicide.

Marshalltown, Aug. 23.—While Coroner F. P. Lierle, upon his visit to Liscomb Thursday night to investigate the circumstances surrounding the death of William J. Elliott, who is supposed to have suicided by taking strichnine, decided that no inquest was necessary, relatives and the most intimate friends of the dead man insisted that one be held. The coroner began the inquest at about 12 o'clock, and did not complete it until late this afternoon.

The circumstances of "Dofe" Elliott's death are rather peculiar and there is considerable doubt in the minds of the relatives of the dead man that he really died by his own hand, and by poison. There was no indication whatever that Elliott had died by strychnine poisoning, even though the empty bottle was found in his pocket.

Relatives are insisting that a post mortem be held in order that it may be ascertained to a surety whether or not the body contains strychnine. If the poison is found to exist it will clear up any surmise that the man might have been murdered.

Meeting of the German Editors.

Des Moines, Aug. 20.—The German editors and publishers of Iowa will hold their annual meeting in Des Moines September 5, 6 and 7.

There are forty German papers in this state. Thirty of there will doubtless be represented by the editors and publishers themselves and not by proxies. There are many bright men connected with the various German papers of the state and most of these will be present at the meeting of the association.

The convention will be called to order by President Joseph M. Elboeck on Friday morning. In the afternoon the visiting editors will taken in carriages for a drive through the principal parts of the city. The drive will be conducted under the auspices of the commercial exchange.

Policeman Disciplined for Brutality.

Waterloo, Ia., Aug. 25.—Officer Monan, a patrolman, has been dismissed from the force for the brutal clubbing of Henry Emerson, an Illinois Central car repairer. Emerson was quite badly bruised as the result of the strenuous encounter, a gash fully three inches long being cut in his scalp and another in his cheek.

JURY VENIRE.

E. W. STANTON TO ACT.

No Successor to Beardshear Will Be Selected at Present.

Ames, Ia., Aug. 25—Prof. E. W. Stanton will be acting president of the State colloge until a successor to the late lamented Beardshear shall have been chosen. This much was decided at the meeting of the board of directors. No further definite action was taken in the matter of the presidency and the board has no candidate prominently in view. Considerable business in connection with the college was transacted at the meeting, which lasted until 1 o'clock this morning.

Mrs. Beardshear will continue to occupy the president's house until the new president is formally elected.

The corner stone in the main building, the last portion of which recently burned down, was examined by the board. It was on the stone balustrade leading up to the main building. It was inscribed with the name of the foreman of stone cutters, W. H. Dale, and with the date, 1867. Surrounded by plaster of paris was found an old-fashioned candy jar, and in this was a copy of the fifth annual catalogue of the college, a copy of the first report to the legislature and a copy of the Des Moines Register of Wednesday, August 28, 1867, and an old shin plaster of unknown denomination.

Old Settlers Elect Officers.

Iowa City, Ia., Aug. 25.—The Johnson County Old Settlers' association elected its officers for the coming year at its annual reunion just closed They are:

President—W. H. Buchanan, Solon

First vice president—Isaac Weeber Sharon.

Second vice president— A. E. Swisher, Iowa City.

Third vice president—L. W. Miller Pleasant Valley.

Secretary—Gil R. Irish, East Lucas

Treasurer—H. J. Wieneke, Iowa City.

Addresses were delivered by Lieut Webb Henderson of Jefferson, La., and Rev. Dr. S. N. Fellows and A. E Swisher of Iowa City.

Iowans Prove to Be Heroes.

Eldora, Ia., Aug. 24.—W. S. Porter in a letter to the Enterprise, writes from Colorado of the heroism of two well known Iowa people. Mr. Porter says that in an accident, a runaway stagecoach team, Prof. Hendrixon of the chair of chemistry at Grinnell and Henry Lyman of the class of 1902 at Iowa college and captain of the track teams of 1901 and 1902, both acted with the greatest bravery and assisted the wounded passengers very ably. Mr Hendrixon was unhurt, but Mr. Lyman sustained a sprained ankle.

EXCITING THIEF HUNT.

Man Who Took Glen ohnson's Mules Stands Off a Posse With a Gun.

Kellerton, Aug. 23.—Great excitement was caused here by an unsuccessful hunt for a horse thief. The latter drove through here with a team of mules, which it has been learned were stolen in Atlantic. He traded the mules to Glen Johnson for a team of horses, receiving $38 to boot. The marshal here learned about this time that the mules had been stolen. The thief set out for Tuskego, hotly pursued. He drew a revolver and threatened to shoot several individuals who tried to stop him. At Tuskego he unhitched the horses, mounted one of them and escaped into the timber. He has not been found, and it is believed he has made his escape.

ANOTHER SHOTTING AFFRAY.

Henry Miller Shoots at Spot Wilson Late this Afternoon and Wounds Him in Calf of Leg—He was Mad Because Wilson was Trying to get His Job.

Des Moines, Aug. 20.—Henry Miller, a hack driver in the employ of the Wells Livery Co., shot and wounded "Spot" Wilson, another hack driver at 2:15 this afternoon, inflicting a slight flesh wound in the left leg above the knee. The shooting took place on Fourth street and grew out of a quarrel between the men. Wilson was unable to walk and was taken to the police station in the patrol wagon. Miller was arrested and locked up. He made no attempt to escape and submitted to arrest without protest. Neither of the men were disposed to make a statement concerning the cause that led up to the quarrel and subsequent shooting. Wilson and Miller are both well known hack drivers, each having been engaged in the business for about nine years.

ANOTHER VICTIM ANTI-VICE CRUSADE

BADLY BEATEN BY OFFICER

Because He Insisted on Standing Still on the Street—Had Quarreled With Mayor Brenton Who Held a Grudge Against Winburn.

Des Moines, Aug. 25.—Because ex-Policeman William Winburn would not "move on" when he received the order from a former brother officer last night, he was placed under arrest by two officers and badly beaten with a "billy" in the struggle that attended it. He was then thrust into jail and Mayor Brenton and Chief of Police Brackett refused to file a charge against him so as to enable a magistrate to order his release under bonds. He was therefore compelled to lie in jail over night and nurse the severe scalp wounds which a surgeon had dressed.

Winburn and Isaac Finkelstein were the two officers who had a falling out with Mayor Brenton and Chief Brackett, and the fact that they both suffered injury occasioned considerable comment on the street last night. As in the case of Finkelstein, Winburn had resorted to the courts to settle his alleged grievances and that he was compelled to resign from the police force or accept a night beat because he had insisted upon "pulling" the Midway saloon in Whitechapel after the chief had refused to act upon his report to the effect that it was violating the law, and commanded him to cease meddling.

Winburn Was Orderly.

Many who witnessed the affair last night, agreed that Winburn was quiet and orderly, perfectly sober and molesting no one when the officer commanded him to move on.

"I'm not doing any thing out of the way, and I won't move on," responded Winburn. "I think the chief told you to run me off the street and to jail me on the first opportunity," he is reported to have said.

Then the fight commenced in which Winburn received the ugly wounds. The police claim he made a motion to draw a weapon. Winburn's brother says he went to the mayor after the trouble, and asked that a physician be furnished to dress the wounds. He says the mayor remarked that Winburn got what he deserved as he had evidently been spoiling for trouble. Efforts to induce the mayor and the chief to file a charge against Winburn and thereby make it possible for him to put up a bond and get out of jail, were futile.

PIONEER HERIONE DEAD.

Mrs. W. L. Church Shot an Indian in Repulsing Attack.

Webster City, Aug. 25.—Word has just been received here of the death of Mrs. W. L. Church at Blaine, Wash. Mrs. Church was one of the early settlers of Hamilton county and was widely known and esteemed by everybody. She was the mother of Mrs. W. J. Birrnatzki, of this city.

Mrs. Church had the distinction of having shot and killed an Indian. About the time of the Spirit Lake massacre the church family were living in a little settlement which is now Jackson, Minn. Upon hearing of the depredations of the red men these half dozen families assembled in a double log cabin and prepared to defend themselves. One day an attack was made upon the cabin. Four of the inmates were wounded, one mortally. With the men wounded and bleeding lying around her, Mrs. Church seized a gun and prepared to resist further attack. Suddenly seeing an Indian dodging from tree to tree she opened fire and the Indian fell. A memorial tablet upon the walls of the Hamilton county court house commemorates the heroism of the bravest and truest of women, one whose life was a perpetual benediction to those about her.

DOOR KNOCKED HIS SCALP.

Concussion Resulting from Running Against a Swinging Door Renders Him Unconscious.

George Perry, employed coaling engines in the switch yards of the Great Western, south of the 'Coon river, had his scalp badly torn this morning by a swinging door which slammed open suddenly and struck him in the head. The concussion knocked him senseless, but fortunately he fell in the tender of the engine and escaped other injuries. He was taken to his home near the corner of Seventh and Walnut, where he was attended by Dr. Hanawalt, the company physician.

RURAL MAIL CARRIERS MEET.

State Association Coming Wednesday —Meet at City Hall.

Des Moines, Aug. 25.—The Iowa Rural Mail Carriers' association will meet in Des Moines Wednesday, Aug. 27, at the city hall at 10 a. m. The call has been issued by B. Pitts Wood, chairman of the executive committee. He says the attendance will be large and that postmasters are invited. Topics of interest to carriers will be discussed and officers elected.

Beetle Collection for Iowa City.

Iowa City, Ia., Aug. 25—Prof. H. W. Wickham of the department of zoology has returned to the university with the finest collection of beetles ever brought into Iowa' museum. Indeed, there is none to equal it in the country. Professor Wickham secured the collection at great personal sacrifice and by enduring much privation in the Death Valley region of California and Nevada during the past summer. He traveled frequently without finding water for thirty and forty miles over vast tracts of old-time lake beds, now carbonate of soda fields. The alkali fairly ate the skin off his feet.

He covered 20,000 square miles of territory in the Sierra Nevada on foot, crossing Kearsage Pass.

Moir Awarded Medal.

Idora, Ia., Aug. 25.—At a meeting of the Hardin county high school athletic general council the board of governors rescinded the action of a former sitting and awarded the individual gold medal for most points in competition to Will J. Moir, Jr., of the Eldora high school. Mr. Moir was protested on account of qualifications in school work, it being claimed that he did not take the required amount to be a regular student.

"UNCLEAN BIRDS," BY WATTERSON.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 25.—Henry Watterson, of the Louisville Courier-Journal, writes an editorial headed "A Flock of Unclean Birds." It says:

"The four hundred contrive to keep themselves constantly before the public. Yet, somehow, it is their scandals, not their benefactions that advertise them. But yet it was the Fair tragedy in France that recalled infelicities and vulgarities of a family, which, except for its millions, would have decorated criminal instead of social annals of its time.

"Today's sensation relates to the Van Alens, an offshoot of the Astors. It will be remembered that one J. J. Van Alen, an ambitious donkey with dollars, bought in advance of a representative of Grover Cleveland—in case he was elected—the Italian mission, subscribing, it is said, fifty thousand of the Astor shekels to the campaign funds. The story got out and characteristically, Cleveland, having plenty of money, repudiated the deal of his agent, Van Alen losing his mission. This is the same Van Alen whose daughter defied his wishes and married the man of her own selection a few weks ago.

"Now comes the Remington suicide, and we learn that is was all on account of another Van Alen girl, as hinted, on account of an interdiction to another marriage by Van Alen pere. And so it goes. We never hear of the 400 except it be a murder, suicide or divorce. A shot fired into these unclean birds cannot miss hitting an injured husband, a recreant and disgraced wife, or at least a gilded nincompoop like Van Alen senior.'

BLOWN HIGH IN THE AIR.

Wash Cart Runs Over Tin and Terrific Explosion Follows.

St. Louis, Aug. 25.—Wolf Prussia, a street cleaner, was blown several feet in the air by some explosion shortly after noon today. He was pushing his cart near the corner of Ewing avenue and Pine street and one of the wheels struck a tin can lying in the road. There was a flash and a loud explosion and the cart and man went flying. Prussia was thrown some distance and when picked up his abdomen was found to be badly lacerated. He was taken to the city hospital and his condition was pronounced serious.

The police are investigating the accident. From the ease with which the explosion occurred it is thought that the can originally contained nitroglycerine and that a small quantity had been left in the can. Wolf Prussia, the injured man, is about 40 years old.

INNOCENT MEN WOUNDED.

But While Shooting Them Marshal Jones Killed a Desperado.

Checotah, I. T., Aug. 25.—Deputy United States Marshal Frank Jones tonight shot and mortally wounded Sam Baker, whom he was seeking to arrest, and by accident shot and seriously wounded two bystanders, George B. Howard, a prominent citizen, and John Fox, an Indian. A feud has existed between the marshal and Baker for some time owing to the frequent disturbances created by the latter. Baker is a relative of the famous Baker feudists of Kentucky, and he is said to be related to the James boys. He is identified with the Brooks-Riddle feud in the Creek nation, which has resulted in the death of fifty men.

BOY'S TRIPLE CRIME.

William Upshaw Shoots His Father and Stepmother and Himself.

Salem, Mo., Aug. 25.—William Upshaw, 20 years old, who left home after a violent quarrel last spring, returned home at 1 o'clock this morning, broke into the house, shot his fatner through the chest, fired two shots into his stepmother's breast and then blew his brains out on the railroad tracks near their house.

The only cause that can be assigned for the tragedy is that the son was opposed to his father's second marriage and took a bitter dislike to his stepmother. Mr. Upshaw is gradually sinking and is not expected to live, but his wife will recover.

KENTUCKY PENITENTIARY RIOT.

Desperate Attempt Made by Prisoners to get out—Get Possession of Revolvers and Defy the Warden to Touch Them—Citizens in Frankfort Ran to Aid Warden

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 19.—The officials of the state penitentiary and the citizens of Frankfort were thrown into a state of wild excitement today by a riot in the state prison started by an attempt to gain their liberty on the part of three desperadoes—Lafayette Brooks of Morgan county, and Wallace Bishop and T. Mulligan of Kenton county.

Before the riot which began at 6 o'clock and lasted until ten, was quelled and the munitious convicts captured, Bishop was fatally wounded, Mulligan was shot in the shoulder, and a negro convict, Albert Random, of Louisville, whom the desperadoes had placed into service was hit by a rifle ball.

TORNADO LEAVES RUIN.

Passed Along the Niobrara River Last Evening—Was Accompanied by Hail.

Memingtonford, Neb., Aug. 22.—A tornado, accompanied by a terrific rain and hail storm, passed along the Niobrara river, eight miles north of here last night. It passed through a thickly settled country and it is thought to have done a great amount of damage. Owing to the lack of communication, details are lacking, but it is known, however, that a number of buildings in the path of the storm were demolished.

DRANK LAUDANUM AND DIED.

Suicide at Jefferson of William Woolwine, Father of a Family.

Jefferson, Aug. 23.—William Woolwine, after drinking a quart of whisky, became despondent and drank an ounce of laudanum. He died at 2:30 yesterday afternoon. He told members of his family that he had taken the poison and produced the bottle which had held it, but as he had often threatened suicide before little attention was paid to his words at first and it was four hours before medical aid was sent for. He had been a hard drinker. He leaves a nice family consisting of a wife and seven children, the oldest 25 years of age.

TOE NAIL OF SAINT PETER GIVES GRIEF

KING SPOKE DISRESPECTFUL.

Public Generally Denounces Infidelity of King Alfonso.

Should Pretend That He Believed the Story, Anyway—Young King Alfonso Raises a Great Furore by His Independent Manner of Speech.

London, Aug. 25.—However different the views which people of different creeds may take of King Alfonso's contemptuous remarks regarding the sacred relic known as St. Peter's toe nail in the Cathedral at Leon, there seems to be no doubt, judging from late Spanish advices that he has thereby endangered the crown. Even among prominent divines of the English church the opinion is expressed that Alfonso owes it to the nation, over which he reigns, and where the church is the chief bulwark of the throne, to abstain from showing disbelief in a relic venerated by nearly all of his subjects. The authenticity of the relic is said to be well attested, and several of Alfonso's predecessors, notably Ferdinand VII, have made special pilgrimages to do it honor. It was understood, indeed, that one object of King Alfonso's recent journey was to pay reverence to St. Peter's toe nail and then for him in the face of the venerable prelate who has charge of the sacred rule, to burst forth with the remark that it was all nonsense, it is no wonder that the religious feeling of Spain is stirred to its very depths, and that Alfonso's throne may be said to be tottering.

It may be of interest to mention in this connection that during the Spanish-American war the shrine containing this relic was the resort of multitudes who went to pray for the success of the Spanish arms and for the safety of loved ones in the Spanish army or navy. King Alfonso's apologists are inclined to attribute his peculiar conduct to an exuberance of boyish spirits, the king being only 16 and this explanation might well apply to some of his pranks and surprising utterances, but his remarks discrediting St. Peter's toe nail is generally taken in Spain as indicating an unbalanced mind and perhaps even incurable insanity, as it seems impossible that the king, with the careful training that he received from his religious mother, has deliberately accepted the teachings of infidelity.

THE SULTAN TOES THE MARK.

He Humbly Concedes all the Demands of the United States.

Constatinople, Aug. 22. — Through the medium of Izzel Bey, one of the secretaries, the sultan today sent a friendly message to U. S. minister John G. A. Leishman, assuring him that all of the pending claims of the United States would be complied with and begging the minister to resume his visits to the porte. In consequence of these fresh assurances, Mr. Leishman today visited the Grand Vizier Said Pasha, and the minister of foreign affairs, Twefik Pasha. Mr. Leishman and Robert S. McCormick, the United States ambassador to Austria Hungary, will attend the Selamlik tomorrow and will probably have an audience of the sultan.

Von Diedrichs Resigns Post.

Berlin, Aug. 23.—Admiral Von Diedrichs has resigned his post as chief of staff of the navy. He has been succeeded by Vice Admiral Beuchsel. Emperor William in accepting Admiral von Diedrichs' resignation referred in highly flattering terms to his services in Asia and in the reorganization of the navy and appointed him honorary admiral of the naval course.

Admiral Count von Badissen, who was in command of the imperial Hohenzollern when Prince Henry visited the United States, has been appointed second in command of the east Asiatic squadron and will proceed to his post immediately.

Admiral von Iedrichs is the officer who, as vice admiral, was in command of the German squadron of five cruisers in Manila bay at the time Commodore (now Admiral) Dewey was operating against the Spaniards.

SHOOTS HIMSELF AND WIFE.

Murderer Alone Will Die—Bullet Inflicted Only Scalp Wound on His Wife.

Atlantic, Aug. 22.—Charles Knouse, aged 35, is at death's door. Mrs. Knouse is slightly wounded. Both are principles in a shooting affair that occurred at 8 o'clock this morning at the home of a friend in Harlan.

Knouse was drunk. He went to the house where his wife had been stopping. She had left him some time ago on account of alleged cruelty and drunkenness. They had some words when he wiped out a revolver and shot at her. The bullet struck her head and caused a scalp wound only. He evidently thought he had killed her and he turned the revolver against his own head, just back of the ear, and pulled the trigger. The bullet went through his head and he will probably die before night.

FOREST FIRES IN WYOMING.

Goldhill Mining Camp Said to be in Danger—Governor Richards Notifies the Interior Department.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Aug. 1[illegible].—A dispatch from Saratoga says that forest fire conditions are becoming most alarming and that unless the interior department acts promptly much valuable timber, and possibly the mining camp of Goldhill will be destroyed.

The message states that the fire which has been burning on the grand encampment has been extinguished but the one between Saratoga and Goldhill is traveling right along.

Governor Richards has notified the interior department of the danger in Carbon county and asked that special agents be hurried to the scene

Officer Killed in the Street.

London, Aug. 23.—It is reported from Sofia, Bulgaria, that two Bulgarian officers, Major Mirkow and Captain Sebremitch, quarreled in the streets of that city about a woman. The encounter ended in the death of Major Mirkow, who was literally hacked to pieces by a cavalry sword in the hands of the captain.
